Floor: Montina Vinyl Corlon

Arches, columns, intricate ornamentation, and elaborate furnishings are features of Iranian decorating. And a floor of Montina Vinyl Corlon, by Armstrong, provides a richly patterned background for this lavish style.

Montina is made of stone-like chips of vinyl veined with color. They are set in deep, translucent vinyl to create intriguing, pebbly texture.

This textured surface has a practical advantage, too. It helps hide scuffs and heel marks.

Because Montina comes in wide rolls, there's scarcely a seam, wall to wall. Or contrasting colors can be combined in custom designs.

GO AHEAD...GO CADILLAC !

In whatever price range you plan to choose your next car, you should consider Cadillac above all. Naturally, if your choice were unrestricted you would prefer one of Cadillac's eleven exciting new models for 1965. Next best choice would be a late-model, previously-owned Cadillac. For it is recognized that a well-maintained, one-owner used Cadillac is the only real rival of a new Cadillac. And new or used, the one place to choose your Cadillac is at your authorized Cadillac dealer's. His wide selection and reputation for quality are your assurance of motoring satisfaction. Go ahead . . . go Cadillac!

Nobody ever tells you these things

From the kitchen of a famous food editor come helpful answers to some common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

Is it true tomatoes should be ripened in the dark? Yes. If they are put on a window sill, as so many people are inclined to do, they wither and get pulpy. Light is the culprit. Even fairly green tomatoes will ripen to a rich red if stored away from light. A heavy paper bag is just the ticket. Once ripened, refrigerate them. Here are two good tips from Food in England, by Dorothy Hartley. She writes: "To skin (tomatoes) dip them into boiling water 1 minute. Slice with the core to keep in the juices for sandwiches, and against the core to loosen the juices for chopping up and cooking."

When are apricots in season? In June and July only. Fragile and highly perishable, they must be stored in a cool, dry place, out of the light. Refrigeration helps to inhibit aging. Select plump, firm, uniformly golden-yellow fruit; avoid those tinged with green and shriveled. Best to eat them as soon after purchase as possible.

Should raspberries be washed before refrigerating? Definitely not. They are ripe when purchased, very perishable, and water tends to increase mildew. Wash under tepid, running water just before using, lift them out of the water, then drain thoroughly on paper towels, patting them gently to absorb all the water. Always refrigerate, covered, so no air can reach them, in the coldest part of the refrigerator, without freezing. Remember, July is raspberry month.

Are Black Bing and pie cherries interchangeable? No. The sweet, rich "Bings," named after a Chinese worker who developed them in 1875 in Oregon, are best for eating; pie or sour cherries (and sour they are!) are used primarily for cooking. Both types are tree-ripened and therefore very perishable. If not used immediately, they should be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator without freezing. As is true of all fruits, look for cherries that are fresh, firm, and bright. On the market in May, June, and July.

Our readers tell us

After reading how to store parsley (April issue, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL), Mrs. Donald C. Zimmerman, Palo Alto, California, took pen in hand to say: "After thoroughly washing parsley, spinach, lettuce, or anything leafy, I find the best way to get it really dry is to tie it in a large square towel (the lintless flour-sack kind works nicely) and run it through the spin-dry cycle of my automatic washing machine. No water enters the machine during the cycle; it just spins, and, oddly enough, does not bruise the greens." And Mrs. Fred Wilson, Jr., Wallingford, Pennsylvania—also one step ahead of us—suggests: "Before putting the top on the parsley jar, stuff a sheet of paper towelling inside to absorb any moisture." Good ideas we think other readers will appreciate as much as we did. ■

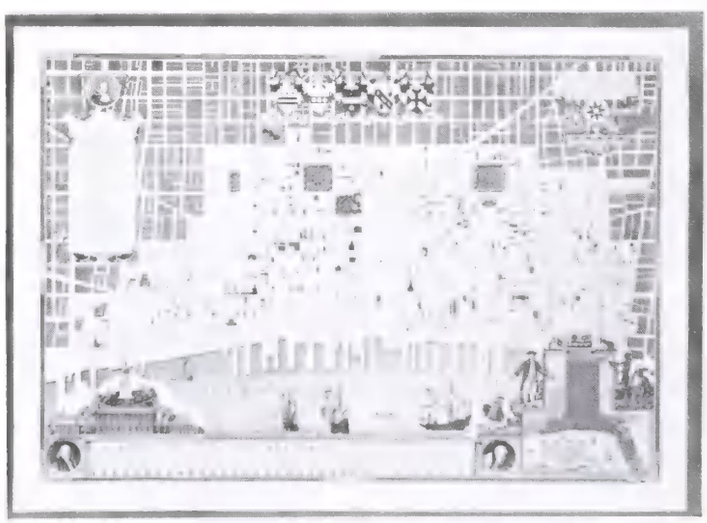
Put the WORLD on your walls

By KATHLEEN FREDRICK



Maps with their intriguing lines and legends—whether revealing the secrets of the craters on the moon, the hidden coves of a tropical retreat, the X spot of buried treasures, or the story behind one's native state—can be eye-catching, inexpensive room decorations.

The potential uses of maps are unlimited: Create a lively entrance hall with dramatically framed and arranged antique maps. Capture the interest of a child by hanging a multicolored markable/washable map in his room. In the den, let maps reflect the special interest of the family history buff, amateur astronomer, language student, or inveterate traveler. Enliven a stark dormitory wall with a fascinating government map (most under $2).

Maps are published in a wide range of color, subject, scale, size, and finish. To assist you in finding the right map, here are map sources with free catalogs.

Decorative and historical maps, colorfully designed and illustrated, form the core of the Hagstrom Co.'s catalog. None of the more than 100 maps costs more than $15. They are available in three versions: plain paper, mounted on linen with wooden rods top and bottom, and lac-

It's beautiful. It's a new Thermador. It's all stainless steel inside. Why? Because stainless steel cannot absorb moisture. Bacteria cannot seep into stainless steel like it can into porcelain or plastic. Stainless steel doesn't crack or chip or peel. And Thermador guarantees the gleaming interior of its dishwashers for ten full years.* No one else does that for you. You can get a beautiful color brochure describing three new models. Each has brilliant stainless steel inside and a choice of handsome exterior finishes in colors or wood. Write: THERMADOR, 5119 District Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90022.

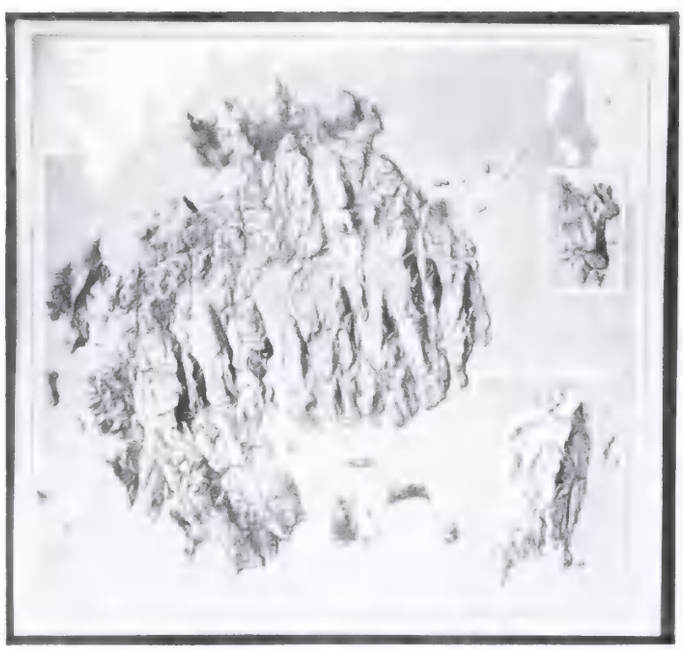
Maps of the U.S., the continents, and the world, printed on latex and laminated with plastic film for use with china crayons and ranging in price from $7 to $25, are the highlights from the American Map Co. Other more expensive mountings on wooden rods, spring rollers, and stiff board backings are available. Send your catalog request to: American Map Co., Inc., 3 West 61st St., New York, N.Y. 10023.

Hammond's plasticized reversible world and U.S. map, ready for hanging, needs only a quick flip for an instant change of scene. Cost: $12.50. This, plus world maps in French and Spanish, is listed in the catalog from: C. S. Hammond & Co., Dept. HB, Maplewood, N.J. 07040. Plain and laminated versions of the major geographical areas, none over $3, are available.



U.S. maps and detailed state maps in a wide price range are published by Rand McNally in a paper sheet, cloth mounted, and on plain board with a washable surface. These, and world and continent maps in the above and frame board mountings, fill out the catalog from Rand McNally & Co., Trade Publ. Div., Box 7600, Chicago 80, Ill.

(even with 800 pounds of people on them)

If four 200-pound men regularly sat on a Kroehler sofa for years, the springs in it would stay as comfortably resilient as ever.

The designer's instinct for comfort as well as fashion, the slope and pitch of seat and back, the cushioning, the everlasting study and test of the Kroehler Comfort Laboratory—all these are vital to the deep-seated comfort Kroehler sofas and chairs give you. But it all begins with the springs.

We use only the best spring steel money can buy, and we make sure it's perfectly tempered, because temper is what keeps spring in springs.

We coil our sofa and chair springs ourselves. We even apply the enamel that protects them from moisture. And we make sure it dries to a shiny, jet black, because if it has a gray look, the temper isn't right and out the spring goes.

There are many important stories like this at Kroehler, and they all add up to this important fact: More people choose Kroehler for their homes than any other brand in the world.

P.S. Home Decorating Help. Send 25¢ for our 24 page Bright Ideas booklet to Kroehler, Box HB-7, 666 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

This innovation electronically gives outdoor temperature reading indoors. Its sensitive thermal sensor can be hung as far off as 200 feet; indoor-outdoor connective is doorbell wire; power source is a hearing-aid battery engaged by dial's push knob when you wish outdoor-weather status. Honeywell Electronic Outdoor Thermometer has elegant walnut case: gold or silver bevel. $39.95. From Marshall Field's, Chicago, Illinois.

Ebony, a newcomer in Minwax woodstain finishes, was probably prompted by prevalent clamor for dusky flooring. The penetrating stain imparts a rich, transparent black without obscuring natural woodgrain. Suitable for paneling, furniture, etc. When the recommended two coats are duly dried, you just add a wax finish, preferably Minwax paste wax. $7.50 per gallon; quart, $2.75, from Plaza Paint Co., 1026 3rd Ave., N.Y. 22.

Set up in attic or basement, this rack creates a spacious summer "closet" for winter woolens. A 62-inch storage expanse is provided by the top shelf; a four-tier shelf unit adjoins the lengthy garment rack; rod at base can be used for shoe storage. A weighty load can be placed on the strong tubular-steel structure. It rides on freewheeling casters; has durable chrome finish. $19.95; 66″ high, 22″ deep. From Taylor Sales Co., Wayne, Pa.

Six pairs of slacks occupy only one-hanger closet area on Bildoral's Swing-Away Slak-Rak. Ribbed rubber sleeve on the rods provides a jostle-proof grip on light- or heavyweight trousers, skirts, knits. Each swings wide for ease in hanging or removing garments; deep sockets lock the rods into closed position. Precision-made of weighty rod steel brassplated. From Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn 1, New York.

NEW MOTORIZED INSECT TRAP

ATTRACTS AND DESTROYS FLYING INSECTS—INCLUDING FLIES AND MOSQUITOES

COMPLETE UNIT IS FULLY U.L. APPROVED

Check These Important Advantages Over Other Units: This has complete UL Approval (not just UL Approved cord). It drops insects into a disposable plastic bag—they can not escape through mesh and you never have to touch them. EXCLUSIVE "trap" door keeps insects in the bag. They can not escape when unit is turned off. Heavy-Duty durable lawn-green case can not rust or corrode.

- QUALITY-MADE BY PENETRAY CORP. of AMERICA
- BACKED BY MFR'S WARRANTY AND OUR GUARANTEE OF SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

This new, completely automatic insect trap attracts and kills scores of species of night-flying insects—including mosquitoes and other annoying pests. No harmful sprays or powders—nothing to harm children, pets, birds. Penetray, one of America's great corporations, has perfected this NEW and IMPROVED insect trap. Effectively lures pesky night-flying insects with its miracle "black light." Draws them into its powerful fan chamber and deposits them into a handy, ESCAPE-PROOF, disposable bag. Exclusive "trap" door keeps insects in bag. They can never escape when unit is turned off.

$19.95 plus $2 PP & Hdlg

Unit weighs only 4½ lbs. But its powerful cyclonic action has amazing capacity. Can destroy thousands of bugs a night. No odors, no danger, no fuss. Use it for summer comfort on lawns, patio or pool-side. Inconspicuous unit is a compact 11" high, 9" diameter. Hangs on pole, side of house, anywhere. Has 2" hanging ring for easy attaching. Lifetime sealed-in motor uses less current than a 40-watt bulb. Comes with 8 Ft. weather-proof cord and season's supply of disposable plastic bags. Order now for more summer comfort and outdoor pleasure. This is a guaranteed, nationally-known and advertised Insect Trap, not an unknown, off-beat brand. Sold elsewhere at $24.95. Our special low price is only $19.95, plus $2 PP. & Hdlg.

GENUINE IVORY RINGS

PRECIOUS ELEPHANT TUSK IVORY RINGS
hand made for us in Hong Kong

Ivory, for thousands of years the symbol of purity, perfection and long life. The elephant was believed to transfer wisdom through his tusks to the possessor of the ivory. The flawless delicate beauty of ivory can be seen in many of the world's most treasured art carvings. Its beautiful patina finish and exquisite "almost white" color is so flattering to the hand. Not mere costume jewelry, its value increases as it becomes more scarce.

Why Can't You Remember?

A noted publisher in Chicago reports there is a simple technique for acquiring a powerful memory which can pay you real dividends in both business and social advancement and works like magic to give you added poise, necessary self-confidence and greater popularity.

According to this publisher, many people do not realize how much they could influence others simply by remembering accurately everything they see, hear, or read. Whether in business, or social functions, there are ways in which you can dominate each situation by your ability to remember.

To acquaint the readers of this magazine with the easy-to-follow rules for developing skill in remembering, the publishers have printed full details of their self-training methods in a new book, "Adventures in Memory," which will be mailed free to anyone who requests it. No obligation. Simply send your request to: Memory Studies, 835 Diversey Parkway, Dept. 222B, Chicago, Ill. 60614. A postcard will do.

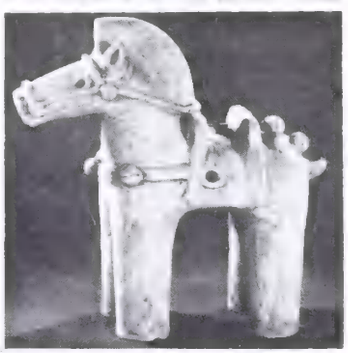
PERSONAL ALARM gives out with an attention-getting blast, which is a great comfort when a nervous Nellie needs help fast. It looks like a pretty heartshaped compact but when you pull the golden chain, out blares a noise that will shatter the nerves of the most hardened mugger. 3¼x2½", tucks into purse or pocket. Order safety alarm at $1 from Breck's, K80 Breck Bldg., Boston, Mass.



MIRACLE-GRO. Want to pep up plants, grow greener grass, triple your blooms? Try Stern's instant-action, water-soluble Miracle-Gro. Balanced 15-30-15 formula can be absorbed quickly through foliage as well as roots, and a mere tablespoon makes a gallon of nutrient. 8-oz. pkg. $1, 1½# $2.25, 5# $5, 10# $9. Add 10% post. (45¢ min.) Stern's, Dept. E, Geneva, New York 14456.

HARD BITTEN FACT. Nail biting is as difficult to curb in adults as in children. But just one coat of Kant-Bite—and a diamond-hard surface forms to check this nervous gnawing. Ideal, too, for preventing splitting, chipping, and breaking of freshly manicured nails. $1.50 a kit. Order from Kant-Bite Co., Box 98, Dept. HB7, Cedarhurst, New York.

DON'T BE A SLOUCH! Get the Pi Peer Shoulder Brace and discover how easy it is to stand up straight. The ventilated 3-ply material with softly padded arm bands provides just-right support for sagging shoulders. It's lightweight, cool, can't be detected under light clothing. Give chest measurement, for man, woman. $4.95. Piper Brace Co., 811 Wyandotte, HB-75H, Kansas City, Mo. 64105.

HANIWA HORSE. In ancient times it was the custom to bury a dead Japanese nobleman with sculptures of his favorite possessions. This hand-made terra cotta horse, copied from the original found in a tomb, has museum importance on a mantel, an open storage wall, a desk. From Haniwa Province, 7" high. $7. From Takashimaya, Inc., 562 Fifth Ave., HB7, New York, N.Y. 10036.

Decorator's Diary

Lovely young ladies cross my threshold with considerable frequency, often looking vaguer than a foggy day, but usually turning out to have an awesome awareness of my profession and a steel-trap self-confidence in their own decorating judgment. They're my legacies, daughters and granddaughters of clients.

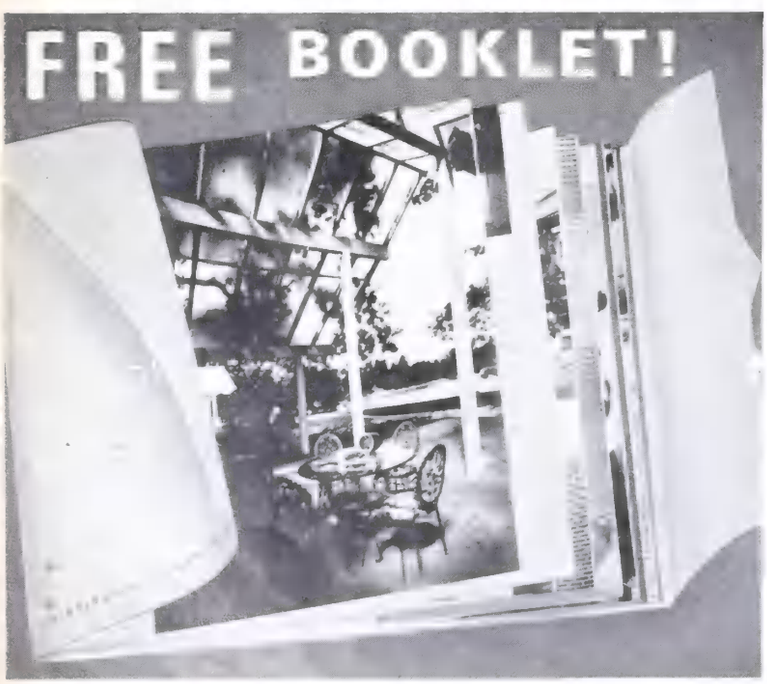
A pert, brown-eyed case in point is Myrna Ravenel Harrison, whose first room-of-her-own I did fifteen years ago. For me it was an exercise in furnishing a child's room with normally small-scale furniture instead of exclusively junior-size things, and so she slept on a French Provincial daybed, had a little poudreuse for a dressing table, and kept her Christopher Robin books in a bread cage that hung on the wall above a slipper chair. I remember the seven-year-old's ecstasy when we faked a canopy over the little bed, simply tracing out the bed's shape in a ruffle taped to the ceiling.

Her excitement, I may say, was almost as notable as my own when I heard my young friend say "Guess what! We're furnishing the living room with my old bedroom furniture."

"There," I commented smugly, "is an object lesson in planning ahead. Clearly you intend to use the daybed as a sofa, and the poudreuse as a lamp table. A marble-slab coffee table and a couple of upholstered chairs added to the slipper chair, and the room is as good as furnished."

"My problem," said Myrna, "is how to convince Robert that it is neither cream puff nor impractical to have a provincial chaise longue in the living room."

"Well, since you've indicated your good breeding by not saying 'lounge,' I'll listen."



"All my life I've longed for one—and now Robert says a chaise belongs in a château boudoir and is hardly tasteful in an apartment living room."

In the bottom drawer of my desk I keep a very special catalog file of good, special-use furniture. I reached down and pulled out a portfolio of furniture pictures from the Karges Furniture Company. (It can be seen in the flesh at their distributor's, Knapp and Tubbs, Inc.)

"Suppose you ask Robert to take a look at No. 4591 with a carved beechwood frame in a fruitwood finish, fitted with loose cushions. He will see that you can have the visual and physical comfort of a chaise longue, but since it's a two-piece one, the living room also gets a scoop-back provincial armchair and a matching ottoman. That amounts to two separate seating units when you push them apart—and a Madame Récamier setup for you when you put them together."—M.G.

who decide to go to Europe as The Season closes . . . elect to transport themselves and to camp (with suitable intervals of luxury). . . . A personal account of the rigors and rewards

It was the best of times. We were out of school, we were on our own, we had no children and no immediate commitments. Our funds consisted of $1,500 in wedding gifts and savings, and $1,000 in a traveling architectural fellowship. It was September: off-season travel rates had just gone into effect, the summer hordes had departed, all Europe would be ours to explore.

We had each visited the major capitals of Europe once before, and we had the benefits of what is optimistically called a liberal education. This was to be a trip in depth, an exploration of the byways we had only glimpsed before. Our greatest advantage was that we would never feel rushed, and could remain in one place as long as it interested us, free to see any corollary sights it suggested. Our only obligation was to use our time well, stretching our funds as far as possible.

We felt we had forever, and outlined an ambitious general program. England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Spain, North Africa, Italy, and Greece could be done in eight months, with discipline and planning. (We were wrong!)

The fellowship made several obscure side-trips necessary in search of very old or very new important buildings, and it became clear to us early in the planning that we needed the freedom and mobility of a car. Although this meant a major expenditure (we had to take out a car loan), it also made possible a form of economy not generally available to those who travel by train and plane—that is, camping out in Europe.

English landscape and a tent-toting Land Rover called Guinevere.

Admittedly, planning to camp in Europe is realistic only if you have enough experience to know you don't hate camping.

Once this way of life was decreed, the complexion of the trip emerged rapidly. We bought a 9′ by 9′ umbrella-frame tent ($35), big enough to sleep, dress, and cook in with some degree of comfort. (We later discovered the French make gaily colored and more compact tents, which might have proved even more practical.) We also took sleeping bags, air mattresses, basic cooking gear (Please turn to page 113)

GOLDEN 50 ANNIVERSARY

THE YOUNG INNOVATORS

Fledglings? Well, many of the young innovators honored here—in their teens, twenties, and thirties—have already arrived. Gifted, dedicated, highly skilled artists, designers, architects, landscape designers; young conductors whose batons command some of this country's greatest orchestras; young painters; even two young chefs who have long won the right to their tall hats. You are invited to visit three homes where the particular faculty of today's Young shows most clearly—decisive, delightful, uncompromising taste. For those just putting a home together, we have selected a portfolio of settings for the table, lamps, accessories, furnishings, and flying carpets which, for this new generation on the move, will keep pace through the miles, and the years, touchstones to a house beautiful.

The Start of A Family Compound

PAINTING BY MARY FAULCONER

The young James Cases, both from large families, are mindful of the joys of family vacation houses, and so have committed their new house in upstate New York to many a future gathering of the clans in holidays to come. Young architect Willis Mills, Jr. (more about him, page 64) designed a mid-century farmhouse and adjacent guest house as an enclave of accommodation for four generations, the start of a new tradition of shared vacations in a family place.

The chestnut-brown house in a wild-flower meadow already has the charm of an ancestral farm. Opposite: Stairway spirals to a balcony that overhangs the living room, creating a snug feeling in a high-ceiling room.

Unabashedly, in the manner of today's direct young people, the Cases have mixed homely materials like concrete block and a stock iron staircase (see preceding page) with oil-rubbed teak, Morocco-bound volumes, Shaker furniture, heirloom rugs. The high-ceilinged, expansive living room—delightfully comfortable for large-family living and entertaining—is canopied by a balcony which creates warm, intimate living space for the Cases when they are alone. The open plan of the kitchen, right, makes it easy to cook for a crowd. Plan and more information, page 105.

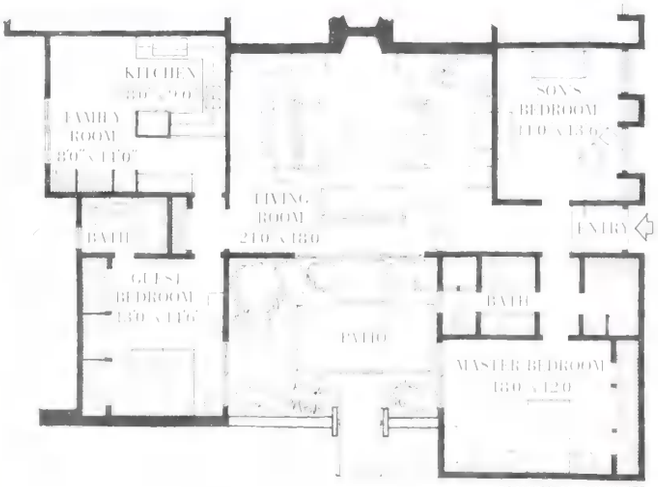
Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lionel Warner, architect and artist in

A Splendid Appraisal of What

Three young and beautiful people live in this young and beautiful apartment in Santa Barbara. Paterfamilias—and designer of the building—is Jack Lionel Warner, who has achieved distinction as an architect after a mere eight years in practice. The lady of the house is Gwendolyn Rowan Warner, a gifted painter whose work has been museum-hung although she's hardly used to being in her twenties. Their comely two-year-old is John, whose great contribution is simply being himself.

We dare not say that this is a typical new-generation ménage—the generation does not brook the word "typical." But the Warners do reflect a certain prevailing mood. One detects a polite lack of reverence for household goods and arrangements older generations held sacrosanct. Not that the Sheffield candelabra and the Ispahan rug are held up to scorn—indeed they and loved and appreciated—but the young refuse to turn them into sacred cows. (Please turn the page)

Goes With What



It's young and fun and the result can be beautifully fresh when you flank a Spanish desk with Altoon drawings, and furnish a hearth with 18th-century porcelain braziers and a chair by Paul Tuttle (see his house, page 62). On the wall, a painting by Mrs. Warner. John's room, above, was sound-deadened with felt applied to the walls by his father. Wallpaper and fabric, below, are designed by young Californians.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY DANFORTH-TIDMARSH

Mr. Warner is the owner-designer of a precedent-shattering condominium which consists of two apartments, each private as a town house and designed to flow around its own patio. (See plan below.) The Warners live in one of these, their patio shared by living room, master bedroom, and guest room, right. This is a little gallery of favorite things: a fine Biedermeier chest, French iron bedsteads. Below right: the charming, controversial plank dining table backs up a sofa.

DRAWING BY JAN WHITE

To the young Warners, the most joyful thing about beauty is its daily usability, so their loveliest things are in the mainstream of their living, never kept under wraps, and frequently used in ways that would outrage a purist. They dare to spread an oriental rug in the patio. Silver candlesticks glimmer on a most unlikely dining table—a series of Clorox-bleached building planks in an iron frame colored with red priming paint. Dining chairs are Venetian, against the golden backdrop of a 17th-century Japanese screen. The mantle mirror is Empire, from a Minneapolis museum; tables are stone fragments.

Along with museum pieces, they've acquired what they suspect others may consider junk, but the shock of the mélange amuses them. In reality this far-flung collection reflects a remarkably self-assured, disciplined taste. So consistent is their judgment that all their choices clearly go together.

Warner possessions are usually joyous discoveries, immediately recognized as their kind of personalism and immediately loved, a happy quality that certainly burnishes the rooms they are used in. Patio gate in the background is a factory grating, achieving elegance in a redwood frame. Cubitan capitals are used indoors and out. Table top below is a brass Indian tray.

The step-down seating area of this one-room cube is flooded with a mountain closeup. Japanese tatami *(woven straw mats) provide back rest for a sofa and cover the step, making it a seating area. Individual choices that amuse their designer-owner: a ship's lantern reading lamp; paintings by the young Basque, Miguel Marina; antique Japanese stencils taped to the window; wood sculpture by Jon de Swart; models of a Bentley and a Bugatti. Right: sofa wall is patterned with a vignetted cornstalk, clipped from a Swiss poster. The long, horizontal slot of a window simultaneously frames a panoramic view of Santa Barbara and reduces sun heat and glare. Paul Tuttle, furniture designer

Young Man on a Mountain

Paul Tuttle, whose furniture has long since indicated that youthful Californians wield weighty design authority, designed this white one-room shell as his studio-sanctum-home. It might be in Provence or on a Greek isle, so similar in character is this hot-pink, sunburned earth with its pines and sable cypresses—and so appropriate to the land is this austere cube.

Its locale is really Montecito, a lofty barrio of Santa Barbara, looking down 1,200 feet on one side to the sea and city. On another side it faces head-on the crinkled mountains of the California coast. It stands aloof, lonely if you will, in a solitary quiet which precisely fills its owner's special needs.

Part of each year Paul Tuttle works in Switzerland. On his return home, he finds the simple house and its deliberate severity a pleasurable contrast to his more baroque European ambience. Its 550 square feet, plaster walls, and polished cement floors require little maintenance from a man who lives alone. Furniture is minimal, but the famous Tuttle "Z" chair is represented, and his glass-top, wrought-iron spiral table accommodates a seating group. Facing the mountains is his table, right, which functions also for dining. Sofas are beds—actually mattresses raised on platforms. Ornaments and accessories are a study in leanness and ruthless selectivity—and as distinctly the owner's own as his fingerprints.

It is not everyone's dish. But that is its significance. It is very much Mr. Tuttle's own dish. So satisfied is he with the way the house integrates with the land and his needs that he refers to it as "this white oneness."

On these four pages, a few of the many up-and-comers concerned with the architecture and art of the home, its setting, its furnishing. Challenged by the technology of the new, this new generation has not turned their back on the old. The forms and patterns that have emerged are a generous mix of the two. In this issue, House Beautiful reflects the stimulation and excitement of their work, with more examples of it to come in issues from now on.

How to WIN A FULBRIGHT

By MARY JEAN KEMPNER

During the past 16 years, 12,000 Fulbrights—international scholarships awarded at the graduate-school level—have provided Americans under 35 with the opportunity of a year's study abroad, all expenses paid. Fulbright interests are far-ranging and diverse, encompassing the performing arts, science, the humanities, education, and the creative arts. Last year 579 painters, sculptors, designers, and architects—all with four years of professional study or experience to their credit—applied for such government grants. Fifty-one of them were accepted for affiliation with a university abroad. The extent of these academic bonds varies in different countries. Painters who choose to study in France, for instance, or Spain, or Italy, need only retain tenuous contact with their assigned university advisers and remain more or less free to go about the business of absorbing art; in Germany and Austria, on the other hand, they must attend academies. Architects in Italy and Spain are expected to meet from time to time with other architects for seminar discussions, but in Denmark they must attend the Royal Academy. Designers going to Spain, France, and Italy have nothing more than an academic place to hang their hat, and remain free to work with occasional advisory consultations; in the Scandinavian countries, students are bound by the requirements of the Royal Academies. Fulbrights are forbidden to be out of the host country for more than six weeks during their academic year abroad. They receive round-trip transportation, tuition, books, health-and-accident insurance, and a maintenance allowance geared to local living costs. (In England, for instance, this comes to about $174 a month.) The tab for all this is picked up by the U.S. Government with no strings attached except the fervent hope that grantees not only make the most of their opportunity, but also manage to convey to their associates overseas "a fair and favorable" impression of America. To a cynical world this sounds hopelessly naive, but it works. So great is the Fulbright prestige that the word "fulbright"—printed in lower case—recently was incorporated as a noun in the third edition of Webster's Dictionary.

President Kennedy once referred to these government grants as "the classic modern example of beating swords into plowshares." (Their origin and purpose is unique in the world of scholarships, which makes it impossible to compare them to other international grants such as Rhodes, Ford, and Marshall.) Surveys of former Fulbright grantees reveal that most of them agreed that their year abroad provided them with new skills and insights in their sphere of interest. More than two-thirds of them further agreed that it helped them see America in clearer perspective, and a lamentable three percent claimed they "learned nothing." Fulbrights rise to the top in many professions—in the business world, as foreign-service officers, as journalists, and, of course, in the arts. To name a few, soprano Anna Moffo, folk singer Jean Ritchie, sculptress Lee Bontecou, graphic designer Emil Antonucci, city planner Richard May, stained-glass designer Robert Sowers, painter Jack Levine.

How the Fulbright grants came into being has become somewhat fuzzed-over by the passage of 20 years. It was the horns of a dilemma, not altruism, that acted as the propulsive force. Immediately after World War II, millions of dollars' worth of American materials remained stacked in warehouses throughout the world—bulldozers, machine tools, food, clothing, pharmaceutical supplies—all kinds of miscellaneous items desperately needed by war-shaken countries. The quandary for these countries was a shortage of dollars with which to pay the U.S. for the purchase of such vital stocks. America neither chose to give away these surpluses nor to pay the exorbitant cost of shipping them home.

In 1945, J. William Fulbright Jr., the junior Senator from Arkansas (and a former president of the state university), came up with a brilliantly imaginative solution and the political savvy to steer it unobtrusively through Congress until it passed the Senate by voice vote in 1948. Fulbright had practical as well as personal reasons to believe the project would pay off. As a young man of 20, he had won a Rhodes scholarship which, according to him, "took a farmer's son from a primitive little village in the Ozarks to Oxford, where he never dreamed of going."

Fulbright's bill proposed to sell America's surplus products for francs, pounds, liras, or whatever the local currency; these funds were banked abroad and earmarked to finance overseas studies for talented and ambitious young Americans. (They also provided travel funds for foreign students and teachers to come to America.) So far it has cost $330,000,000 in foreign currency and hard dollars (the equivalent of one fully armed atomic submarine!). A distinguished but necessarily anonymous State Department official considers this "the most fabulously profitable investment ever authorized by the Congress of the United States."

There's nothing gimmicky about this competition—its simplicity and directness provides a kind of additional challenge. Neat, thoughtfully filled-out forms full of essential facts and purposes tend to beat flamboyant dossiers. Slickness doesn't pay off, but a straightforward approach is likely to. Evidence of an honest desire to absorb intangible assets and disregard possible discomforts of student life abroad carries considerable weight. Recommendations from prominent people or political figures without conclusive evidence of long and close association with the candidate are politely acknowledged and ignored.

Screening methods are deliberate, elaborate, and pertinent. Applications pass through four separate stages. First they are forwarded to the Institute of International Education in New York, a nonprofit organization that processes the Fulbrights as well as other educational grants. Next they go before a National Screening Committee consisting of a board of specialists who meet once a year for several consecutive days—depending on the number of applications being considered. Each candidate's curriculum vitae is explored, debated, evaluated; so are examples of his work in the creative arts and the project he submits. This committee consists of a mix of distinguished experts plus some former grantees. People like Dorothy Miller of the Museum of Modern Art, Raphael Soyer of the New School for Social Research, James Johnson Sweeney of Houston's Fine Arts Museum have at one time or another selected potential winners in painting. Walter Gropius of Harvard's School of Architecture; Max Abramovitz, architect for the United Nations; and Aswin Lippe, research curator of the Metropolitan Museum of Art's department of Far Eastern art have concerned themselves with architecture. Dorothy Liebes, noted textile designer; Edgar Kaufmann, jr., architectural critic and historian at Columbia University; and Paul Smith of the Museum of Contemporary Crafts have assessed candidates in design.

Selections made by this National Screening Committee then go to a bi-national U.S. Educational Commission in each of the 55 (Please turn to page 105)

The WAND of Youth

Gifted young conductors now command respect in a realm once reserved exclusively for age and experience

By RICHARD D. FREED

The exciting new prominence of youth, apparent in all phases of music, is nowhere more conspicuous than in the exalted realm of the conductor.

Until recently, this had remained one field in which the accumulation of years was considered a prerequisite for recognition. Many of the great conductors of the past and of today's older generation began their careers in their teens, but usually in the modest capacity of assistant, apprentice, or coach. Relatively few of these conductors had achieved real stature before they reached the age of 35.

Now, however, our great symphony orchestras, with more and more of their "first chairs" occupied by men (and women) in their 30's, are playing for conductors even younger. Several of these young conductors, no older than 35, are men whose extraordinary talents would mark them as exceptional at any age, and they have become commanding figures in positions of prime musical importance.

A scant 25 years ago the leading conductors were Arturo Toscanini, Serge Koussevitzky, Leopold Stokowski, Bruno Walter, Wilhelm Furtwängler, Willem

Hungarian István Kertész, 34, conducts the London Symphony.

Mengelberg, Artur Rodzinski, Fritz Reiner, Sir Thomas Beecham, Pierre Monteux, and a handful of others. All these men are gone now, except Stokowski, and he, of course, is the classic contradiction of the calendar.

A smaller group of men, now in their 60's and 70's—Charles Munch, George Szell, Arthur Fiedler, Sir John Barbirolli, and Eugene Ormandy—maintains a connection with earlier eras. But the big question in music circles during the last dozen years has been: "Where are tomorrow's conductors coming from?"

The answer is hearteningly clear now. They are coming from Bombay and Budapest, from Tokyo and Kalamazoo. And they are not just coming—many of them have arrived, and arrived grandly.

The first to arrive, not only grandly but spectacularly, more than 20 years ago, was Leonard Bernstein, the most successful of American conductors. Mr. Bernstein will be 47 next month, no longer a youngster, but it is undoubtedly he, more than any other single individual either here or abroad, who has infused the pulsing blood of youth into the veins of the musical corpus. And his own success has played a major part in ensuring a more serious reception for the younger men who have appeared since that memorable Sunday afternoon when the 25-year-old Bernstein substituted for the ailing Bruno Walter at a New York Philharmonic concert.

Mr. Bernstein is now, of course, music director of the New York Philharmonic, the first native American to hold that post. He is also the composer of such disparate works as the Jeremiah Symphony, the ballet Fancy Free (both written in his early 20's), and the fabulous West Side Story. It seemed foreordained, too, that it (Please turn to page 108)

Young PAINTERS

A new generation of artists is pushing its way into maturity. They are tough-minded but not afraid of beauty, says this distinguished critic

By BRIAN O'DOHERTY

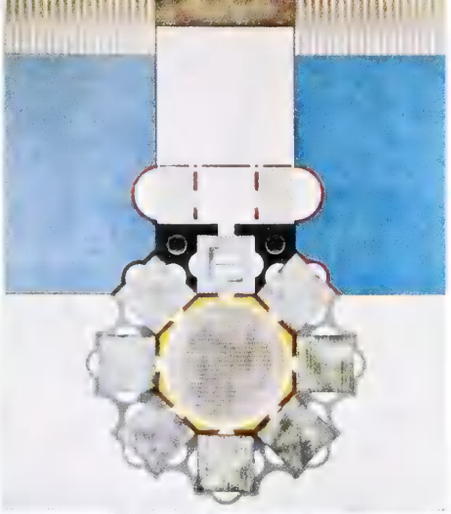
There is always plenty of new talent around in the arts—until you begin to look for it. Then you discover how rare it really is.

In painting, this is especially true. A very average artist can produce a picture that gives an illusion of promise—every new development from abstract expressionism on can be easily imitated. Painters of no importance can quickly learn to turn out something close enough to the real thing, that has the look of the real thing—and since painting becomes a popular sport. The Look has become as pervasive in art as it is in cosmetics, fashion, or interior decorating.

But go to an artist's studio, and the truth is out. When the talent is genuine, one can see in the work a way of thinking and working, observe a development, a growth, a direction.

Brian O'Doherty, a former art critic of the New York Times, was most recently editor-in-chief of Show Magazine. Since he came to this country eight years ago, his TV program "Invitation to Art" has been seen nationally, and he appeared for three years on his "Dialogue" program on WNBC. He is now working on a book to be entitled Ten American Masters. He selected paintings for the exhibition, "Less Known and Unknown Painters," for the American Express Pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

In searching for new talent, the image of the baseball scout is a good one. For one is sizing up a native talent, an intelligence that may or may not be able to exploit it, and such mundane things as a capacity to work, toughness, strength of character. The young artist needs the virtues of persistence and honesty. Usually it takes years before he works his way through false starts, creative impasses, discouragement. Exceptionally brilliant talent or striking clarity of intelligence enabling him to direct his own progress can be major aids. But both are very rare, and generally the prodigy runs into a lot of trouble now (of the artists on the opposite page, Jamie Wyeth, 19-year-old son of Andrew Wyeth, is an obvious prodigy). Just like a young ballplayer, he can be brought along too fast. The best dealers know this and are careful protectors of talent. Leo Castelli, the New York dealer, keeps an eye on dozens of young artists and waits until they are ripe and ready for their chance.



Maturing takes longer now than it once did. Distracted by a confusion of choices, artists now seem to get into their stride in their thirties. Some, such as Adolph Gottlieb and Paul Burlin, only came into their own when over 50.

With the exception of Wyeth, the ages of the other artists reproduced here range from 27 to 39. All, including Wyeth, are represented in a show called "Less Known and Unknown Painters," which I selected for the American Express Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. And all have well-established and mature styles—though Ryman has already abandoned the brilliant direction opened up in the picture opposite in favor of a stricter, more difficult esthetic.

All of them are working more or less against the immediate fashion—optical art, which has jumped from the wall of the Museum of Modern Art onto fabrics, wallpaper, and Eugenia Sheppard's column. A real wariness of fashion distinguishes the 35 artists on exhibit, for (Please turn to page 108)

The Young CHEFS

General Charles de Gaulle's former chef de cuisine, Jacques Pépin, and Jean-Claude Szurdak, his patissier, discuss the subtleties that make cooking one of the fine arts. House Beautiful lets you listen in Right: Face to face. You 29, both chefs started their careers at 13, in the European tradition, as apprentices, graduating eventually to such splendid houses as the Plaza-Athenée and the Drouant in Paris. Now in New York, Jacques, this page, helps direct research at Howard Johnson's, while Jean-Claude heads his own pastry service.

SALTING AND GARLIC: The age-old debate about which comes first, the cooking or the salting, brings from Chef Jacques an answer that seems to make good sense. He also adds some revealing ideas about garlic.

JACQUES: When you salt and pepper a steak or a filet mignon before sautéing or broiling it, or before roasting a larger piece of meat, it is completely flavored during the cooking. You cannot achieve the same flavor if you salt and pepper after. The meat would be salty around but not in. It's the same thing as putting the seasonings in a stew after it is cooked: then it is too late. But you have to be careful about one thing. Don't salt the meat until you are ready to cook it—salt drains the meat and the end result will be dry meat. If you are cooking a steak, for example, it should be cooked just when the guests are to be seated. You put the pan on the fire, and some butter in the pan and when you use butter, put about half a teaspoon of oil with it—not olive oil but vegetable oil—because the oil allows a higher temperature without burning. Then season the steak with salt and freshly ground pepper. That way it is very good. With chicken, salt and pepper inside and outside. Also, you may put in some bay leaves, a bit of thyme, maybe parsley, or garlic—one or two cloves with the shells on. When the shell is left on garlic, you get the flavor without any bitterness. It is not strong, as you may think, but very sweet and good.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Don't forget to say that when you burn garlic, it is going to taste awful if the shell has been removed.

JACQUES: Oh, yes, that's important. If you are making Snails Forestière* or Tomatoes Provençal*, for instance, and you leave the peeled, chopped garlic 30 seconds too long in the pan, it changes the taste of the whole dish. It is terrible—very bitter. That's why, when you brown meat for a stew, you begin with the meat, add the onion, carrot (mirepoix), and after, you add the liquid, the chopped garlic.

PHOTOGRAPHED BY EUGENE COOK AT LE PERIGORD RESTAURANT, N. Y. C.

TEMPERATURES: Another controversy that often divides cooks is the question of whether roasted meats should be started at high temperatures and then reduced, or cooked at an even temperature throughout. Broadly speaking, American authorities recommend even-temperature cooking.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Start red meat at a high temperature.

JACQUES: Especially beef. For example, if you are cooking a whole filet mignon, you don't start it in the oven. You cook it on the fire and brown it on each side and you finish it in the oven, very fast. You make a sort of roast. Otherwise, it would boil in its juice. Fowl, also, you can cook at a high temperature. If it is a big one, like a turkey, you start it low. But chicken we usually start at 400° F. or 450° F. You start it on one side to get it brown and you brown it on the other side; after, you put it on its back and lower the temperature to 350° F. and finish cooking at the same temperature, basting frequently. But if you start at a low temperature, your chicken is going to boil and the skin will look as if it had been boiled. You cannot get it brown afterwards. It's too late.

JEAN-CLAUDE: And for red meat, the high temperature makes it a very nice brown color on the outside, and keeps le sang inside. Of course, in France, we eat meat much more rare than in the United States. Another thing: if you turn red meat with a fork, it makes a hole and the juice goes out, and it is supposed to stay in. That's why professionals turn steak with a spatula, steadying it with a fork.

THICKENING AGENTS: A thickening agent, is, of course, a means to bring a sauce to the right consistency—a liaison, as it is known to professionals, that binds the ingredients. Exclusive of eggs, which are also used to thicken and are a subject in themselves, in France the three basic agents are beurre manié, roux, and arrowroot.

JACQUES: A beurre manié is just a raw or uncooked roux—a mixture of butter and flour. When you have a sauce that is not the right consistency, you add just a little beurre manié—a noisette, little nut—to bring it to the perfect stage. It gives a sort of almond taste, a good taste, to the sauce. I don't advise it for a sauce you will keep in the refrigerator, because the flour is not cooked. The point in making a cooked roux is so the finished sauce can be reheated and will keep the same consistency. Bechamel, or white sauce, for example.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Bechamel is the base for many other sauces, such as Sauce Mornay and Sauce Aurore, which can be stored in the refrigerator. But if the roux is not cooked, it will taste floury. Also, the sauce will thin out and become watery on standing. For a sauce you want to keep a few days, you must cook the roux 10 to 15 minutes in a 350° F. oven. It is important to remember the color in preparing these particular sauces. They must be white, not brown.

JACQUES: But a roux in a Sauce Bechamel that is to be used in a soufflé—you need to cook it only about 3 minutes, because the sauce is going to be used right away.

JEAN-CLAUDE: To make a clear, transparent sauce, such as a Fond de Veau or brown sauce, which has to be very lean, very clear, without any fat or "eyes," as we say, on top, you should use arrowroot. If thickened with a roux, you have to cook the sauce 4 to 5 hours, very slowly, skimming constantly, to get the same result. Otherwise, it will be a mess.

JACQUES: Arrowroot is very practical to use in the home because here in America, I think, very few housewives would spend the time to make the classical sauces such as Fond de Veau, Espagnole, and so on. Actually, you can take canned beef bouillon, add some carrot, onion, celery, wine, and seasonings, thicken it out with a little bit of arrowroot, and get a very good result. Canned beef gravy is also an adequate substitute for the classic brown sauce.

FISH STOCK: One of the problems that may baffle many a cook tackling a French recipe is fish stock. Chicken and meat stock, or broth, can be gotten out of cans, if need be, but fish stock isn't sold commercially. The idea of cooking up a lot of fish heads and bones with bits and pieces of fish has forestalled the making of many a good recipe by American cooks in the home. Although bottled clam juice is a good, easy substitute, Jacques has come up with an alternative which is clever and leaves a tasty by-product.

JACQUES: You can get a good fish juice out of mussels—one of the best. Just clean the shells thoroughly, then put them in a pot with an onion, (Please turn the page) a little parsley, salt, pepper, and a glass of dry white wine. Cover, and bring them to a boil. The mussels will open and give back a lot of juice, and with that juice you can make wonderful sauces. As for the mussels, you take them out of the shell and serve them as a garnish for the sauce. Or you may chill them and serve them as an hors d'oeuvre with vinaigrette, mayonnaise, tartar sauce, or Sauce Gribiche (see April issue, House Beautiful).

FISH: On the general topic of fish, it was agreed that Americans tend to overcook one of the most delicate of all foods, which are tender by nature, and to neglect fresh-water fish.

JACQUES: Except for trout, you do nothing in this country with sweet fish. I mean sweet water fish from the rivers and streams. In France we have many other sweet fish we love. For example, the very tiny ones you fry and eat, heads and everything. We call this dish a friture. It is delicious. Very crisp. I think that in general sweet fish—fresh-water fish, as you say—are best fried in a pan with butter. You salt and pepper the fish, dip it in milk and flour, and then sauté it, with half butter, half oil. After, you can put some sliced almonds over it—Truite Amandine*, for example, and, if you like, a spoonful of cream. Elaborate sauces usually go with sea-water fish, because they can take some very fancy sauces. Trout would be the only exception.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Also, I think we cook lobster differently in France. We always use a court bouillon, which is very easy to do. Just plain water with some vinegar in it, some white pepper, crushed bay leaves, parsley, onion, and one carrot. You boil this for one hour. Then you put your lobsters in and cook them 5 minutes for the first pound and 3 minutes for each additional pound. Take off the heat and leave the lobster in broth to cool, as you would a poached chicken.

JACQUES: I don't put in vinegar.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Do you use wine?

JACQUES: No, no wine, either. But it depends on what you're going to do with the lobster. If you want to eat it very fresh and still lukewarm, with mayonnaise, the vinegar gives it a sour taste. I think the important thing is pepper. I put whole white pepper in the court bouillon, and that gives a lot of flavor to the whole thing. (Recipe on page 101.)

JEAN-CLAUDE: Yes, freshly ground white pepper—a mignonette. But I still think vinegar—not too much.

JACQUES: I put vinegar with the lobster when it isn't quite fresh. Of course, sea water is good for cooking lobster, too, if you can get it. Just add one carrot and a piece of onion. I like to use it, too, for cooking shrimp—what we call crevettes grises, the gray ones.

SALADS: In America we are inclined to treat salads rather casually. Which is the reason, perhaps, salads never taste as fresh to the tongue or look as soigné as they do in France. The French baby their salad greens.

JACQUES: One of the most delicate salads we have in France, la laitue, is more like your Boston lettuce, or Bibb. Also, field salad, la doucette, or la mâche, which is very fragile.

JEAN-CLAUDE: With this kind of lettuce you must be careful. You wash it in fresh water—not too warm, just off the cold, like under a gentle rain. And you do not handle it too much or it will break. After, you put it on a dry towel and another towel on top, and just pat it like this. . . .

JACQUES: Like a baby.

SALAD DRESSINGS: The most common dressing used in France is vinaigrette, which is known in this country (and frequently abused) as French dressing. Sauce Vinaigrette (see House Beautiful, April issue) is a simple combination of vinegar, oil, salt, and pepper, varied with mustard, fresh herbs, and garlic. It is used with salads and cold vegetables, such as asparagus and artichokes, and it can be found everywhere in France from three-star restaurants to peasant kitchens. But there is a second dressing, equally simple, and less well-known in this country.

JEAN-CLAUDE: This other sauce is much more fraîche. We use lemon juice instead of vinegar, and sour or heavy cream instead of oil. Of course, salt, and always white pepper. A salad with this sauce we call Salade à la Crème.
(Most cooks know, or should know, the importance of tossing a salad at the last possible moment, but Jacques has a vivid way of emphasizing this point.)

JACQUES: The best taste happens when a salad is mixed just before serving. If you mix the salad 10 or 15 minutes before serving, the leaves look dead—as if you had put them in hot water. They are burned by the vinegar. Some salads, like escarole, are tougher and will keep longer than Boston or Bibb, but it is always advisable to do the mixing at the last minute.

POTATOES AND KNIVES: The French have thought of more ways to cook the potato than anyone else in the world, but the simplest version is Pommes de Terre a l'Anglaise, which is nothing more than a plain boiled potato. Strangely enough, this is a rarity in most American restaurants.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Boiled potatoes are something very simple to make, but there is a big difference if you eat them an hour after they have cooked or immediately after. Boiled potatoes are one of those things you cannot reheat.

How to spend young money

By MARCIA WALLACE

Young mother of three, shopper extraordinaire

Once upon every moving day, there comes a moment of truth. Departing for their own well-ordered hearths, the transfer men leave you to naked new walls and a landscape lumped with barrels and cartons. In the bare-bulb light you sink to the nearest crate with the sudden knowledge that despite all foresighted effort—floor plans made, carpet laid, shelves papered—an enormous amount remains to be done before this house becomes home.

Faced with empty spaces and buys to be thought out to fill them, your bones ache and your heart yearns—first for a great deal of money (a Ford Foundation grant might cover it nicely) or, better still, for an unlimited charge account with a clairvoyant decorator who, without an ounce of decision on your part, would simply produce Perfection. Realizing that neither solution is entirely practical (it's after five and all the foundations are closed), you settle gallantly for supper and sleep and, having propped a favorite print on the mantle for morale's sake, you wander off to bed.

The moving-day ballet is classic because, first apartment or fifth house, the problems involved in assembling a home's ingredients change very little. But, blessedly, neither do the steps that solve them best. Basic to them all is your personal, loving care.

What makes home the nicest place in the world to be is the sense of being surrounded by people and things you love. In the light of a post-moving day, familiarity lends enchantment to the print on the mantle, Dickens on a shelf, rainbow sparks from an old candelabrum. You are warmed to set other household goods in place. Pots find their way onto hooks, china into cupboards, clothes into closets. Then, with furniture semi-situated, you can even face up to plans for the barren spots between.

There are day-to-day basics to deal with—provisions for eating, for sleeping, for sitting and storing and lighting. Since you shop for such major needs with a lifetime in mind, they deserve the best quality you can afford. But keeping your personal tastes and space in focus, some necessities are more necessary than others. If home is a small apartment and your entertaining informal, a set of fold-away tables may suit your dining plans better than an expensive refectory antique, however handsome.

The most successful buying schemes grow from graph-paper floor plans and time. They give prime consideration to your family's treasures—the marble-topped chest for the (Please turn to page 112)

Designed to live happily for ever and ever, wherever: dormitory, high-rise, or home— new structural, flexible, multiple, interchangeable furniture

The beauty of "New Idea Collection II" is not only that this multiple-unit, pure-line furniture can fit changing physical spaces but also that it can serve a family's varying needs. A 60"-base unit can be a buffet, a bedroom dresser, part of a family room's entertainment area, or foyer décor. The couch and bookcase version, above, might easily become—with a slight interchange of parts—a bed and shelf and dresser assembly, or bookcase and desk. (After all, there are 45 matching pieces. All dark walnut veneer, some with reversible tortoise panels.) Lighted wall bridges fasten above desk, bed, or couch. The cube, above, separates into two tables. Not shown: a serving buffet on casters, with electric outlets; a low coffee table holding four folding tables and cushions. The compatible upholstered pieces—all serene modern. All marvelously priced. All Kroehler.

The "thank-you" note—perfectly painless if you follow a few simple precepts

Nothing seems to bring out a talent for procrastination like a thank-you note waiting to be written. And the irony is that the longer one puts off writing it, the more tender becomes the conscience and the more agonizing the throes of composition.

It follows then that the first rule for painless note-writing is Do It Now! The sooner you write, the more spontaneous your note will be and blessedly free of that apologetic opening paragraph which can take the bloom off your most earnest prose. Strike while the need is hot, and you will not have lost Martha's new address or forgotten the name of those nice friends of friends who took you to dinner in Paris. The longer you put off writing, the more possible such gaucheries become. (It goes without saying that gifted note writers keep accurate address books and don't procrastinate about keeping them up to date.)

In big seasons for giving thanks—as when wedding gifts arrive, at Christmas and birthdays, and whenever friends have offered you felicitations or sympathy—the way to keep up with the volume is to dispatch a few notes every day.

As for the content of a thank-you note, keep it brief and honest. Sincerity has far more charm than exaggeration and florid phrases. Above all, mention specifically the gift or the service for which you are thanking the giver. Most people find it unflattering to be thanked in vague terms for their "kind remembrance." This is enough to make them suspect that the writer has written a sort of personal form letter, and may not even have looked at the present.

Since brevity is the soul of this type of message, small notepapers, individualized cards, and informal folds are beautifully appropriate. (We've garlanded this page with some of the smartest currently in the shops.) Some busy people we know—and the busiest ones are paradoxically the most likely to get their thank-you's off with the greatest of speed—carry a supply of such "little" papers in handbags or briefcases. They always have the wherewithal to dash off a note or two in those small pieces of time that might otherwise be wasted—as in doctors' waiting rooms or on short plane hops—thus keeping their conscience in good order and their friendships shining bright. ■

—an old art for young rooms

Stenciling, a mode of decorating popular in Early America, is about to enjoy a rich revival. Carefully nurturing its new incarnation are the two bright young women who designed and applied the stenciling seen here. Adele Bishop and Cile Lord joined forces in East Hampton two years ago, then moved to Manhattan, where their intricate custom designs are now at the beck and call of decorators. From early designs dependent on the stencil "bridge" (the familiar connecting links), they have now developed a complex system of superimposing stencils so that the bridge disappears, allowing them to create solid designs. They are able to duplicate any pattern and apply it easily to floor, walls, furniture, stair risers, window and door frames, or any other reasonably flat surface.

THE FLAG AT HOME

By DAVID X. MANNERS

In the early history of our country, flags were often personal in origin, crudely made, but vigorous in their statement. The pine tree was the New England meeting place, and, as a symbol on a flag, it expressed ideals of democracy and freedom. Where defiance dominated all else, "Don't tread on me," the flag with a coiled serpent, became the natural expression. But when the colonies finally joined under one flag, it was neither of these that rallied our forefathers. Many people and many years of history made it what it is.

Take its colors. They are red, white, and blue because those were the colors of England, our mother country. Those colors had resulted in 1606 when King James combined the red-and-white St. George's Cross of England and the blue-and-white St. Andrew's Cross of Scotland to create the "British Union Flag."

Not all parts of a flag are of equal importance. The upper quarter, near the pole, called the canton, has special significance, and it is often a flag within a flag. In 1707, Queen Anne took King James's Union Flag and made it the canton of a red flag. From red flag to red-and-white stripes was only a step away.

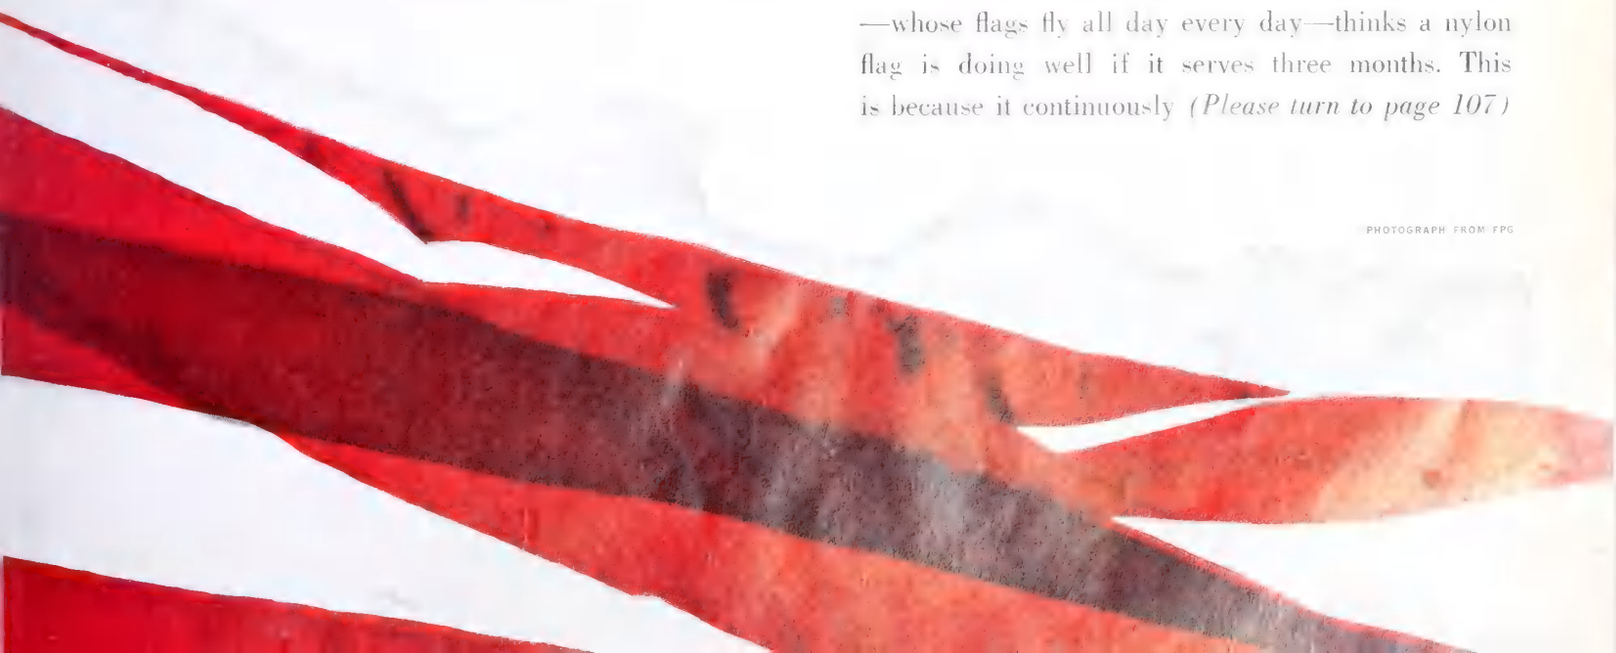
The East India Company, which carried on trade with the colonies, modified the British Red Ensign for use as their company flag. They changed the red field to seven red and six white stripes. It was this flag, with the British Union in its canton, that our forebears carried off in triumph from the Boston Tea Party.

The 13 stripes made this East India Company flag happily appropriate to represent the 13 original colonies, and in 1776 they officially adopted it. Popularly, it was known as the Cambridge Flag, because Washington had unfurled it in that town. The British Union was still in its canton. And it was this flag we flew on July 4, 1776.

But as a symbol of the crown, it couldn't last. On June 14, 1777, the colonists removed the last vestige of British loyalty from the flag by substituting a circle of 13 stars in the canton. We call it the Betsy Ross flag, and the theory is that she made it from a sketch prepared by George Washington. What casts special doubt on the theory is that the story doesn't seem to have been invented until nearly 100 years after the event. Contemporary records don't credit Betsy Ross. They don't credit anybody.

Who actually suggested stars is lost in the haze of history. But stars were a rather obvious choice. They are an ancient heraldic device. They even appear on Washington's family crest. And Washington had spoken of our country as "a new constellation."

When Vermont and Kentucky were admitted to the Union in 1794, Congress added two stripes and two stars to the flag. This 15-stripe flag was the one that inspired Francis Scott Key, and it is known as the Star Spangled Banner. The next five states to join the Union weren't represented on the flag. In this period many variations of the flag were being flown.



Congress finally took action. It permanently fixed the number of stripes at 13, and decreed that only a new star be added for every new state. It still said nothing about star arrangement. As a result, to this day, when a new state is admitted, the arrangement is decided by an executive order of the President.

Today the flag is made in a variety of sizes and materials for home use. Many people, through habit or custom, think of flying a flag only on holidays. Actually, it can be flown any day weather permits.

The 3′ by 5′ flag is the most popular. For $3.75 you can buy one of cotton sheeting, but this is an economy fabric and has no great durability. At least twice as good, at $7.80, is a flag made of cotton bunting. Better yet is one of nylon ($13.60). It's so light in weight the slightest breeze picks it up. It dries quickly, too, and the sun shining through it gives it a beautiful luminosity.

The finest flag in many respects is a blend of 75 percent nylon and 25 percent wool. It looks like wool, and has its dye-retaining qualities and durability. Chemicals in the air affect it less than filament nylon. But unlike the all-nylon flag, a flag of nylon-and-wool has an open weave that lets air through. It doesn't respond to breezes quite so easily. It costs about $18. If you plan consistent use of a flag, buy two of the less expensive ones; one can be washed while the other is in use.

How long should a flag last? The U.S. Government —whose flags fly all day every day—thinks a nylon flag is doing well if it serves three months. This is because it continuously (Please turn to page 107)

The Great North Atlantic LOBSTER

By HELEN McCULLY

"Buy them alive!" Mrs. Leslie, of 19th-century cookbook fame, briskly advised her readers, adding slyly, "lobsters sold in Boston, already boiled, are always fresh and good."

Fortunately for the rest of the country, Boston no longer has a lien on lobsters in any form. They are available generally in good fish markets the year round: alive; freshly cooked, in or out of the shell; cooked, frozen, out of the shell, by the pound; canned; and, during the summer, cooked, chilled, out of the shell, by the pound. If your fishmonger fails you, you can always order them by mail direct from Maine.

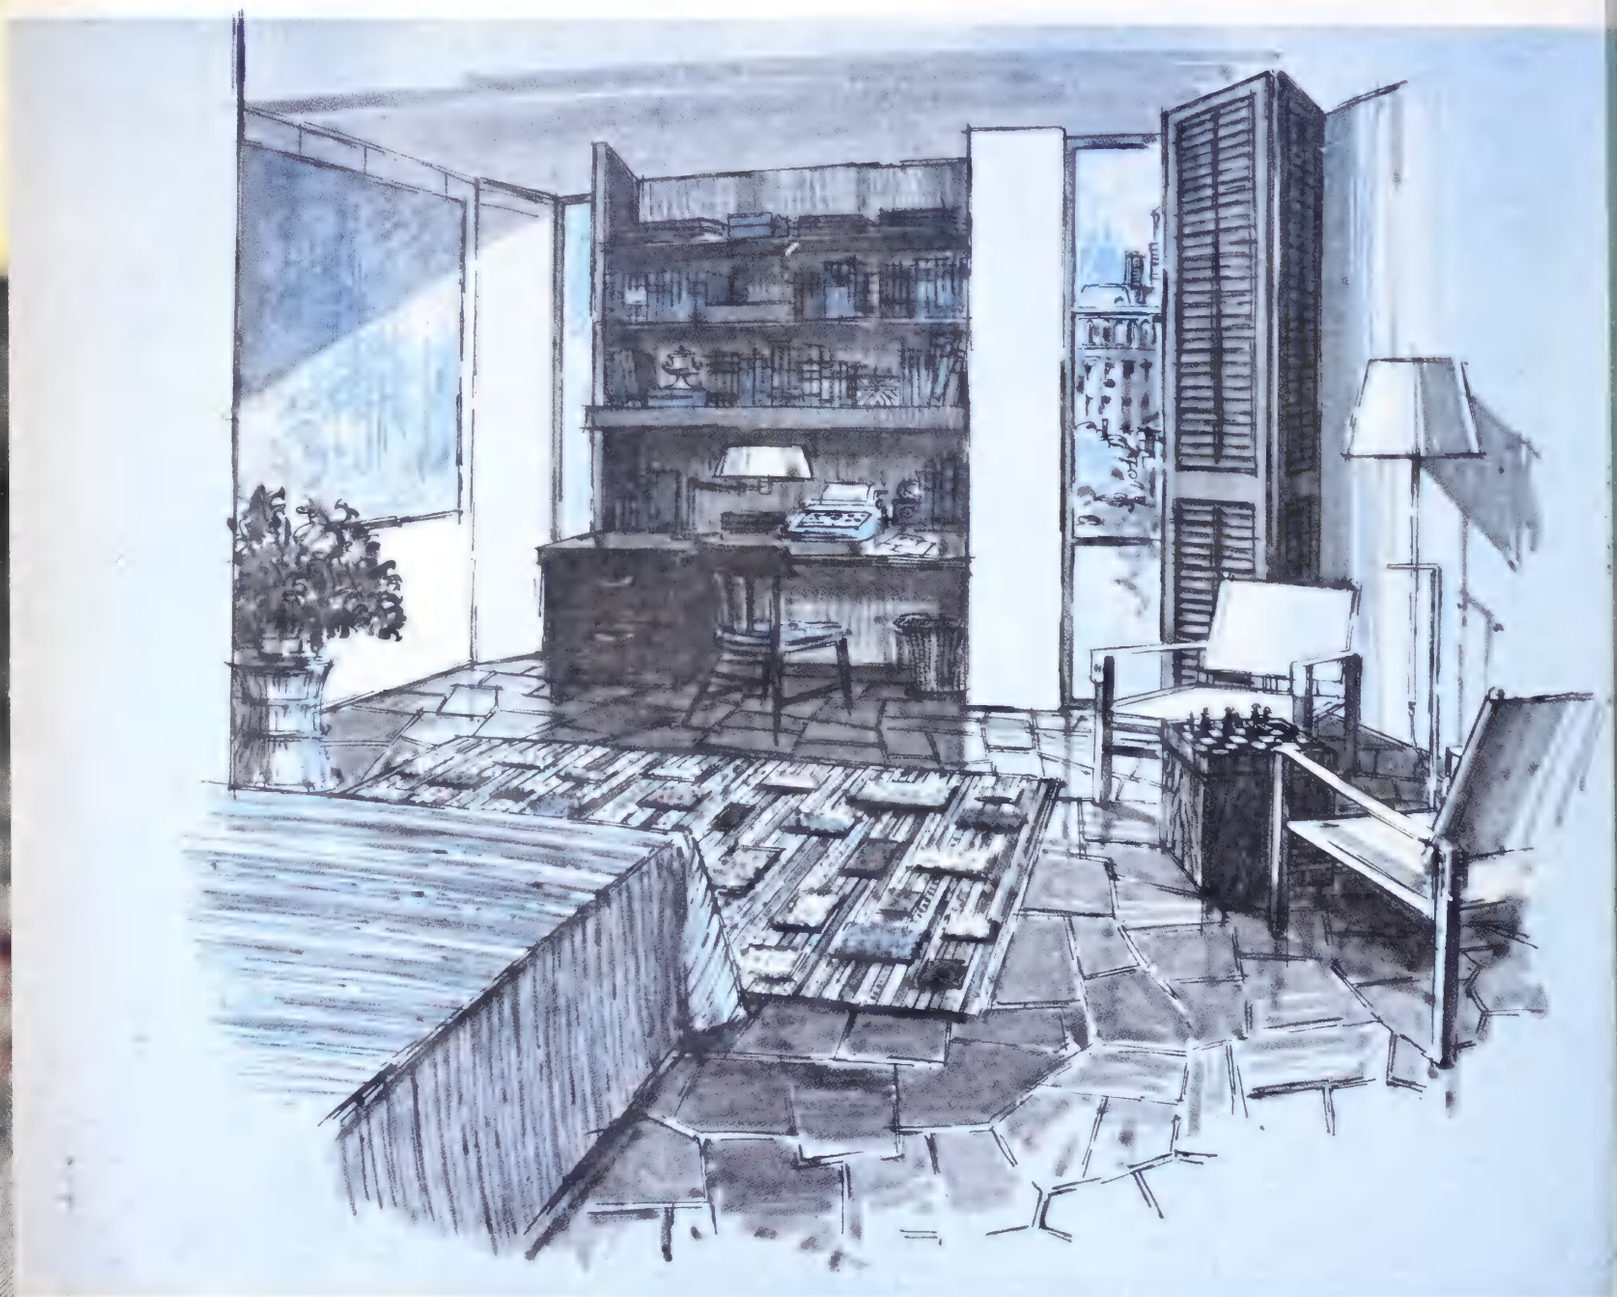
Like Mrs. Leslie, we believe in cooking lobsters at home, for the simple reason the end result is worth the effort. But for those who take a dim view of plunging these crusty, kicking—they must be alive and kicking—crustaceans into a kettle of boiling broth, there are these other alternatives.

This time of year, fresh lobsters are more abundant and somewhat less costly, but they are never found on the bargain counter.

Traditionally, Americans have always cooked lobsters in boiling, salted water, or sea water. At House Beautiful, we have found that when cooked in a good, court bouillon, timed exactly, then cooled in the broth, they are more flavorful, more succulent, and always tender.

PHOTOGRAPH BY FAULCONER-FENN

To Cook Lobsters in Court Bouillon



Place 1 or 2 carrots, coarsely chopped; 2 large onions, sliced; 6 stalks celery with tops, coarsely chopped; 3 crushed bay leaves; 1 teaspoon dried thyme; 1 teaspoon peppercorns, crushed; 3 or 4 tablespoons salt; and about 4 quarts cold water in a very large kettle. Bring to a boil, then simmer for 1 hour.

Bring broth to a rolling boil, plunge in live lobsters, one at a time, so as not to stop broth boiling. (A live lobster has its tail curled close to the body. It will spring back when straightened.) When all lobsters are in the broth and it has reached a rolling boil again, begin timing. Simmer 5 minutes for the first pound and 3 minutes for each additional pound. Cool in the broth.

Lobster Salad

Make a good mayonnaise with lemon juice rather than vinegar, or season commercial mayonnaise well with plenty of fresh lemon juice and freshly ground pepper. Stir into it all the tomalley. (Tomalley, a delicacy, is the creamy green liver found in the body; remove it with a spoon.) (Please turn to page 106)

DÉCOR IN THE GROVES

A student's room is workshop, library, refuge from the madding crowd, a place to entertain—a substitute for home nine months of the year. Even in the grandest modern dormitory rooms, like this one in Yale's Saarinen-designed Ezra Styles College, the comforting cossets and reassuring "this-is-mine" look of home have to be brought in with portable goods. Here the job was done with bedspread, rug, a pair of British officers' chairs, lamps, and an ingenious cube of a walnut-covered cedar chest which rolls on casters. It can reverse its top to be a game board or an upholstered seat. Spread and rug look like hand-loomed, irregular weaves, the kind that camouflage signs of use—de rigueur in the absence of intensive housekeeping. What you may or may not add to a school or college room is usually stated in its catalogue. This room's built-in desk and storage, shutters, and slate floor are elegancies not found in many dormitories.

OF ACADEME

DRAWINGS BY CHARLES HEILEMANN

On the distaff side, a student room is often a first go-round with the mysteries of interior decoration, a challenge to make a personally signed private world out of the empty shell that greets one on opening day. This room in Cutter House, Smith College (shown at top in uninhabited anonymity), was turned into home by a ready-made bedspread and dust ruffle, an area rug, a rattan chair, some giddy "op art" patterned desk accessories, a lamp, and a wicker treasure chest which holds another smaller wicker chest. Pretty practicalities, these—because they'll also store possessions left at college over the summer. Schools and colleges usually specify that anything hung on a wall be hung from a molding, like these Unesco museum reproductions. The desk, desk chair, bed and curtains in this room were furnished by the college. More about these furnishings and other furniture for college rooms on page 113.

Full-scale WORKING KITCHEN no bigger than a closet

▪ Here's proof that even the tiniest kitchen can answer the challenge of family meals and entertaining capably and attractively. Appliances are all standard in size. Open shelves along one wall, ranging in depth from five to twelve inches, accommodate neatly stacked china and accessories. The only storage cabinet is a tall 12″-deep unit for canned and packaged groceries. Tools and serving pieces may be reached on the pegboard wall. Floor plan below shows 30″ area between living and kitchen areas where refrigerator is housed. Directly across is a utility closet with door, photograph below, decorated with trompe l'oeil.

The Case house, when you study its plan, is revealed—certainly in its living, dining, and play areas—as a flow of interlocking spaces. These are broad, high-ceilinged places which make entertaining comfortable. But the Cases have no feeling of excessive vastness when they're alone. The balcony overhanging the fireside in the living room creates an intimately scaled "room in a room." participating countries. This group consists of prominent educators in the host country, American businessmen and educators living there, and representatives from our Embassy. Their job is to determine whether in a given year there are facilities to accommodate students applying for study in that country. Finally, these thrice-screened applications go before the Board of Foreign Scholarships, which meets in Washington for final deliberations and consists of twelve leaders in education appointed by the President of the United States.

Rules governing the eligibility of candidates hoping for a full year's grant for graduate study are relatively simple and precise. All candidates must be American citizens at the time of application. (In art, design, and architecture, remember, four years of professional study and/or experience are required.) Application may be made through Fulbright advisors at all colleges, or through the counseling division of the Institute of International Education in New York, or through one of the Institute of International Education's five regional offices in Chicago, Denver, Houston, Washington, and San Francisco.

The forms to be filled out are explicit and persistent in demanding answers pertaining to the what, why, and how. An applicant's financial status is of interest only if the prospective grantee plans on taking dependents abroad; if so, proof of personal ability to finance transportation and maintenance is required. A good-health record is important. Language proficiency is essential. In the creative arts, candidates applying for non-English-speaking countries must at the very least give evidence of having started intensive study of the required language at the time of application. One of the intrinsic purposes of these grants, after all, is to increase mutual understanding between the young talents of the United States and their contemporaries and seniors abroad.

Candidates may be judged ineligible for several reasons. They cannot apply for study in a country in which they have spent more than three consecutive months during the three years prior to May 1 of the year of the award. (Service in the armed forces is an exception to this rule, and, all other qualifications being equal,

Anyone who has already held a grant at the graduate-student level under the State Department educational exchange program automatically is ineligible. Employees of various government agencies and their immediate families should check with the Institute of International Education concerning their eligibility.

A young American painter recently returned from a Fulbright year in Germany said: "I know that in the field of painting, I and my American colleagues have and are creating a great respect for contemporary American painting by just being there and quietly working much harder and longer than the others. It was a fine experience to have the practice of expressing criticism of a painting and solidifying my views in German in front of an often skeptical audience."

And a sculptress in France wrote: "Aside from the museums and their glories, I benefited particularly from the sense that an artist in Europe, and subsequently in the rest of the world, belongs."

Reserve any coral (the roe, or eggs, found only in "hen" lobsters). Cut the lobster meat into neat pieces—not too small—and combine with the mayonnaise. Just enough to coat the meat lightly. Taste at this point for seasoning. It may need more salt, freshly ground pepper, or lemon juice.

Arrange lobster salad in a lettuce "bowl" with sliced cucumbers, black olives, sliced hard-cooked egg, and sweet red pepper strips in a pattern all around. Sprinkle top with a few well-drained capers and coral. Serve extra mayonnaise on the side.

Cold Lobster Mousse

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 cups chicken broth
Juice of 1 lemon
2 1½-pound lobsters, cooked
1¼ cups Green Mayonnaise
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Cherry tomatoes
Parsley

Combine the gelatin and broth in a saucepan, and heat until gelatin has dissolved. Cool. Stir in lemon juice.

Cut lobsters into nice pieces—not too small—and stir thoroughly into the mayonnaise along with the gelatin mixture, tomalley, and coral. Combine with the whipped cream. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Spoon into a 1-quart mold (a straight-sided soufflé dish is perfect). Arrange cherry tomatoes all around the rim, alternating with small sprigs of parsley. Chill in refrigerator until firm. Serve with a fresh watercress salad and buttered, toasted bread or hot biscuits.

To make Green Mayonnaise: Mix into ¾ cup mayonnaise (it should have a good, clean flavor without sweetness) ¾ to 1 cup finely chopped parsley, chives, watercress leaves, spinach, and 2 teaspoons fresh tarragon leaves or ½ teaspoon dried, crumbled fine.

The two recipes that follow are adapted from *French Provincial Cooking by Elizabeth David (Harper & Row), one of the most imaginative cookbooks available, by one of the most imaginative of cooks.

Lobster in Vermouth and Cream Sauce

2 1½-pound freshly boiled lobsters
2 tablespoons butter
1 shallot or the bulbs of 3 scallions, chopped fine
2 teaspoons flour
4 tablespoons dry vermouth
½ cup heavy cream
Salt
Freshly ground white pepper
Freshly ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard or the equivalent
1 tablespoon freshly grated Parmesan
Fresh bread crumbs

Remove all the meat from the large claws and tails of the split lobsters. Slice into neat pieces. Set aside.

Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan, add the chopped shallot or scallions and cook for a minute or two, but do not brown. Stir in the flour and cook until butter foams. Add the dry vermouth and cook over a moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture has thickened. Add the cream slowly, stirring all the time. Season with salt, pepper, and nutmeg to taste. Place the saucepan over very low heat (if necessary, over an asbestos mat) and simmer, a mere bubble, for 15 to 20 minutes, stirring at frequent intervals. Stir in the mustard and grated cheese. If sauce seems too thick, add more cream to make a good consistency.

Arrange the slices of lobster in a flat baking dish that can go to the table. Cover with the sauce. Sprinkle bread crumbs over the top and dot with butter. Heat in a preheated 300° F. oven for 15 minutes. Just before serving, slide under a preheated broiler only long enough to brown the top delicately. Serves 4.

Cold Lobster Sauce

Because the flavor of this sauce depends to a large extent on the tomalley and coral, ask your fish monger for "hen" lobsters rather than male. (In the "hen," the pair of appendages nearest the body on the underside of the tail is soft and pliable, in the male hard and stiff.)

To 2 minced shallots add ½ teaspoon soy sauce, all the tomalley and coral from 2 or 3 cooked lobsters, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon chopped tarragon leaves or ⅛ teaspoon dried, crumbled, 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard or the equivalent, 2 teaspoons Pernod, 4 tablespoons olive oil, the juice of one lemon, and salt to taste. Mix thoroughly. Makes about ¾ cup.

La Popotte's Bouillabaisse Marseillaise with Aïoli Croutons

2 cups good strong olive oil
4 leeks, thoroughly washed, coarsely chopped
1½ large onions, skins on, coarsely chopped
1 whole fennel, root only, coarsely chopped
2 whole heads garlic, unpeeled, crushed
1 teaspoon saffron threads
2 pounds fish bones, cleaned
2 pounds smelts, cleaned
1 big teaspoon thyme
4 bay leaves
Salt and Pepper
3 cans (6-ounce size) tomato paste
4 1-pound lobsters
3 to 4 heaping tablespoons flour
¼ cup Pernod
8 pieces eel, cut in 5-inch lengths
8 pieces striped bass, cut in 1½-inch steaks
8 pieces halibut, tail end, cut in 6-ounce steaks
3 pounds mussels, well scrubbed

Heat 1½ cups olive oil in a very large kettle. When hot, add leeks, onions (skins are left in for color), and fennel. Cook over moderate heat until vegetables have softened but are not brown. Add garlic, saffron, fish bones, smelts, thyme, bay leaves, salt, pepper. When mixture just starts to stick to the bottom of the pan, add tomato paste and enough water to cover. Give it a good stir. Bring to a boil, then simmer about ½ hour or until fish bones fall apart. Strain through a colander into a kettle. Bring broth to a boil, plunge in lobsters and after water comes to a boil again, cook 15 minutes. Remove from broth, lay them on their stomachs and split in two, from head to tail with a heavy knife, crack claws, and set aside.

Heat remaining oil in a saucepan. When it begins to sizzle a bit, stir in flour and cook, stirring constantly, about 3 minutes. Stir into the strained broth until smooth. Taste for seasoning; then add the Pernod.

Arrange all the pieces of fish flat in a very large fireproof dish, at least 5 inches deep, with mussels and split lobsters on top. Pour the hot broth over all and cook, covered, over a moderate heat until fish leaves the bones and mussels have opened. Take right to the table and serve immediately to 8 or 10.

To make Aïoli Croutons: Crush or mince very fine 4 peeled garlic cloves, then mix with a pinch of saffron into 1 cup heavy, unsweetened commercial mayonnaise. Toast small rounds of French bread, and butter generously with the garlic mayonnaise. Place two croutons in each hot soup plate and serve the Bouillabaisse on top, mashing the croutons into the broth. A few extra croutons are nice to have on hand for second helpings.

La Popotte, 232 East 58th St., New York, serves this excellent Bouillabaisse Marseillaise every Friday night. ■

snaps and cracks in the wind. A flag made of bunting doesn't fly so energetically. In daily use, it will last six to eight months. If you fly it only on fair-weather weekends and holidays, it can last for years.

Keeping a flag in repair is important. The bar-tack stitch at the corners on the fly end of the flag (the side farthest from the pole) are the weak points. If it is not retacked immediately when it starts to come loose, the flag can quickly be whipped to shreds.

To fly a flag, you need a staff or a pole. Ones made of wood, steel, aluminum, and fiber glass are available. Wood and steel poles require painting, but it doesn't take a steeplejack. An extension ladder will service almost any house pole.

The most popular flagpole height for a house is 20′. A flag looks best if its length is 25 percent of the pole height, so a 3′ by 5′ flag is just right for a 20′ pole. A pole that high, in aluminum, costs about $140. It includes an extra 2′ of length that fits into a socket in the ground. The pole is in two sections and is easily removed for storing or transporting. It tapers from 3″ at the bottom to 2″ at the top. A somewhat more slender three-section 15′ pole sells for about $55. Poles usually include a ball for the top, halyard, cleats, sheaves, and other hardware.

An eagle at the top of the pole instead of a ball can be a handsome feature. It may cost as much as the pole. A copper-and-bronze eagle with an 18″ wing span sells for $144. One with a 12″ wing span costs $70. A weather vane, topped by a flying eagle on a ball, adds about $30 more.

Holders, wall brackets, and lawn sockets offer quick and inexpensive means of displaying the flag. Most of these cost from $2 to $10. Poles to fit them are in about the same price range. A complete set of porch or lawn socket, pole, ornament, and flag can cost as little as $6. A 3′ by 5′ flag usually flies from a 6′ pole, a 4′ by 8′ flag from an 8′ pole.

It makes sense to fly a flag where you can see and enjoy it most. That's why a weekend or vacation retreat is a natural. And having a flagpole, we can run up, on appropriate occasion, decorative, nautical, weather, cocktail, and other all-in-fun flags.

Follow your natural instincts and you're unlikely to go wrong on how to treat our national flag with fitting respect. Run it up the pole briskly, lower it slowly. Never let it trail on anything. Fly the flag between sunrise and sunset and only in good weather. It is permissible to fly it after sunset only if you illuminate it.

If you are displaying a group of flags of less than national character, ours should be at their center and higher than the rest. When the flags of other countries and the United Nations are displayed, all should be at the same height and about equal size.

The proper procedure for flying a flag at half-staff is to raise it to the top of the pole, then lower it into position. When the flag is taken down, first raise it briefly to the peak. On Memorial Day, the flag is flown at half-staff until noon, then at the peak.

A flag may be displayed flat against a wall. Its canton should be in the upper left-hand corner as you face it. It may be hung vertically from a line, as long as it is extended and free. But it should not be used over a ceiling.

Never use it as anything other than a flag. It is not wrapping for a gift, a cover for a cushion, or material for a costume. For those purposes get red, white, and blue bunting. Never use the flag for advertising or commercial purposes. When it's no longer in good condition, get a new one. ■ recently fashion has—in art—shown a capacity to injure and distort its origins. As Nadia Gould, one of the artists represented, once wrote: "My ideal would be to sell and remain unknown. I think art should not be vulgarized. It takes a public as sensitive as the artists to respond to good abstract art."

All the artists whose work is shown on page 73 are members of a new generation pushing its way into maturity. Do they have anything in common, as, for instance, the abstract expressionist generation that matured 20 years ago so obviously had?

Wyeth—who painted his stealthily growing mushrooms lit by an artificial moon when he was 17—is a maverick, bringing traditional skills and a highly original eye to his country experience. Unlike a great many prodigies, his future success lies completely in his own will to realize it. His talents are so great that he could begin to resent his responsibilities toward them—and his real interior struggle, and thus maturity as an artist, lie ahead.

The other artists are unalike. They make up a diverse group in which there seems to be little relationship between the halted drifts of paint, puckered and luminous against dark backgrounds, of the Irish artist Anne Madden; the cool spray-gun virtuosity of Akawie from Berkeley, California, whose painting is based on an architectural plan; the ghostly Fokkers and Spads of his friend Hartman, also from Berkeley, who firmly pushes the obsolete past into the living present; Merkin's candy-goodie space, full of abruptly fractured nostalgia and comic-book urgency; Ryman's grave unsheathing of surfaces; Higgins' deeply felt switches between two and three dimensions, until his spatial virtuosity breaks down reality and illusion into a transillusion, a single experience.

The styles are different, the intentions distinct. But whatever the style or subject, the majority of these works has an acute sense of the exquisite, the pretty, the subtle. Beauty has made a comeback. It is no longer a word that makes people sick. Yet the major point for me, in this selection, is that behind these goodies, beneath the cosmetic delights, are real faces and tough minds.

Modern art now is more directly involved with society than it has ever been. As one critic said, the war of the classes is now conducted on the level of taste. And the artist is invited to become an entertainer, a buffoon, a happy child in the social playpen. The valuable thing about these artists is that they preserve unyielding standards of excellence while being responsible to the observer. They generously offer much, but they completely resist debasement into decoration. All these new talents demand respect. Whether they get it or not depends as always on the capacity of the public to give it to them. ■ should be Mr. Bernstein who presided when America's oldest orchestra occupied the first home of its own, Philharmonic Hall in Lincoln Center.

Appropriately, too, Mr. Bernstein's activities have been directed largely toward building young audiences and encouraging young talent. The Philharmonic's Young People's Concerts are an old tradition, but it had not been traditional for the music director himself to lead them. These events are so important to Mr. Bernstein that, even though he took a sabbatical from his regular concert duties during the season just past, he did not forego any of the Young People's Concerts.

During these programs, familiar now to television audiences throughout America, Mr. Bernstein presents young soloists and occasionally shares the conducting responsibilities with one or more of the three young conductors he appoints as his assistants each season. During the 1961-62 season, one of these assistants was the Japanese conductor Seiji Ozawa, who returned as assistant conductor of the Philharmonic during Mr. Bernstein's sabbatical year.

Mr. Ozawa, now only 29, is also the musical director of Chicago's Ravinia Festival, and this fall will begin his new duties as music director and conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He was graduated from the Toho School of Music in Tokyo, studied with Herbert von Karajan in Berlin, and has won an impressive array of awards on three continents. He has toured with the Philharmonic and conducted most of the major orchestras here, in Europe, and in Japan.

Despite his youth and his deceptively boyish appearance, Seiji Ozawa is warmly regarded and deeply respected by seasoned orchestra men, several of whom have likened him to the late Bruno Walter, both for his mature insights and his thorough grasp of his craft.

Lorin Maazel, an American born in suburban Paris and educated in this country, first attracted attention as a conductor at the age of nine. At eleven he was invited by Toscanini to conduct the NBC Symphony Orchestra. By the time he was 20, he had organized a string quartet and was associate conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony. At 30 he became the youngest conductor and the first American to conduct at the Bayreuth Festival, the sanctum sanctorum of Wagnerians.

Mr. Maazel now has conducted in Australia, Israel, South America, the Soviet Union, Japan, and virtually every musical center in Europe. He is a regular guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic and the Metropolitan Opera, and has made dozens of significant operatic and symphonic recordings in London, Vienna, Berlin, Tel Aviv, and Paris. His Fidelio with Birgit Nilsson (London Records) has inspired a good deal of critical enthusiasm, and he is the first conductor to record all six of Tchaikovsky's numbered symphonies (with the Vienna Philharmonic, London Records).

While some of his colleagues occasionally conduct from the keyboard, Mr. Maazel has appeared in the dual role of violinist-conductor in such works as Bach concertos and Stravinsky's L'Histoire du Soldat. Last year, at 34, he was named to succeed the late Ferenc Fricsay in the two most important musical posts in West Berlin, as musical director of both the Deutsche Oper and the Radio Symphony Orchestra (formerly the RIAS Orchestra).

When the Metropolitan Opera moves into its new home in Lincoln Center next year, the conductor on opening night will be Thomas Schippers, a tall, strikingly handsome young man from Kalamazoo, Michigan. The opera Walter Damrosch had conducted here at a younger age, but as a uest.) He records with the Philarmonic for Columbia Records, nd has recently recorded three Verdi operas for other companies: Macbeth, with Birgit Nilsson (London Records), La forza del estino, with Leontyne Price and Richard Tucker (RCA Victor), nd Il Trovatore, with Gabriella Tucci, Franco Corelli, et al (Angel).

István Kertész, the brilliant oung Hungarian recently named o succeed the late Pierre Monteux s conductor of the London Symhony Orchestra, has just turned 4. He has been musical direcor of the Cologne Opera for the ast few seasons, and continues o make his home in that city.

Mr. Kertész has visited this ountry twice, making his U.S. ebut four years ago with the Detroit Symphony and returning he following year to share conucting duties with Hans Schmidtsserstedt during the tour of the lorth German Radio Orchestra. One of the most active men on ondon Records' expanding roster f young talent, István Kertész as recorded symphonic works nd opera with the Vienna Philarmonic, the London Symphony, he Israel Philharmonic, and Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, rawing special praise for his way ith the Viennese classics and his ew set of Donizetti's comic masterpiece Don Pasquale, as well as he music of his compatriot Zoltán Kodály.

Zubin Mehta, the dynamic and excitingly attractive young man from Bombay who is conductor of both the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Montreal Symphony, is still looking forward to his 29th birthday. When he was barely into his 20's, he was hailed by Josef Krips as "the next Toscanini." His musical roots are not far to seek: his father, now a violinist in the Curtis Quartet, was formerly conductor of the Bombay Symphony.

The younger Mehta took over the Montreal orchestra shortly after his U.S. debut in New York's Lewisohn Stadium five years ago. He took his orchestra to the Soviet Union in the spring of 1962 (it was the first Canadian orchestra to visit that country), and in the fall of the same year assumed his duties in Los Angeles. In addition to his regular transcontinental commuting, he is to conduct at the Metropolitan Opera this winter.

Mr. Mehta also has the distinction of having conducted the opening events in the two newest concert halls in North America, La Grande Salle in Montreal's Place des Arts in 1963, and the Los Angeles Pavilion last December. A few days after the latter event, RCA Victor recorded part of the program (in the Pavilion itself). The record, containing brilliantly colored orchestral showpieces by Richard Strauss (Till Eulenspiegel) and Respighi (Roman Festivals), is to be released in October.

The list does not end with Z for Zubin. Mention must be made of the 34-year-old Soviet conductor Gennadi Rozhdestvensky, the 28-year-old Italian Pierino Gamba (who, like Lorin Maazel, won the attention of Toscanini while still in short pants), and an impressive young Spaniard, Rafael Frühbeck de Burgos, who has just turned 31.

Such men as these have shown eloquently that Leonard Bernstein is no isolated exception but the pathbreaker for a new era in which youth is assuming ever greater dominion in musical affairs. And one of the gratifying side effects of this vitalizing process is that it can hardly fail to attract more and more young listeners to a serious involvement with music.

With such a source of mutually encouraging artists and audiences, the future of the art has seldom looked brighter. ■

"We air conditioned our 7-room home for just $975."

Mr. & Mrs. M. L. Humphreys of Kansas City, Kansas were surprised by the reasonable cost of General Electric Central Air Conditioning. "Our home has 1,832 square feet of living area," Mr. Humphreys observes, "and the two-ton unit we had in the living room before didn't begin to cool the rest of the house. Our G-E system keeps every room at the same even temperature."

"I have sinus trouble," Mrs. Humphreys remarks, "and I was really afraid central air conditioning would make it worse. Actually, central air conditioning has relieved it. My head stays clear as a bell. It's wonderful."

"We love to entertain," continues Mrs. Humphreys, "but when the temperature got to be over 100° and the humidity high, it used to be almost impossible. Now, we have friends in all summer long."

If you have forced-air heat—as the Humphreys do—you, too, can enjoy General Electric Central Air Conditioning at a very modest price. Call your G-E dealer for a free survey and installation estimate. Ask him, too, about his easy financing terms. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under "Air Conditioning Equipment."

potatoes either, because they have a peculiar taste, and you know they have been reheated. Peas, carrots, and a lot of other vegetables can be reheated and it doesn't make any difference. But I tell you, there is a way to keep boiled potatoes. Cook them something like 20 minutes or touch them with the point of a knife to see if they are cooked. Then, just add a big cup of cold water to stop the cooking. You put them on the side: it doesn't hurt them, as long as they don't get cold. There is, of course, a limit to the time they can stand. When you cook potatoes at home, after they are finished cooking dry them off quickly over a flame or shake the pot out the window.

This reporter noted during the course of the conversation that reference was frequently made to using a knife for testing, whereas most cookbooks instruct the cook to test with a fork.

JEAN-CLAUDE: If you feel, say, potatoes, with a small, sharp-pointed knife, it makes only a thin hole. It doesn't hurt the potato and you don't see it. A fork doesn't go right in because its ends are thick, and you make several holes. When you test potatoes or any other vegetable with a knife you can feel—and I really mean feel—it better. It's a matter of esthetics, too.

THE WHISK, WHIP, OR FOUET: No tool is used in the professional kitchen more than the wire whisk, whip, or fouet. Fouets come in many sizes. Once you have learned to use a whisk you will become as addicted to it as the professional chef is.

JEAN-CLAUDE: There are basically two kinds of fouet: one, to whip cream and egg whites, which is much, much bigger that the other kind, and the pieces of steel are very thin and "whippy."

JACQUES: Yes, the strings themselves are sort of fluffy, you know, so when you beat cream or eggs, the air goes in.

JEAN-CLAUDE: The other kind of fouet is smaller, stronger, and is used for beating something firmer, like a Sauce Bechamel. If you whip the sauce correctly, you will not have any lumps. But you must beat very vigorously just when you put the liquid in. You cannot do the same thing with a spatula or wooden spoon. Also, when you are thickening a sauce with beurre manié, you must use a fouet or the beurre manié will stay in lumps.

JACQUES: There's something more about beating egg whites. When you finish beating the eggs, you cannot leave them just like that for even five minutes or they will "fall down." You have to keep turning them slowly or they will break up and you cannot bring them back.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Another thing: to make the egg white beat up better, put a very thin pinch of salt in at the beginning.

JACQUES: Or, maybe, two or three drops of lemon juice.

PÂTÉS: One of the most familiar of French foods to Americans and one that seems to take on many different flavors and forms is the pâté. Every French restaurant, here and abroad, has its pâté maison.

JACQUES: Well, they all call it pâté maison. Actually, a pâté is just a loaf.

JEAN-CLAUDE: But it's called a pâté maison because every house makes it in its own way. You find it almost all over New York written pâté, and actually there is not one which is a true pâté because a pâté should be in a crust, you know.

JACQUES: In a pâté dough. What they call here pâté is more like a terrine. You know, a sort of loaf usually made of half pork and half veal, or half pork and duck, or venison or chicken. And you call it by the name of the thing you add to the pork. If duck, Terrine de Caneton. Pâtés are very much appreciated in France and they are a lot of work to make properly. Here, in this country, a pâté is not much appreciated because it is considered only a loaf, a sort of a dressed-up meat loaf.

VEGETABLES: The French have a way with vegetables, and the method of cooking frequently seems to run counter to our modern American tendency to use very little water and a tightly covered pan. This is, essentially, steaming.

JACQUES: Green vegetables, especially, we cook in lots of water with lots of salt, and we never cover them. Then we boil them very fast and refresh them even faster. I'll explain what I mean by refreshing. Take, for example, string beans. You put them in boiling water—just a handful at a time—so the water keeps boiling. You boil them very hard and when they are cooked, but still firm, you put them in fresh, cold water to stop the cooking fast. But don't put them under a faucet because it runs too hard and will break delicate vegetables. So you wrap a towel around the faucet and let it hang into the pan itself. The water goes in the towel and filters onto the vegetables. The cold water not only stops the cooking but it keeps the vegetables very green. Afterwards you drain and reheat them very quickly in boiling water or hot butter. By refreshing the vegetables like this, they are going to look nice—very green, very firm. Just the way they looked when you stopped them cooking. And this way of handling vegetables, I think, is one of the biggest differences in cooking between our countries.

JEAN-CLAUDE: But the vegetables for you are not very important, no? Here you boil them and put them on a plate just like that, plain, and stick a piece of butter on them. We do so many things with vegetables. Hundreds of things, I am sure.

CAKES AND DESSERTS: Jean-Claude, an all-around chef who specializes in pastries, found many significant differences between American and French cakes—particularly the sponge cake which, in France, is called gênoise. And this leads to an intriguing discussion of the French approach to desserts.

JEAN-CLAUDE: The gênoise is one of the most important basic French cakes and with it we make a lot of different cakes—maybe fifty kinds. It is really about the same as your sponge cake but a little heavier, because we sometimes put butter into it and almond flour. In the gênoise we never use baking powder. We only use the eggs to make it lift, and we warm the eggs a little.

JACQUES: In France, if a woman receives some guests she will make a big cake to serve in the afternoon with coffee or tea. Sort of a gênoise. Very colorful. Terrific. But for dinner she will serve an entremet, like Pommes Bonne Femme or crêpes.

JEAN-CLAUDE: Yes, or some other kind of entremet.

JACQUES: Entremet you don't know in this country. It is a dessert, but not as heavy as cake. Gênoise is not very often served for dinner but for tea or for an anniversary or a birthday.

JEAN-CLAUDE: In France when you eat, it's usually for two or three hours, and if you bring a big sponge cake at the end, it is very hard to swallow. So we have very fancy small pastries that are just one bite, and nothing else.

JACQUES: Actually, a heavy cake at the end of the meal is something shocking. You have to have something more delicate, like an entremet. It must fit with the rest of the menu—be part of the whole thing—something imaginative. Maybe something that breaks the uniformity, something swift.

JEAN-CLAUDE: To me, an entremet means a soufflé (March issue, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL) or a soufflé glacé, crêpes suzette, fruit dessert, a *bavarois, or a sort of rice pudding called Riz Imperatrice.

JACQUES: Or an ice cream . . . a bombe. You know something, the ice creams are much better in this country than in France.

JEAN-CLAUDE: I wonder why they put "French Ice Cream" all over because we do not have such good ice cream in France.

JACQUES: We have some, but mostly in restaurants. French people just don't buy ice cream. Nobody's used to eating it.

JEAN-CLAUDE: I think ice cream started in China about 3,000 years ago. They put fresh fruit or wine and snow together. Something like a sherbet, I suppose.

JACQUES: Then the Chinese gave it to the Italians, the Italians to the French, and now the Americans make it the best.

Here are the young chefs' recipes for a few of the dishes:

Snails Forestière

40 large (2 to 2½ inches) white mushrooms
Vegetable oil
Salt
Pepper
Snail butter (recipe below)
2 cans (4½-ounce size) snails, drained

Wash the mushrooms under tepid water, dry, and break off the stalks right to the crown of the mushroom (the stalks can be turned into a good mushroom soup). Coat the mushroom caps and 2 large pans lightly with oil. Salt and pepper the mushrooms. Place the mushrooms in the pans, crown side up, and bake in a preheated 450° F. oven for 10 to 12 minutes. They should still be firm. Cool.

To prepare Snails Forestière, spoon about a teaspoon of Snail Butter (below) in each mushroom cap, place a snail on top, and cover with another teaspoon of the butter. Place in preheated 450° F. oven and bake 15 minutes.

Serve 6 to a person on very hot plates with some of the butter sauce from the pans spooned over the mushrooms. Accompanied by loads of good, crusty bread and followed by a salad, this makes a fine luncheon or supper dish.

Note: Snails Forestière can be prepared ahead of time and refrigerated or frozen. If refrigerated, allow 3 to 4 minutes' more time to bake; if frozen, bake 30 minutes in a preheated 450° F. oven.

Snail Butter

1½ cups (3 sticks) butter, softened
2 or 3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
½ cup finely chopped parsley
3 shallots, finely chopped
1 tablespoon finely chopped blanched almonds
1 tablespoon Pernod (optional)
Salt
Pepper

Work all the ingredients into the softened butter thoroughly, with salt and pepper to taste.

Tomatoes Provençal

Wash and core, but do not peel, 6 firm, ripe tomatoes. Cut them in two, against the core, and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Sauté in very hot oil only long enough for the tomatoes to brown slightly on each side. Arrange on a baking tray, cut side up. Sprinkle with fresh bread crumbs and place in a preheated 450° F. oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, chop 2 or 3 garlic cloves very fine and mix with some finely chopped parsley.

Melt 4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter in a pan to noisette or brown. Add the parsley and garlic. Heat only until butter foams. About 30 seconds.

Pour sauce over tomatoes and serve at once.

Truite Amandine

Trout (one per person)—about ½ pound
Salt
Pepper
Milk
Flour
Butter
Vegetable oil
Toasted, slivered almonds
Lemon juice
Chopped parsley

Broadly speaking, the brook trout available today in the open

Britain and Ireland, and by the time we left for France, both the joys and the miseries of camping in the off-season were quite plain. Let us count a few obvious blessings: We traveled close to the land. We could feel the changing seasons. We could sit and watch the sunset. For very little we ate well and deliciously—regional sausages and cheese, fresh bread, and local wine. The money we saved on hotels and regular meals made possible glorious splurges on the finest cuisine the country had to offer, and let us be delightfully pampered on the one night a week we spent in a hotel in real beds and with hot baths. Had we spent all our nights in hotels, some of our memories of palatial splendor would no doubt resume their proper perspective.

We never had trouble finding a camp site—indeed, we enjoyed being alone every night. (Most European travel information bureaus publish lists of established camp sites, which are well marked with road signs in the town centers.) When no camp ground was open nearby, we simply asked a farmer if we could pitch our tent in a corner of his pasture, and because it was off-season, no one ever refused us.

We met more people than we possibly could have by staying in a hotel and passing on the next day. At our very first camp site, outside Cambridge, our fellow camper became a fast friend, and on our return to London insisted that we stay with his family for two weeks. Near Killin, in Scotland, a farmer and his wife brought us out of the drizzle and into their kitchen for homemade shortbread and scalding sweet coffee. We camped on the very edge of Loch Ness in the field of a retired gentleman farmer, comfortably close to an RAF squadron on weekend field maneuvers —"comfortably" close because belief in the Loch Ness monster is no joke there, and one cannot help feeling a trifle uneasy at the sight of the nearly black, wickedly cold, still water. A French traveling salesman who lives in a trailer, invited us in out of the December cold for coffee, cookies and cheer, which lasted the better part of a bleak Sunday.

For all the benefits of traveling off-season, do not mistake it for an idyll. Camping is cold. As fall blew into winter, our gear increased. Sweatsuits replaced flannel pajamas, and a pressurized gas heater became a necessity.

The same mixture of delight and difficulty applies to seeing Europe in the off-season, as to camping in it. The short winter day is a major problem. By the end of November in England, it is totally dark by 4 o'clock, and this cuts down on sightseeing to an alarming degree.

Although many of the great private homes which are open to tourists in summer were closed, we were lucky to see some on the strength of our credentials as traveling architecture students. On the days when we wandered through the grand and stately rooms, we were fervently glad to have come at the wrong time.

Museums and galleries display not the wonders-of-the-past-for-tourists, but often current works. The Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam has the world's greatest collection of Van Goghs—over 300—but only 20 were on view when we hurried there at the end of our trip.

If the museums were showing collections to interest their citizens so were the theaters and the opera. We were in Europe "in season" in a very real sense.

We had to face, with regret, the hardest lesson of travel: You can see many countries in haste—and superficially—in a short time: you can see a few countries in depth in a longer time: but you simply cannot see a lot of countries in depth. Minds will boggle, interest will flag, and fascination will wane.

Our stay in southern France was the last of our unhurried experiences. We lived in a small and prosperous French village in the pre-Alps above Cannes, in a rented house that looked out over a valley and the Mediterranean. We had the rare chance to meet and make friends with Frenchmen, who are rather difficult to get to know quickly.

At the end of February, when it was time to leave, we realized that we would have to perform major surgery on our plans for the remainder of the trip. Regretfully, we relegated Spain, North Africa and Greece to "next time."

After France we joined the ranks of the rushed. Our month in Italy was scheduled to exhaustion. Perhaps because we spoke only broken Italian, perhaps because Italy was suffering its worst winter since 1789, and because camping was apparently neither so organized nor so accepted, as in Britain and France, we decided in favor of the small hotel. We saw Italy as many tourists see it, and we did not gain the same feeling for the country and the people that we gained earlier.

Because we stayed in hotels in Italy, and because we hurried in Italy, while our memories are delightful, they are conventional. But of Great Britain and France, where we camped unmolested by even the first scouting parties of the vast armies of tourists to come, we have a richer store: Chatsworth, ancestral home of the Dukes of Devonshire, where the walks, gardens, fountains and grottoes were ours alone; Clovelly, a tiny and untouched fishing village whose one steep cobbled street is solid with tourists in the summer, while our only companions were three old salts, smelling the change of weather in wind; Scotland's Culzean Castle, by the brothers Adam, where the guide was a little disappointed that we were only two; the great Rock of Cashel in Ireland, a ruined cathedral fortress, where the echoes of our footsteps in the honeycombed walls startled the rooks who nest there; solitude on the Normandy beaches, where poignant reminders brought home to us the heroism, the horror, the tragedies of the Allied landings; ten undisturbed minutes smiling back at the Mona Lisa; Mont Saint Michel, host to 7,000 tourists a day in summer, whose breathtaking complexities we shared only with the winter wind; the chateaux of the Loire, where we always had a personal guide and special bits of the family history; Pompeii, where we seemed almost to interrupt the dead in their daily errands; and Paestum, ruined Greek colony, where we nearly surprised the gods among the wildflowers which grow about their temples.

We would not have had it any other way. ■

Shh! Let her be.
The beauty of Montina Corlon simply can't be stolen.

Even the best copy of a Montina Vinyl Corlon floor is nowhere near the real thing. Oh, she could imitate that mellow coloring, that random-chip design and that pebbly texture. But she could never put the whole subtle blend all together . . . never achieve Montina's depth. (Interestingly, you can look deep down between the chips; you can feel its gentle, nubbly texture.)

No. Larceny is futile. We can't blame her for trying, of course, although it does seem a waste of lipstick. Especially when anyone can obtain a Montina Corlon floor—quite openly—from any number of flooring stores. If you'd like to see a completely genuine sample of Montina Corlon first, simply write to Armstrong, 6508 Atkins Ave., Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

In Canada, write to Armstrong, Dept. 85-H, Box 919, Montreal, P.Q. Floor shown, style 86705. Montina and Corlon are registered trademarks of Armstrong Cork Company. Floor design copyrighted by Armstrong.

Warmly remembered days coolly recreated by Lennox

Lennox air conditioning echoes a perfect day.

We call it "Nature's Freshness."

It is summer, wrung dry of summer's wetness.
With summer's heat cooled.
Its noises stilled.
Its dirt locked out.

Lennox is freshened air in gentle motion. Warmed against winter's chill. Moistened to soften winter's dryness.

It is freshness filtered through a blanket of spun glass.
Free of dust, dirt and lint.

Make Nature's Freshness yours all year. Total comfort.

You don't have to be feminine to enjoy Culligan soft water

Everybody enjoys it. Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers. Truck drivers, millionaires, actresses, infants. Everybody. There is a definite reason for this. Soft water contains no hardness elements such as calcium, magnesium, or dissolved rock. It is sparkling, silky-smooth water that cooperates with soap to give relaxing, refreshing, thoroughly-cleansing tubs of enjoyment. One way to have soft water is by collecting rain. The best way is by installing one of our water softening appliances. A Culligan provides an unlimited supply of pure, fresh, filtered soft water from every faucet in your home—automatically. For every single household use. Bathing, laundering, dishes, shampooing, cooking, cleaning. So call and say "Hey Culligan Man!" It will take him just a few moments to get dressed.

Automatic Models — you can buy or rent them. Portable [illegible] with no investment [illegible]

The oven in this Frigidaire Range is one miserable looking mess ...but a mess you never touch! No more backbreaking scrubbing, no more nail-splitting scouring to get rid of even extra heavy soil like this. (We actually used a variety of meat fats, cherry pie filling and starch, baked on at 450° for 2 hours.)

unretouched photograph

This oven was cleaned—just as you see it—in one normal cycle. All that remains of the soil is a slight trace of ash, barely visible in the photo above. This ash will whisk away. Not only does this Frigidaire Range clean the oven electrically, but also the oven racks and cooking unit drip bowls. What a blessing!

The Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven cleans itself...yet this range costs only about $340!

Q. What happens to the dirt?

A. The Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven heats up to about 900°. At this temperature, baked-on grease and oven soil are turned into loose ash and vapor.

Q. How can it clean the racks and drip bowls?

A. Frigidaire uses a special heat-resistant porcelain enamel for both the oven liner and cooking unit drip bowls. Consequently, all can be cleaned electrically, automatically.

Further, Frigidaire has even designed oven racks that get cleaned right along with the rest of the oven.

Q. Is there any hand-cleaning left to do?

A. Possibly none at all... possibly two small jobs. First, this process can only clean what's subjected to high heat inside the oven. So, if the facings outside the oven are soiled, wipe them off beforehand. Second, whisk out the small amount of loose ash that may remain after cleaning.

The messy cleaning has all been done for you. You've no need for chemical oven cleaners, ammonia, steel wool, rubber gloves or a double-jointed backbone.

Q. Do you need an engineering degree to work this oven?

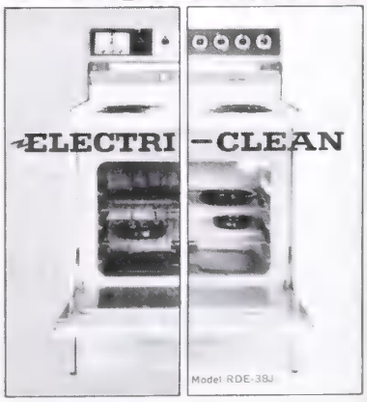
A. Certainly not! All you do is set the "clean" lever, then turn the "start" knob. Three hours later the cleaning cycle is complete. (After two hours of heat, the oven shuts off automatically and cools down for an hour.)

Q. What about safety features?

A. As soon as the temperature rises above broiling heat, the new Frigidaire Electri-clean Oven double-locks itself. It cannot be re-opened until the temperature returns to conventional oven heat.

What's more, Frigidaire uses extra insulation, so this range can be installed flush with wood cabinets. Also, the electrical system and high heat process of this range meet the safety requirements of Underwriters Laboratories.

Q. How expensive is it to operate?



A. This full sized oven cleans itself for about the price of a cup of coffee. And, what a truly welcome relief from hours of drudgery this "small change" buys!

Q. The price...only about $340.

A. The exact price is determined by the dealer. See your Frigidaire dealer for his price and terms.

Acrilan is the one that begins where wool leaves off.

One swatch of carpet is wool pile. The other is Acrilan® acrylic pile.

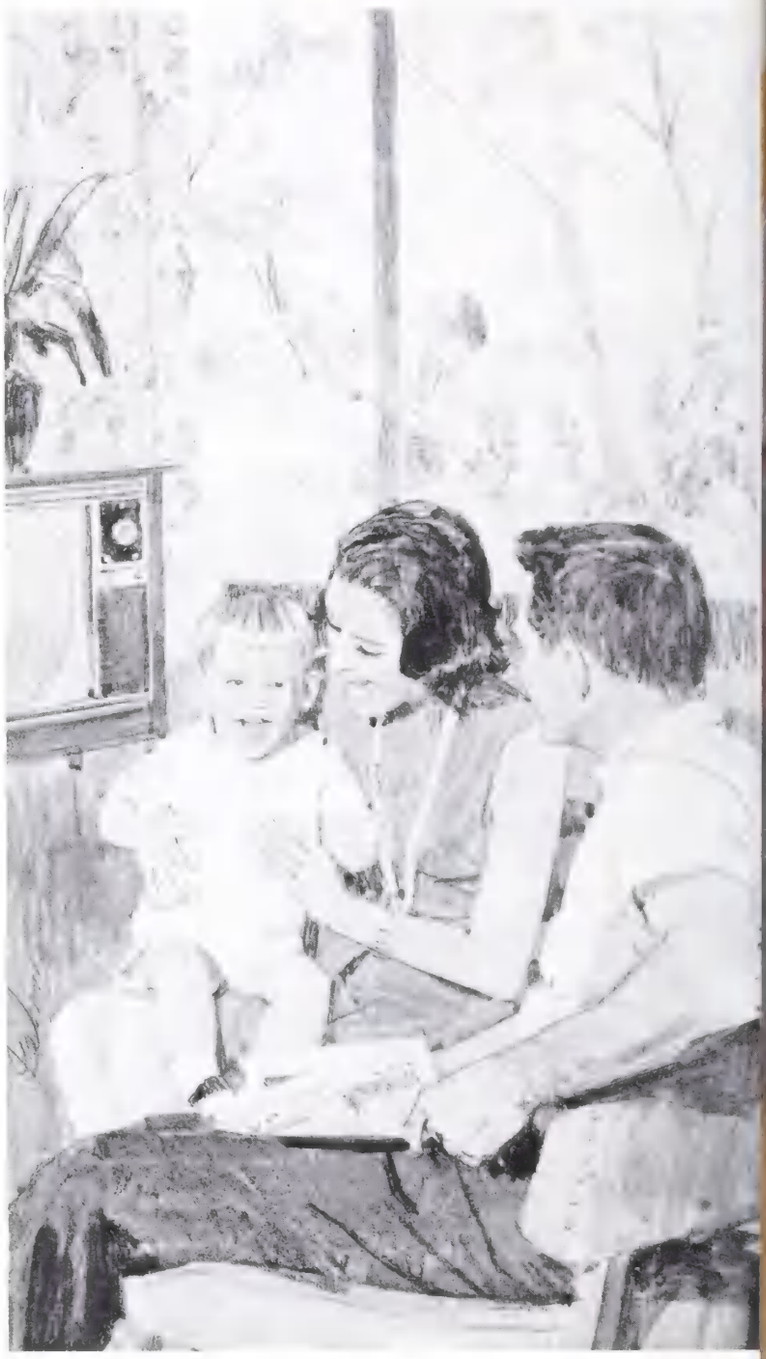
See what wool is up against?

Acrilan was created, deliberately, to look like wool. And feel like wool.

And then go on where wool leaves off.

Acrilan is more resilient than wool. It's less crushable. Longer wearing. And much easier to keep clean.

It's born mothproof. And mildewproof. And non-allergenic.



Even if all it offered was the soft look and rich touch of wool, it would be quite a carpet.

Look for the red Acrilan "A". Found on better carpets everywhere.

Clean, modern Gas heat and cooling can save you hundreds of dollars a year!

In cold snaps and hot spells—all through the year—you keep on saving money when you heat and cool with Gas! For clean, modern heating and cooling, Gas makes the big difference . . . costs less, too. And upkeep on Gas equipment is lower—there are fewer moving parts to wear out. If you're buying or building a home, specify Gas. (8 out of 10 new homeowners do, wherever natural Gas is available.) If you already have a Gas warm air heating system, find out how reasonable the cost is of adding Gas cooling. Your local Gas company or heating contractor will gladly give you the details.

Does your home have any of these six common heating and cooling problems?

Castle Neuschwanstein, Original Owner-Manager: King Ludwig II of Bavaria
Architect-Engineers: Hofbaudirektor von Riedl, Hoftheatermaler Jank

1 In any split level, warm air tends to rise, leaving cooler air in lower rooms.

2 Separate living and sleeping areas obviously require different temperatures . . . warm in the living areas, cooler for sleeping.

3 Large glass areas cause inside temperatures to vary with outside weather changes . . . even with double-paned windows.

4 With a spread-out floor plan, sun, shade and wind in different areas cause widely differing heating and cooling needs.

5 Rooms over unheated areas such as garages or dungeons often have cold floors and walls.

6 A finished basement, because it is below ground level, places unusual demands on heating and cooling systems.

No matter how modern your castle is, chances are it has one or more of these same problems. In fact, it surely does if it was built with a medieval heating and cooling system that counts on just one thermostat to control comfort everywhere.

The solution is zone control . . . dividing your home into two or more areas, with a Honeywell thermostat in each. Just select the best temperature for each zone, and the separate thermostats will control your heating or heating-cooling system to give you all the comfort you paid for. The cost of zoning a home depends on how many zones you need. But in most cases...it's just pennies a day.

Your heating and cooling contractor can tell you all about the comfort, convenience and low cost of zoning. Talk to him before you buy or remodel. And right now, be sure to send the coupon for free literature on zoning more comfort into your home.

On the problem of appraisals

The Smithsonian's rose-point wedding veil, worn by generations of royal Hapsburg brides, was evaluated at $70,000 by Mme. Helen Albert, 760 Madison Ave., N.Y.C., an example of her authority as a lace expert. If she judges your handmade treasures from a photograph, her evaluation will so state. If the picture you submit doesn't "read" well, she'll ask you to send the actual lace. To appraise, she charges two percent of the value of a piece.

Judging such antique textiles and needlework as block-printed toile de Jouy chintzes or 17th-century stumpwork is the specialty of Eugene Sussel, 1929 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Penna. He appraises 18th-century hand-loomed brocades or brocatelles, needlepoint or crewel pieces, old bell pulls, historic handkerchiefs, or any such rarity (except laces). Send photograph (preferably in color), dimensions, descriptions. The fee is $10 for appraisal of a piece worth $100 or under.

If you have a precious bibelot—snuff, pill, beauty patch, toothpick, jewelry, or music boxes of gold, Oriental lacquer, fine porcelain, cloisonné and other enamels—and want it appraised, Herbert Trigger, 129 E. 57th St., N.Y.C. is your man. Through his hands pass every kind, from a $200 Battersea enamel snuff-box to a fabulous gold bonbonnière signed by Fabergé. With photographs, send rubbing of the markings. The fee is $5 for evaluations of around $600.

The modest silver basket dug out of an attic that turns out to be a rare bonbon dish signed by an early Georgian silversmith is a typical appraisal experience of Morris Rappoport, 58-30 150th St., Flushing, N.Y. An authority on silver, china, and glass, especially of revival-Tiffany glass that vanished half a century ago, he'll give these articles their first round of appraisal from photographs, rubbings of silver pattern, and hallmarks, descriptions of colors, and markings of porcelain, pottery, and glass. His fee is $1 to $2 each for a minimum of six items. Write to him before submitting articles.

Before you send a first edition of Oliver Twist, Johnson's Dictionary in its original form, or other book of value to Laurence Gomme, 122 Brown Rd., Scarsdale, N.Y., send a description of it. Give author, title, number, and size (of pages and illustrations, plain or colored); date (if none is on title page, give copyright date on reverse of title page); publisher, and place of publication. Describe condition, including stains or tears inside or out, and kind of binding (full leather, half-leather, cloth, or paper). If these vital statistics point to any real value, he'll ask you to send the book. Charges for appraisal will depend upon research involved.

For names of appraisers in 228 other fields, send $1 to the Appraisers Association of America, 510 Madison Ave., N.Y.C. for its Membership Directory. (Do not send photograph or article to this association, only to individual member-appraisers.)

FOOD NOTES By HELEN McCULLY

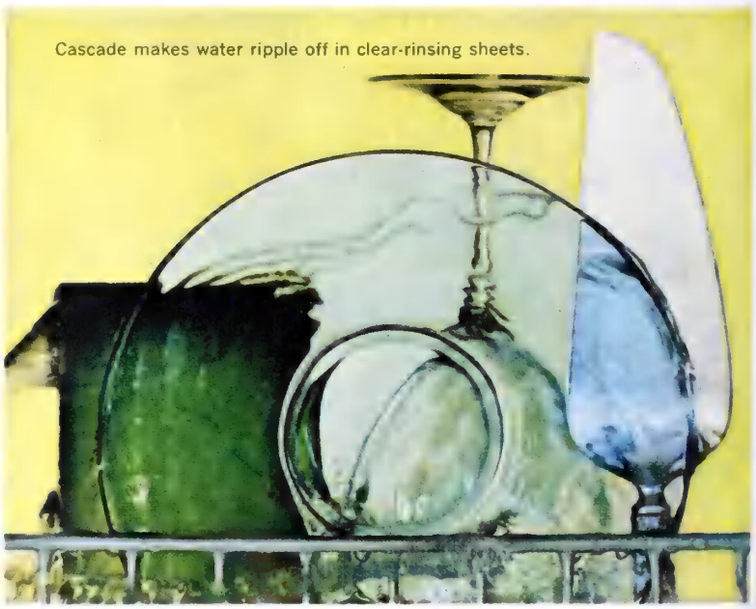
Are blueberries and huckleberries the same fruit? Yes and no. The size of the seeds determines the difference. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says: "Berries with small seeds are blueberries; those with 10 rather large seeds per berry are huckleberries." Huckleberries, however, only grow wild; blueberries are both wild and cultivated. Those in the markets now and through August are big, blue, and sweet.



What exactly is a nectarine? A "fuzzless" peach, though smaller, with firmer flesh, greater aroma, and a distinct flavor. It is known among botanists as a "sport," or mutation. The trees, leaves, and seeds of both the peach and nectarine are indistinguishable, and either tree may produce a fruit which is half peach, half nectarine, and another time produce a true peach, a fascinating, inexplicable horticultural phenomenon. Our native fruit is at its best in July and August. The delicate skin makes them unusually susceptible to damage, so, when buying, take care to choose plump, firm, well-colored fruit. Once ripe and ready to eat, store, covered, in the refrigerator. Nectarines may be used in any recipe calling for peaches.

How can you tell if a watermelon is ripe? Color is the best sign. It should be a deep, rich color (this varies from green to gray) on top with a yellowish underside. The old "thumping" test can be practiced only by experienced fruit vendors. Unlike other types of melons, often mistakenly served cold, watermelons are most refreshing when served chilled. In season in June, July, and August.

How long can you store fresh corn in the refrigerator? As short a time as possible after it has come from the garden or market. Four days is the maximum time if you want any of the milky goodness left but, as any corn lover knows, the sooner it is cooked, the sweeter and milkier it is. But note well, it must be refrigerated, wrapped in film bags, or it will lose half its flavor even in one hot, summer day. In buying corn, look for fresh, green husks; bright, plump, milky kernels. Fresh corn should be cooked without salt, which toughens it, 5 minutes, once the water has reached the boiling point.

Can you cook white peaches? You can, but as the Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association points out, "They are the most delicate of all peach varieties, with an exquisite flavor, and deserve to be eaten out of hand. Since the supply is limited, they are more costly than the yellow Freestones and Clings. The latter, because of their firmer texture, although excellent eating, are better for cooking." As a matter of interest, peaches are defuzzed mechanically these days, making them almost as smooth as nectarines. In buying peaches, choose those with a yellowish or creamy background (green indicates they were immature when picked) and firm to the touch. A "blush" may be present, but red color does not indicate the peach is edible. Avoid soft peaches unless they are to be eaten immediately. Peaches will ripen rapidly at room temperature, away from light, so if you want to slow down the process, refrigerate them, always remembering to serve them at room temperature to savor them at their best. June, July, and August are the peak months.

If your dishwasher detergent leaves ugly spots...

You need Cascade.

Only Cascade has Chlorosheen, the most remarkable spot-preventer there is. Chlorosheen actually makes water ripple right off in clear-rinsing sheets. Water drops can't form . . . ugly spots can't form. Dishes come out sparkling, spotless. And Cascade is completely safe for fine china patterns.

Every leading dishwasher manufacturer recommends Cascade. More women use it. And no wonder! Cascade outperforms every other leading dishwasher detergent. Try it!

Finding the right home without professional help can be like looking for a needle in a haystack.

All odds are against you.

The point is, see a Realtor.

Everybody has a tip or two on what to look for in a house. A Realtor® has all the tips—on value, location, financing, the market.

He knows as much about real estate as a chemist knows about test tubes or a dentist knows about teeth. You wouldn't fill your own prescription. You wouldn't make your own denture. It's just as foolish to buy or sell real estate without a Realtor's help.

What makes a Realtor different? He's a professional in real estate, a member of the local board and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. He subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics and to the highest standards of performance.

Looking for the right home on your own is like looking for a needle in a haystack. Looking for a Realtor is not. When you see this seal, you'll know that you've found one.

You get double the beauty with a wall of PPG High-Fidelity® Mirror. Maybe more.

Why limit your spectacular view to the window wall? This PPG High-Fidelity® mirror wall, adjacent to the window, doubles the size of the view. Or, with a mirror wall opposite the window, you can enjoy the view when you're looking away from the window. Don't let your view run out on you the second your back is turned. Enjoy it from any angle. And enjoy the extra brightness and spaciousness that a mirror wall brings to a room. Ask your designer to specify High-Fidelity Mirror. It's the sign of quality from PPG. The Return to the City

We asked newspapermen in 15 major cities to help us evaluate this trend. Here are some excerpts from their detailed reports to us

OSTON: "Apartment living in Boston has always had a special grace, and for a quarter-century, n apartment on Beacon Hill has been a sign of status.

"Since 1960, more than 4,000 amilies have moved into new luxry and garden-type apartments within the city. More than half of hese returned from the high-inome suburbs 15 to 30 miles away rom downtown. For Boston this s a movement of significance."

HICAGO: "Income level is a key o city living. If private schools an be paid for, and higher rents, family can be happy here. Land osts preclude town houses or sinle-family residences. The only own houses have to be supported y high-rise brothers. Chicago is uilding up one of the most beauiful central areas in the country. t will bring people downtown."

ETROIT: "The new large-scale uxury housing development, Lafayette Park, is now a 'port of ntry' into the city. One out of ve families there came directly rom other places.

"Here they rub shoulders, many f them for the first time, with eople of other races. Yet, in inome, education, child rearing, sthetic preference, and general ife style, this little community rovides more homogeneity than ost suburbs."

OS ANGELES: "One thousand perons a day arrive in that massive tretch of land south of the Tehachapi Mountains called Southrn California. Almost every one f them thinks he is arriving in os Angeles. Seven hundred of he in-migrants actually do arrive n the sprawling complex of Los ngeles and Orange Counties.

"As time passes, four hundred f these people take root—mostly n apartments. The era of the ract home developer apparently s passing."

EW YORK CITY: "New York acts ike a huge electromagnet in its bility to attract and repel the ame people at various times of heir lives. Initially, it draws young men and women from all over the country with its dazzling social life and job opportunities.

"Many decide that the city is no place to raise a family. They move to the suburbs but maintain their ties with the city. They return for shopping and entertainment. As they reach middle age, the homeowners are disenchanted with gardening, household repairs, and worrying about the railroad's latest bankruptcy. As soon as the children are off to college, the parents return to the city. Their children move to town, and the cycle starts again."

PITTSBURGH: "People are coming back to the newest, and some not-so-new high-rise apartment houses —and to the old neighborhoods where big houses are available for remodeling at prices suburbia can't match.

"There are many reasons given for moving to town, including these from a lady newcomer: '. . . When we need cigarettes or a loaf of bread, we don't have to move tons of automobile and burn up a gallon of gas. Besides, we found a lot more house for less money and we could remodel it to our liking, for less than we could buy a new suburban place."

ST. LOUIS: "The most exciting new development of recent years is the building of several new apartment projects in the downtown core. These make possible reverse commuting—from in-town dwelling to suburban job. The outward-bound expressway lanes are uncrowded in the morning, and the inward lanes in the evening. And drivers who follow this system also have the sun at their backs both ways."

SAN FRANCISCO: "A powerful tide runs in favor of city living here. In variety of sumptuous city housing, San Francisco would be difficult to match—the new luxurious Nob Hill and Eichler Summit, the baronial homes of Pacific Heights, the new in-city split-levels, town houses, or some of the richly restored Victorian mansions, of which San Francisco possesses the world's largest reservoir.

"And, as is the case with New York, San Francisco has a certain drawing power, and shares a seat on the jet-set exchange."

SEATTLE: "New families quite often lease suburban apartments because there is no serious commuting problem. From the suburban apartment, they hunt for a house—especially if they have children.

"When the children are gone from home, parents turn to boating or to their second home on the beach or in the mountains. Their desire is now for mobility. They want a place in town free from maintenance from which they can stage cruises, or trips to a vacation home with the least trouble and delay." ■

Called "the finest photographs ever taken of John F. Kennedy."

They are the work of the distinguished American photographer Leigh Wiener*. The place: Mr. Kennedy's private plane. The time: a period of crisis in the President's life. The hour was late. Everyone was asleep, except two men, Mr. Kennedy and the photographer. Hundreds have requested these pictures. Now, for the first time, a limited number of these memorable portraits are being made available. They are custom-printed from the original negatives on the finest double weight photographic paper. Each print, measuring 11x14", is hand-mounted, suitable for home or office. Price: $8.50 per print (indicate A or B), or $15.00 for the pair. Profits go to the John F. Kennedy Library. Send check or money order to: WESTMOUNT, 7422 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles 46, California.

Oil-tempered carbon steel blade with "zero edge" can slice fresh bread 1/16 inch thin.

Who else wants really sharp knives?

Send for free brochure "Kitchen Cutlery that Really Cuts"

Think they don't make sharp knives any more? Comus PRO knives are different — they really cut! And you can try these professional quality knives for 30 days without risking a penny.

The Secret is the Steel

The remarkable Comus PRO knives are not made of stainless steel. The blades are not scalloped or sawtoothed. Instead they are razor-keen, high-carbon, cutlery steel — forged, ground and oil-tempered to hold their edge. This is the steel used for professional cutlery . . . These are the knives used by professional chefs.

Still Sharp in 1974?

Yes! Carbon steel does make an astonishing difference. Comus PRO knives are so sharp you can thin-slice ripe tomatoes and fresh bread — carve rare chuck as if it were finest tenderloin — chop and mince vegetables like lightning. And few occasional swipes on steel or stone keeps your Comus PRO knives factory-sharp for ten, twenty years, or even more!

Send for Free Brochure

Comus PRO knives are not sold in any store, so send today for our free brochure. By return mail, we'll send you pictures, prices and facts on the new Comus PRO knives. Then you decide whether you want to try them for 30 days at our risk.

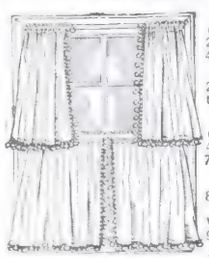
Amazing New NEL-KING WALLPAPER REMOVER



No expensive steaming
No tiresome scraping

Wallpaper practically falls off in your hand when you remove it with NEL-KING WALLPAPER REMOVER. Simply mix 2-ozs. of this water-working liquid concentrate in a gallon of water and apply to paper with rag, brush, sponge or spray. WALLPAPER REMOVER penetrates paper, loosens adhesive, and paper "lifts off" smoothly in a matter of minutes. Works miraculously on several layers of paper and even on troublesome painted-over wallpaper. As safe to use as water. Only $2.98 + 25¢ postage for pint—enough for 3 average rooms. Results guaranteed or money back if returned postpaid within 30 days.

Jordan's GENUINE VIRGINIA SLAB-BACON

LIKE VINTAGE WINE . . . AGING MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

You couldn't find a more delicious bacon anywhere—it just isn't available in most stores and markets. The real secret is in the 300 year old traditional method of preparation. This fabulous bacon is taken from only the finest prime porkers, then dry-cured in salt and sugar. After aging, we smoke it over mellow hickory fires. This and more makes Jordan's the freshest, tastiest, most flavorsome bacon you've ever eaten. You receive it, rind off, neatly packaged in cloth, and you'll find it stays fresher longer than pre-sliced bacon. Another advantage, slice it to a thickness suiting your taste. I guarantee you'll like it best, or I'll refund your money. Try it, at only $5.95 per slab (4 to 5 lb. av.). Post-pd. You'll want to order more.

Decorator's Diary

"Hopefully," writes Helen Burton, "Ted's book will be finished in sixteen months—and then I shall leave these boondocks—black ants, screech owls, and all such other works of Stepmother Nature—and return rejoicing to the city, soot, traffic, parking and all, where Midge can get to school under her own steam, and I can shop or go to the galleries without things becoming as complicated as a spacewalk.

"I never thought I could miss old bricks and mortar so much. Meantime, the only way I can bear this rural interlude is to make believe I'm back on East End Avenue. I know this sounds silly, but I've taken to putting on Dress For Dinner nights—something we never did in New York, at all—but a healthy change from the overdose of blue jeans that afflicts us here and could have a traumatic affect on Midge's future manners. Ted very sweetly goes along with this to a point—he balks at a dinner jacket after a hard day at the typewriter. I light the candles, pull the curtains against that everlasting view of cows, clover, and cultivators, and produce as sophisticated a meal as a mail-order food list provides. Last week: canned snails, a wonderful Hollandaise of our own teeny-weeny fresh vegetables, and baba au rhum. Naturally, something is lost in the translation—like me having to do the clean-up. But anyway for a few hours I have the illusion of city lights.

"Since the dining room seems to be the main scene where my urban nostalgia is assuaged, what would you think of my covering one wall of it with a photomural of New York At Night? The room is one wall of window, three walls of white paint, with my silver service on a long, black oak buffet. The furniture is pseudo-Spanish, but I have two wing chairs I can cover with some tangerine velveteen. Should I also import from our storage warehouse in Queens the crystal chandelier we had in our old foyer—just to give this dairyland meadow a touch of panache?"

My reply: "An unqualified 'yes' to the chandelier. And why not cover the floor in white—painted or carpeted? A photomural by all means, if you're prepared to invest a modest fortune for the benefit of your landlord. Instead, why not cover the wall across from the window wall with one of those stylized, black-and-white wallpapers which Wall Trends has lately imported from West Germany. I happen to consider these some of the most stylishly drawn, eye-deluding wallpaper subjects I've seen in many moons. They're not modern by any means, but purely romantic, even if they are architectural. There are for instance, "Renaissance," not the façades of Park Avenue but of 16th-century Florence, bound to chime in nicely with cut crystal and velvet; and "Piazza," which can't help but be a vista of a Venetian plaza as seen, perhaps, from the window of a doge's palace. I'm sending sample lengths. Any one will give you the citified stylishness you hanker for. And, just to remind you what you're missing back home, I'll include in the package a set of ear plugs and feather duster."—M.G.

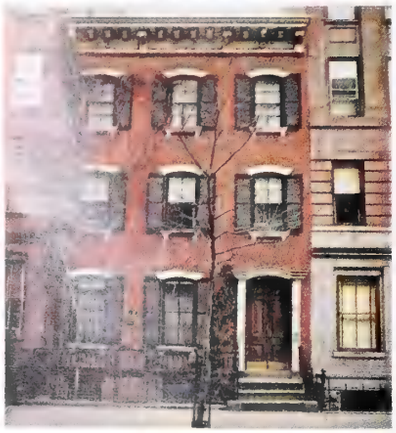
URBANE FOOD —and where to find it



A compendium of hand-picked restaurants in seven American cities

By MARION GOUGH

Today, any traveler who sets his course toward a great city is sure to find his reward in Lucullan adventures. And for those who actually live in an American metropolis—ah, what treasures of gustatory experience are theirs to savour at leisure! Available when the home larder palls is always the provocative chance to investigate the flavors of a hundred different cultures, while someone else does the work. In New York alone, 10,000 different eating places offer the New Yorker the services of 10,000 different chefs and countless menu ideas to borrow or adapt. From our own experience, we offer a list of fine American big-city restaurants. See it on page 130.

THE LURE OF THE CITY

House Beautiful here considers how it is to live in the very eye of the storm of America's great metropoli today; how it is to bring up a family, garden, entertain, learn, live. In nine cities, we have photographed town houses, high-rise penthouses, apartments, multilayer complexes where everything, including the car and family boat, is just down the elevator shaft. And we have discovered a phenomenon which has to do with The City Reclaimed: the conversion of old, derelict buildings into contemporary homes of wonderful charm and serenity. As for the Lure itself, the magnetic pull, the variety, privacy, stimuli, potential of the city—and the stunning beauty of the city-scene—please turn the page.

"I happen to be a city man"

By AUGUST HECKSCHER

Americans have not traditionally loved the city. Their dream was of a pastoral existence, and well into the Twentieth Century, when they had become overwhelmingly an urban people, they still cherished the thought that the farm was their true home. They —or their grandfathers—had come from the farm: perhaps one day they would go back.

Meanwhile our cities grew up in neglect and often in ugliness. The crowded, lively scene was for its citizens only an episode, and they passed through it, hopefully on the way to somewhere else.

Of course there have been defenders of the city. Bostonians have nearly always loved their Boston; everyone has loved San Francisco. In Lafcadio Hearn, New Orleans had its devoted enthusiast, and E. B. White has sung his hymn of praise to New York. It is significant, however, that Mr. White defends New York on the somewhat paradoxical ground that it isn't a city at all, but a collection of neighborhoods and not very different from the small town from which New Yorkers are all supposed to have come.

I happen to be a city man, and a New Yorker besides. The difficulties of this position I know well, having made more than one attempt to escape. A college seemed, once, the ideal place to live and work. Afterward, when the war had revived in so many of my generation a sense of roots and a desire for origins (even if the origins had to be artificially contrived!), I edited a newspaper in an upstate town, living on an elm-shaded street and walking to work past houses that sheltered a remarkable assortment of varied and vivid individuals.

I have also had my love affair with a farm. I still ache a little when I think of that and of all the fond illusions that went with it. But in the end all these visions faded—the college, the farm, the upstate town—as each time the great city pulled me back. Now I watch rather smugly as friends who had gone to the suburbs to raise children come back to town, trying to look as if they had never left.

My own experience may be somewhat typical of the mixed feelings that people today have toward the city—the attempts to persuade themselves that they can escape its web and the inevitable and often rather delighted return. This is a generation that comes away from the dark woods and the shaded mountain resorts to disport itself in the sun along the sea. It also emerges from suburban myths—the search for a romantic retreat in withdrawn and hidden places—to accept the challenge of urban life. Hardly a city across America today fails to show its new high-rise apartments, frankly seducing the citizen back to the metropolitan life he had fled. The small college away from the city—the old dream of an academy in the wilderness—suffers an inevitable disadvantage. Men and women of all ages want what, in the end, the city has to offer them: the variety and contradiction of human types, the excitement of the ever-changing scene, the delight of the arts, and the kind of freedom that has its home in a crowded and anonymous seclusion.

It is significant that a recent gathering in Washington, held under White House auspices to discuss "natural beauty," spent at least half of its time talking about the city. Do great buildings of concrete set amid streets (Please turn to page 123)

Houses That Wink at Their Past

The whole point of living in the city's very center is to be close to the action—museums, theaters, restaurants, offices, and shops. The demand for pleasant, convenient downtown quarters has exceeded the supply, and an act of creation is taking place in city after city. With a responsive eye, people of taste and imagination have looked at a barber shop, an organ factory, a printing plant, a laundry, a tailor shop and seen them as places in which to live dashingly and well. On the ten pages that follow, House Beautiful has recorded colorful examples of such commercial establishments charmingly renovated to become sprightly, imaginative homes.

In Washington, D.C.

Scotty's Barber Shop—now a bachelor's comely town house

Never underestimate the importance of just one person's interest—when restoration is involved. Time and again, as documented throughout this issue, the interest of one has led to that of others, and whole sections of a city have been revived. This process is now underway here in the Capitol Hill area of Washington, D. C.

Beau Bogen, a lawyer-turned-real-estate-man, was first attracted by Scotty's Barber Shop (before and after pictures above) and pioneered the restoration of this down-at-the-heels neighborhood. He transformed the shop and five closet-sized apartments above into his own home. It still has the charm of the 19th Century, although he and Architect John Hallett retained little but the shell of the house.

In his bachelor's study, right, Mr. Bogen lives with many mementoes: on a bookshelf, a cavalry helmet that belonged to his great-great-uncle, the first Southerner to graduate from West Point with honors following the Civil War; the railing around the bar consists of stair newels rescued from an early Washington house; the painting over the mantel—an 18th-century oil on copper, found in London's Fleamarket at Portobello Road. Practicality is evidenced in the fireplace, a prefabricated unit shrewdly camouflaged by the wood paneling and standard bolection molding.

In the kitchen, top picture, Mr. Bogen uses a collection of antique pewter decoratively and functionally. Worktable, foreground, is also bread-warming cabinet. In the bedroom is a bedspread made by Mr. Bogen's grandmother. On a mantel rescued from an old Washington mansion are Delft bibelots.

PHOTOGRAPH BY PHILIP ROEBEL

Upstairs in the study, above, the paneling painted deep red. Thai printed wallpaper, an early Bokhara rug. Decorator, Jason Carr. In the living room, right, contemporary paintings. Meissen figures, an Adam mantel. Decorator, John Greer. Doors open onto an enclosed garden.

The façade, right, is ornamented by ironwork which was part of the original factory's sidewalk fencing; the door, designed by the owner-restorer, was carved in Spain. The living room, left and lower right, its wrought-iron chandelier and a smaller pair on the balcony, bought from the rubble of a typical Moorish-style movie house in Baltimore.

In Washington:

An Organ Factory—now a lofty duplex

This shambling structure on Capitol Hill, above, which William E. Richards bought a few years ago, sets him up among the indomitable visionaries. With the help of Architects Huff and Drayton, a beat-up ghost acquired a brand-new lease on life: originally a stable, later, in 1888, an organ factory that produced fine organs for 60 years. (The gasoline engine that powered the plant's machinery was rated a curiosity and is now in the Smithsonian.) Today the house shrugs off its past. Rare antique rugs are used as wall hangings, the flavor is Spanish, sparse, and sybaritic —the master bath includes a full-size steam room.

In Philadelphia: A Printing Plant—now a covey of chic flats

In the late 19th Century, this building was designed to turn out printing for the American Baptist Publication Society. Today it has been converted imaginatively into sixty-one apartments. Their common denominator, practically a contradiction in modern décor, is a mix of functional compactness, individuality, and lofty ceiling. In Juniper East, as it is now called, no ceiling is under fifteen feet. Economy and good looks are packaged together: the old beams, salvaged from the factory, add character to otherwise plain surfaces; the floors are made out of the original boards; semienclosed verandas suggest the bygone charm of Victorian porches or conservatories.

In New Orleans:

A Laundry—now a Creole beauty

On the corner of Dauphine Street in the French Quarter of New Orleans, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore A. Gross bought a beat-up laundry. The building was crumbling and plastered with posters, but the Grosses identified it as one of a scant half-dozen early Creole houses that survive. The title to land and house could be traced back to 1803. The sweeping roof made of slate shingles, the mud bricks mortared with lime (obtained from local oyster shells), all bespeak the period. With the help of Architect James T. Dent and a study of old foundations and legal drawings, it was possible to submit plans that the stringent Vieux Carré Commission considered suitable. (All new building is strictly controlled in the Quarter.) The roof was repaired; so was the original millwork—inside and out—or copied wherever necessary. Partitions were torn out to give proportion and elegance. The slave quarters were restored to use as an independent guest house, shrubs and flowers line the brick patio, and an area was specifically set aside as a dog walk.

In the living room, below, the dark brown brick floor accents a sliding scale of greens. The decorative idiom is French: a Louis XVI round table, 18th-century armchairs covered in acid green velvet. Louis XVI firedogs. The painting over the mantel: American primitive.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY FRANK LOTZ MILLER

In New York City:

Sol the Tailor's— now refitted for living

When Sol decided to sell his shop, it was spotted by Robert Rosenberg, an architect who wanted above all else to live and work under one roof. A thorough remodeling gave him an office above with a clever arrangement of inner halls that separates business from home life. Storm windows serve to intercept noise, dirt, or possible intruders, and air conditioning keeps it fresh and cool. The living room contrives an air of untrammelled grace with its natural-colored fabrics, its pale antique Kirman rug that accents the cobalt blue Swedish ceramic floor. On a balcony up the winding stair is a cheerful dine-in kitchen. Beneath, there is a roomy bedroom and a bath (see plan).

The kitchen, below, with its straightforward battery of cabinets made of birch with the faintest hint of ornament. Counters and counter-backs are in varying shades of blue-on-white tile. A pine table and Swedish chairs punctuate the whiteness of the vinyl flooring.

BIG CITY GARDENING IS A WORLD OF SMALL DELIGHTS

Beauty here is found beside the stream of traffic, in fields of asphalt, and on the mountains of steel and glass

By LUTHER GREENE
Landscape designer

Geraniums on the steps of a brownstone, the colorful splash of petunias and cascading ivy in a window box, a fringe of trees edging a terrace on the 10th floor: What a difference they make in the city! Living plants soften the hardness of man-made materials and give us the reassurance that our natural pace is closer to the changing seasons than to the hand of a watch.

As the startling masses of city architecture reach higher and higher, they offer more spectacular settings for gardens, but they call for special ways of gardening. Because the spaces are so small, by country-garden standards, the art of illusion becomes a necessity. We can diminish the size of the trees and shrubs that are further from the eye to increase the sense of space, or use scaled-down statuary in the "distance" for the same purpose. And we can use the city itself: A city rooftop surrounded by vast or small amounts of what the Japanese call "borrowed scenery" can become a serene and secluded garden.

Sometimes the "scenery" must be screened out. But even this can provide a means of extending the sense of space. In recently doing a garden for a midtown Manhattan apartment, I was faced with the problem, high in the sky, of neighbors who were much too close. The solution was a trompe l'oeil on marine plywood panels to create the illusion of a series of arched trellises disappearing into the distance.

As one who must sometimes use such frauds, I am encouraged by the thought of Sir Osbert Sitwell that ". . . forgery is not a crime unless it fails to deceive." Further magic is needed (Please turn the page)

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY O. PHILIP ROEDEL

Essence of spring (and the other seasons in their time) is here distilled in a space no wider than the living-dining room that faces it. Effect is magnified by low walls: adjoining Turtle Bay gardens share the boon of overall space. Garden of Emeric Partos, N.Y.C.

At far left, inviting oasis of green, with color in pots and boxes, enlivens a New York City street.

in a small garden. The sound of water, purling gently in a stream or falling quietly into a pool, is like soft music. The sound is a joy to the ear, soothing to the most tattered nerves, cooling on the hottest day. The movement is fascinating to the eye. No garden is complete without it.

Fragrance is especially welcome in the city. What could give more pleasure than the lovely night odor of moonflower or tobacco plant, or the daytime fragrance of dianthus or honeysuckle, or thyme crushed underfoot? These and other sensitive details heighten perception and make more complete the pleasure of the garden. (Editor's note: For more on this subject, see "Fragrances That Bloom in the Night," in the June issue of House Beautiful.)

Soil in the city is seldom what you need or where you need it for a garden. Planting in containers is a good way to solve the problem of putting the right plants in the right soil. (Please turn to page 128)

CULTURAL BUILDING BOOM

By HERBERT AND MARJORIE KATZ
Authors of Museums U.S.A.

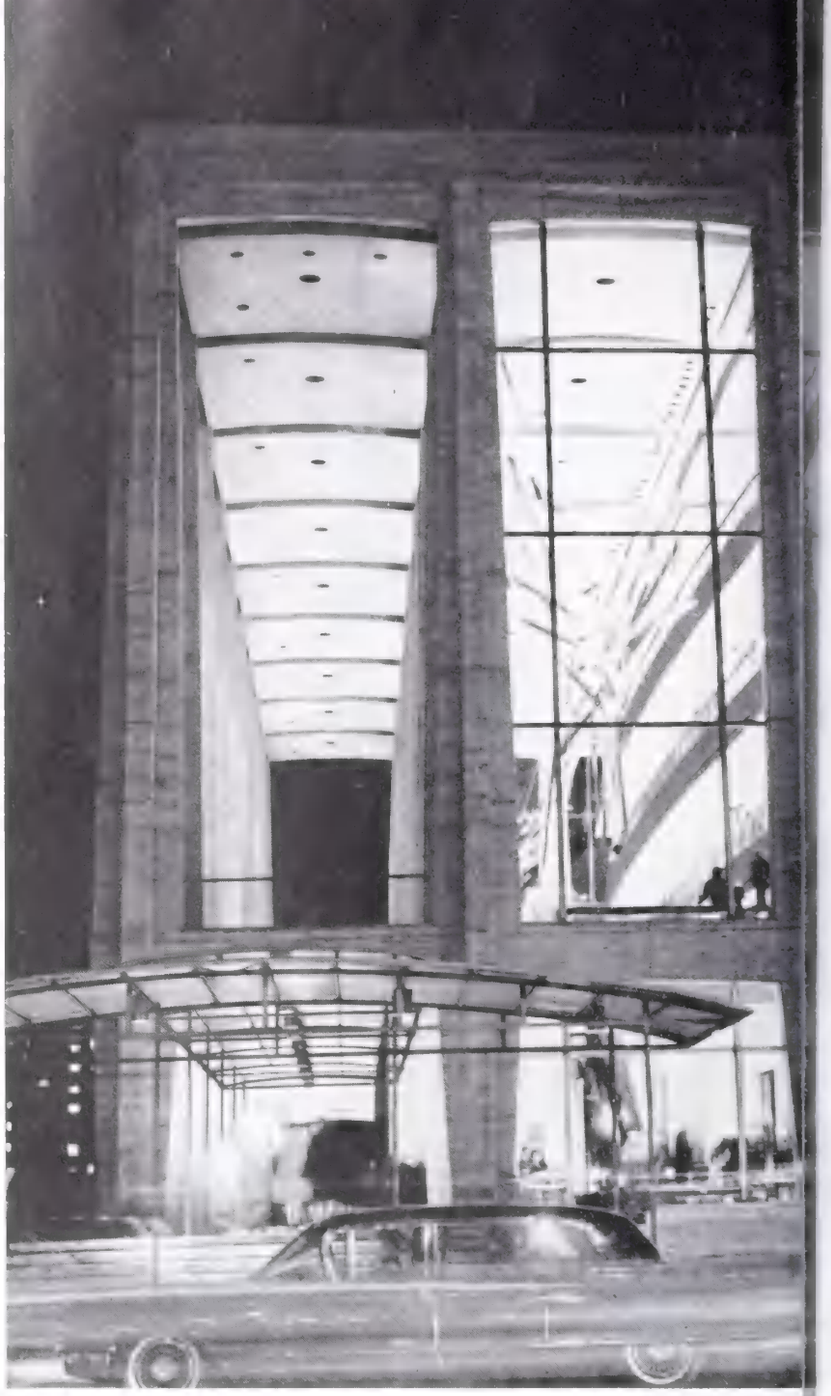
A glorious, unprecedented, typically American, wonderfully conspicuous cultural tumult can now be heard above all the other noises of America's cities. And this tumult can be seen as well, clearly visible through the heaviest smoke and the thickest smog. It has been called a culture explosion, a cultural ferment, a renaissance, and a boom. It is all of these things, and it is much more.



It is the city reasserting itself; the people of the city trying to make their community a more pleasant place in which to live. It is the rebuilding of a run-down part of town and the revitalization that comes with new structures to serve the arts. (In the next ten years, four billion dollars will be spent on construction for art and the performing arts.)

It is the energy and excitement produced by the crowding together of more and more people who prefer to make their homes in a city. (Today more than two-thirds of the nation's population are urbanites; in little more than a decade it will be four-fifths.)

New York City, the Philharmonic Hall at Lincoln Center.

It is the brand-new active participation of a broad spectrum of the populace in the actual sponsorship of the arts. For the first time, middle-class businessmen and their wives are serving on the same committees as the rich, the very rich, and the very very rich—raising funds for museum buildings, culture centers, concert halls, and repertory theaters.

It is the American museum changing its image from storehouse to educational institution and receiving more than 200 million visits in a year. It is the American consumer spending $400 million in theaters, opera houses, and concert halls; $200 million on paintings and other works of art. It is President Johnson asking Congress for ten million dollars for Federal aid to drama, the dance, painting, music, literature, the study of history, and other cultural activities.

It is the astonishing fact that in less than ten years consumer spending in the arts has risen six times as fast as spending for spectator sports. It is the increased prosperity and increased leisure; the money and the time to demand and enjoy abstract art, Rembrandt portraits, pre-Columbian sculpture, Greek tragedy, Shakespeare, Schubert symphonies, "happenings," ballet, ethnic music—you name it.

Although this tumult in our cities is relatively new and still growing stronger, it is not at all inconsistent with older aspirations. Charleston, South Carolina, had a museum of art, history, and natural science before the Revolutionary War. Philadelphia, New York, and Boston were early centers of culture. And the tremendous diversity of cultural activities that is so prominent today was noticeable even in the early Nineteenth Century, when there already existed, in addition to embryonic collections of art, societies for the study of natural science, archives for the preservation of historic documents, botanical gardens, and a lively public interest in flamboyant oratory and the performance of music.

Today, each of our cities is doing something different, according to its needs and interests. In Seattle, the buildings put up in a 74-acre park for the "Century 21" World's Fair of 1962 are now part of the Seattle Civic Center. Here the Seattle Art Museum, well known for its contemporary, Oriental, and American Indian collections, has a new pavilion to contain contemporary sculpture and annual and visiting exhibitions. The new five-building Pacific Science Center provides laboratories, classrooms, and demonstration galleries. There are convention facilities, restaurants, and plenty of places to rest. And here also is the 800-seat Seattle Playhouse, home of the Seattle Repertory Theater. As an added attraction, all of this is easily reached from the heart of the city by a mile-long stretch of monorail.

In Minneapolis and St. Paul, things are booming also. Into a receptive cultural climate—created by the Minneapolis Institute of Art, the Walker Art Center, the University of Minnesota, and the Minneapolis Symphony—have stepped two new enterprises that would be outstanding additions to any city's cultural scene.

First to appear was the Tyrone Guthrie Theater, a repertory group of the highest caliber that opened for a 20-week season with a stimulating Hamlet in the spring of 1963. Its second year's books showed black ink as attendance jumped and the programming was extended to 27 weeks.

This two-story split-level building contains a 400-seat theater, exhibition space for both the St. Paul Art Center and the St. Paul Institute Museum of Science, a comfortable auditorium, and a rooftop lounge. Two apartments

On these pages, two apartments that share the same view but not point of view. In the same building and with the same floor plan, these apartments are decidedly different in character. Above, Designer Tim Krusi has planned an ocean of cool calm, the light monochrome walls and floor adding to the sense of spaciousness. The scene shows a strong Oriental influence, reflected, too, in his selection of accessories. Example: the weathered waves that dominate the wall. His bedroom, right, continues the cool blues. Opposite page, a very different effect, one of warm Italianate elegance, created by Decorator Andrew Delfino. that overlook the Bay

The lure of a city view. These apartments in The Fortuna, above, capture the best of San Francisco's two spectaculars: the Bay through a glass wall in the living room, the rising city from the study-bedroom. Left, the floor plan (same for both apartments) shows how the efficient arrangement of kitchen, bathroom makes the two views possible.

At top, the living room. Here, and throughout the apartment, the windows are shielded only by white shades and matchstick blinds, the better to view the city by day and night. The granite shelf that lines two sides of the room meets a wall-to-wall window seat at the far end of the room. Floor is matching granite, covered in part by a black cowhide rug. Prominent on the wall: a canvas collage by Marca-Relli. Below, the spacious dining room, its table and wall shelf two slabs of elm burl, its rug an antique Bokhara. Chairs are Italian, in brown velvet. Painting is by Jack Youngerman.

Above, the den-study, a more intimate sitting room as well as a library to hold the many books. Built into the storage wall at the right is the hi-fi equipment. Along this wall, but out of the picture, is a brick-faced fireplace. Leather-covered couch in the foreground was designed by Benjamin Baldwin. Flanking the marble-topped game table to the rear are two chrome and leather side chairs. Through the door to foyer can be glimpsed a wire sculpture by Joseph Goto. Den is connected directly to the master bedroom by a separate hall. (Den is seen from the bedroom in photograph at right.)

Murphy Associates, architects, in collaboration with Interior Designer Benjamin Baldwin. The renovation was complete: New rooms were created by moving partitions, ceilings were dropped for special lighting effects, out-of-date ornamentation was removed. Within the now spare interiors, the few furnishings play a bold role: modern paintings, an antique rug, figured wood tables, elegant chairs and couches richly covered in velvets, suedes, and leathers.

Moon-shot spectaculars, the twin residential towers of the pioneering downtown complex called Marina City, contain 896 apartments. The Sylvan Urbanity of AMSTER YARD

By MARION GOUGH

Amster Yard is celebrating its 20th birthday. And if you do not know what or where Amster Yard is, it is a green, ivy-carpeted, shaded enclave astonishingly hidden away in backyard space on New York's East 49th Street, not half a block away from the river of traffic that roars up Third Avenue. Within its sylvan purlieus are studios, shops, offices, and apartments, leased chiefly by practitioners of the embellishing arts—designers, decorators, architects.

Its landlord, the enthusiastic urbiphile creator of this metropolitan oasis, is Designer-Decorator James Amster, who works and lives in the elegantly refurbished "rear house." (Please turn the page)

Mr. Amster's own garden-within-a-garden is favored for summer lunch or cocktails. City-happy ailanthus and privet shelter it. Roses and syringa thrive.

In 1945 Amster Yard was a U-shape dirt yard bounded by down-at-heel buildings, all now handsomely renovated. Mr. Amster's home-cum-studio at left. Opposite: trillium, jack-in-the-pulpit, fern, azalea grow in Manhattan's only wildwood garden

"Way back," said the ebullient owner of Amster Yard as we sat at a tape-recorder dinner in his Biedermeier dining room, "this land was the terminus of the Boston Post Road. That intrigues me, because I'm history-minded—I love the past the way I know I'm going to love the future. But when I first saw this place, it was a gaggle of rundown, cheap-rent buildings on three sides of the lot, around a middle yard connected to the street by an alley. In the back, where we are now, there was a cobbler, a plumber's shop, and an electrician. Noguchi hired studio space here when he was a struggling unknown, and the largest building was a boardinghouse.

"I wasn't sure I could afford to buy it, but I was fascinated by the idea of turning that center court into an elegant compound where some hand-picked tenants and I could work and live with finesse, right in the middle of this wonderful city. I was lucky. I had the advice of a friend of my father's—a man called Bernie Baruch—who said: 'Go ahead—you're young enough to take a chance.' So I did. And it has been a joy. A Petite Maison on East Fifty-third Street

In the thick of New York's trade and commerce, behind the most unlikely, noncommittal façade of a business building, Miss Jane Templeton has created for herself the ambiance of a fine little French town house. It is, in fact, a five-room, two-story apartment, but it might be a family mansion of the Ile Saint-Louis, one where many generations have left their collected treasures.

The street-level entrance provides a fascinating rez-de-chaussée—the showroom of Don Ruseau, Inc., a firm specializing in custom-order reproductions of French cabinetwork. Since Miss Templeton is the owner, she enjoys the luxury of a town house-apartment a mere one flight up from her place of business, in an atmosphere that disproves all the clichés about the impersonality of city living. Miss Templeton has a second home in suburban Connecticut but, ringing a change on the usual procedure, she frequently eschews the country on weekends in favor of the sabbatical peace and leisure of the quiet city.

The living room, sheathed in 15th-century linenfold oak, is partitioned from a tiny dining area by the open arches of a Gothic chapel gate. Beyond this blooms a roof garden for summertime sunning and dining. To the right, a minute kitchen, its electrical equipment marvelously merged with provincial cabinetwork that probably paneled a French country house three hundred years ago. Opposite: bedroom boiserie is walnut of Louis XV design, transplanted from a little château near Paris. Lamp bases are celadon and sang de boeuf porcelains of the same era. See more photographs on the next two pages.

Time-mellowed woodwork, with its details carefully preserved, give this city apartment a settled-in feeling of permanence more often associated with a country house. Living-room overmantel is a carved 15th-century oak fragment; the mantel shelf was once a dough tray. Bookcases and cabinets built out from the window wall have touch-latch doors covered in smoked glass. This lightens the room, increases its depth.

Out of the picture at right, a staircase with a secret panel leads to the bedrooms above. The Regency secretary and the Aubusson rug are antiques. Since the coffee table is a 20th-century American phenomenon, it has no counterpart in old French design, so the one shown opposite was contrived of an antique 18th-century parquetry panel set into a modern-made frame. All the other furniture pieces are reproductions by Don Ruseau.

A Charming Town House—once Dolly Madison's

When does a historic house become a current event? When individual enterprise rescues it from years of maltreatment and returns it to a state of grace and dignity. This has happened to the house on Spruce Street where James and Dolly Madison began their married life in 1795. The Madisons had the French Embassy as a next-door neighbor, and the area, called then, as now, Society Hill, was most genteel. Later, like other middle-of-town districts, it lost its first families, became a slum. By 1962, when Margaret Walsh, an ardent preservationist, bought the old Madison place, it had been ruthlessly converted into a warehouse, then, eventually deserted. With the design aid of (Please turn to page 134)

Opening on a walled garden with an oval pool, the dining- and drawing-room, opposite, and the library, above, reflect the elegance of the house in its 18th-century heyday. The facing of both fireplaces is now, as originally, King-of-Prussia marble, from local quarries.

At the front of the house, the kitchen-breakfast room, right, has its windows shielded by shutters and by white cotton curtains, swagged and ball-fringed like the ones in the "tearoom" at Monticello. The ceiling-high border is Americana paper, put on—not by chance—upside down.

About 20 years ago, the houses on both sides of Tyson Street were in the state of disrepair shown at left. Today they all have the character and charm shown above. The city has grown around the street: it's now in the center of city life.

Just before the war (of 1812) a row of little buildings here on Tyson Street was part of an estate on the edge of town. In 1814, when the British bombarded nearby Fort McHenry, they were slave quarters. Since then they have been lived in continually, and continually expanded and altered.

After a prosperous time in the 20's, when bootleggers were said to rendezvous here, Tyson Street went into decline. Absentee landlords rented the houses to as many poverty-stricken families as could be crowded in. By 1946, this was one of the worst slums in Baltimore. But the ebb and flow of life surging through and around the street left a residue of honest character and charm that could be attained in no other way.

It was a painter, Edward Rosenfeld, who saw the beauty of the bone structure beneath the forbidding façade and decided to do something about it. He bought a corner house and made it a handsome home. Within two years most of the other houses were bought by friends and acquaintances, and a spirited street-sized renovation project was under way. They all realized that what was there had more inherent charm than anything likely to replace it. Their foresight and sustained effort has made this a classic example of redevelopment by private initiative.

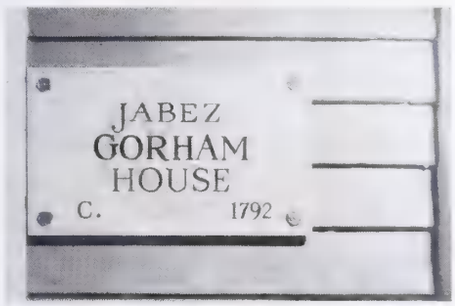
Benefit Street — still true to its name

By CARROLL C. CALKINS

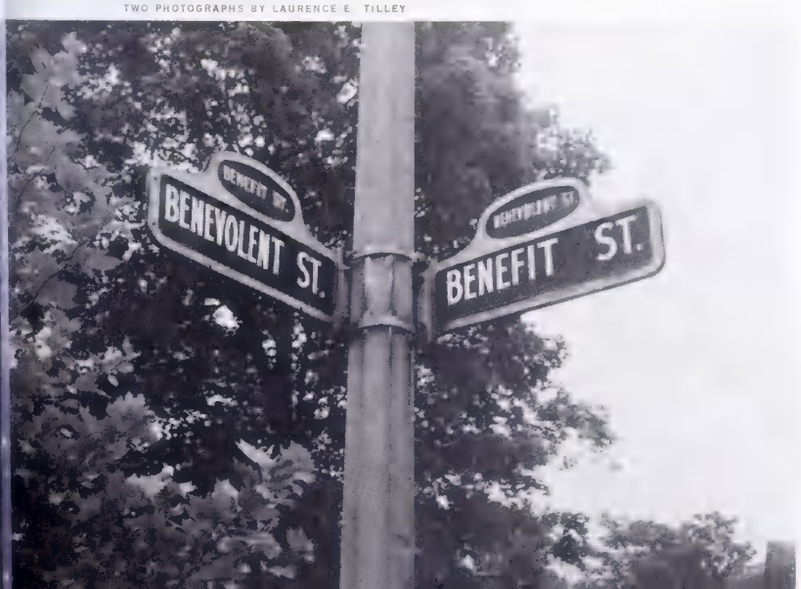
When Roger Williams founded this community in 1636 and named it in appreciation of "God's merciful providence," there was an ancient Indian trail on the slope above the river. This footpath became part of the new town and, after 120 years, was made into a road ". . . for the common benefit of all."



Today, the street is again the center and symbol of beneficent planning and community action. A study of College Hill (where Benefit is a major street) was cited in 1960 by the American Institute of Architects for ". . . leadership . . . for all to see the possibilities of restoring to a city some of the amenities of man's environment, lost for awhile, but still recapturable by a resolute community." It was, however, a resolute individual who fulfilled the promise of the study.

Most of the fine houses on College Hill were built between 1773 and 1860. By the turn of the century, other parts of town became more fashionable, and this area began to decline. By 1956, most of the houses were so run-down they were in danger of condemnation and demolition. To see if a few of the best could be saved, a Preservation Society was founded. This society, with help from the city and the Urban Renewal funds, financed the study cited by the AIA.

But for all the good planning, not much renewal was done until Mrs. Malcolm G. Chace, Jr., decided to take action. Working with Roger Brassard, a local preservationist-realtor, she bought and renewed four houses on Benefit Street.



The houses were cleaned up inside and out; old fireplaces, mantels, moldings, stairways, and chair rails were uncovered and refurbished. The original siding, which was often covered up, was revealed and repaired. Exteriors were scraped down and painted—in the original colors found next to the wood—and necessary structural repairs were made.

The hope and promise of these first few shining examples set the pattern for a bright new look that again brings this neighborhood into the center of city life in Providence. (Please turn the page)

The miraculous effect of paint and basic repair

It's only reasonable to fix up good but shabby houses rather than tear them down. But it took a while for Mrs. Chace's confidence in College Hill to spread widely enough to assure the future of the area. To keep up the momentum of the project, she bought some 36 properties in the area, including all of Benefit Square, which is shown at the far right.

A corporation was formed to buy the houses, make them safe, sound, and habitable; clean interiors; and sell them, at reasonable prices, to be finished by the buyers. This proved to be a good idea. It reduced the size of the original investment needed, allowed interested families to fit the interior to their requirements, and helped get them personally involved with the project. Other groups and individuals are now renovating houses here to make this former slum an esthetic, economic, and historic success.

"We moved back to the city"

By MARY SCOTT WELCH

Mary Scott Welch, a former editor at Look, has written several books including a cookbook, Your First Hundred Meals. She is now a free-lance.

Last Christmas, when I opened my present from my husband, I burst into tears. The children were mystified. They know I'll cry at the drop of a Meaningful Moment, from baseball to ballet, but what could possibly be meaningful about a bracelet charm commemorating October 5, 1964? The date marked none of our six birthdays nor the wedding anniversary. So why were their parents mistily beaming at each other, like stars in the fade-out of an old movie?

The children didn't completely understand even when we explained, but last October 5 we left the perfect house on the perfect four acres in the perfect exurb and moved back into the highly imperfect city of New York. October 5 marked the beginning of a wonderful new life.

The old life was fine while it lasted, and it lasted ten years. It really was the perfect house in the perfect area, and we'll never forget the pain-pleasure of building it. The popular sport of Kicking Suburbia Around found us on the sidelines: we had no problems with kaffeeklatschers, wife-swappers, status-symbol-counters, afternoon bridges, or bar-car commuters. I didn't even have the warmed-over-dinner problem; my husband caught the same train almost every night. I never really stopped thinking of the city as the center of things, but living an hour and a half away was a choice we made carefully and eagerly. The choice was right at the time.

But now the time has changed, for us. So it's no paradox, really, that we moved back to the city for the same reason that took us out. The reason: convenience. What has changed is what we want, or need, to be convenient to.

When we moved out, we desperately needed to be convenient to fresh air, play space, laundry machines. Our children were three, two, and one. Just getting them out-of-doors was a big production, involving doorman and elevator and diaper changes en route. We were enthusiastic parents but we were rapidly being worn down by the mechanics of raising small children in the city. We thought a house designed for us would take much of the drudgery out of child care. And it did.

But this year they turned 14, 13, 12, and seven. Except for the added starter, they no longer need to be watched every minute; in fact, they need to be not watched. The eldest has even gone away to school. So—and I should have realized the moment my "mothering" changed from diapering to driving—convenience of a purely interior, domestic sort is no longer the Be-all and End-all of living. More important to us now is the kind of adult-oriented convenience the city offers.

I suppose we'd have been smarter to anticipate that time-change in our requirements. But we had built that house and lived that life as though it were forever, so at first we resisted the very idea that we had grown beyond both of them. (Please turn to page 125)

By ANDY LOGAN

Andy Logan (Mrs. Charles Lyon), a staff writer for The New Yorker, is the author of a forthcoming book, The Man Who Robbed the Robber Barons.

Of all the conversational wars likely to break out at a dinner party, the one you can virtually depend on to develop is between those who have stayed in the city (or come back) and those who have moved to the suburbs. The suburbanites—or exurbanites—usually take the offensive, and as a member of the defending team, I have found them formidable.

The only formal defense strategy I've worked out is one I resort to when the other side makes the mistake of appealing to my better nature. "It may be all right for you and your husband," someone says, "But what about your children? What do your children do in the city?"

"Well," I say, "they go to Sunday school and Boy Scouts and Brownies and do their homework and go swimming and roller-skating and trick-or-treating and practice their piano lessons and dress up for birthday parties and dress down for slumber parties and use squirt guns on the neighbors and lose their library cards and go with me to the supermarket and help me paste in the green stamps and play Soupy Sales records until we think we'll lose our minds. What do your children do?"

Of course, if they then bring up such matters as air pollution, treehouses, and comparative crime rates, they have me. But, lulled into a sense of security, the mothers in the case may later in the evening launch into the familiar complaint about how they never have a moment to themselves, since they're forever chauffeuring the kids from one appointment—or treehouse—to another. This is my chance for sneak reprisal. "Anyhow, whatever my children do," I tell them, "they do pretty much on their own. I don't have a driver's license. I've never driven a car in my life." After this we usually find it safer to shift the conversation to such comparatively noncontroversial subjects as a sane nuclear policy, miscegenation, or Bobby Kennedy.

Of course, the opposition is right: New York is, in many ways, a dirty, inconvenient, and dangerous place to live. In fact, when I consider all the drawbacks to raising a family here, I'm embarrassed to remember that our decision to stay wasn't the result of long, agonizing evenings of appraisal. I don't think we even discussed it. We talked of moving to Vienna or to Chile, but never to Scarsdale. My husband Charles and I had both spent a fair share of our childhoods in rural communities (upstate New York in his case, western North Carolina in mine) and had also lived in cities (Buffalo and Cleveland). After college and, in Charles's case, law school, they all seemed to us fine places to visit, but we didn't want to live there. Like so many eager pilgrims before and after us, we took up our stations in the classic New York City progression, settling on neighboring streets in Greenwich Village, which was handy to his work with a downtown law firm and a short subway ride from the magazine I worked for, then as now. After we married (Please turn to page 132)

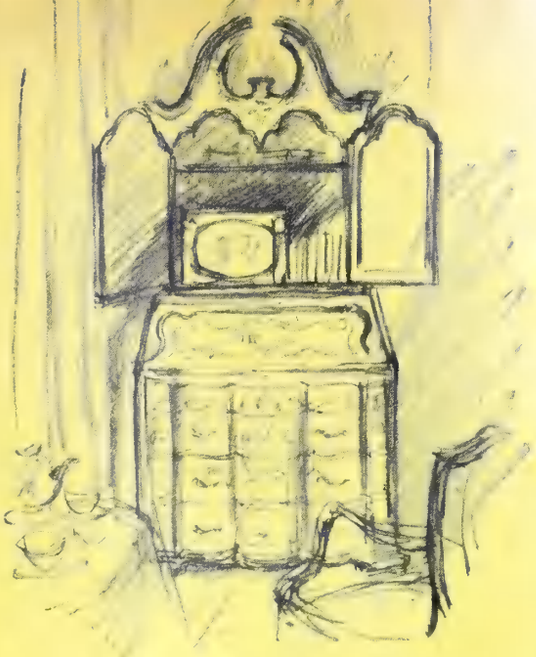
This illustrator-designer used wasted space between a window and the corner of a room to create a complete home office. In the 12-inch-deep recess are a fold-down desk, storage shelves, and stationery cabinet, all of which can be concealed, when not in use, by a folding door.

Richard Halliday

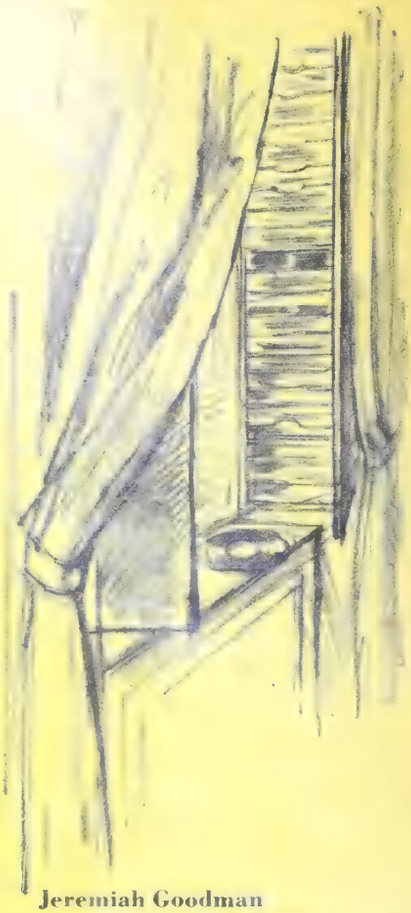
Wardrobe closet doors in the theatrical producer's bedroom conceal standard file cabinets for storing his business documents. A twin of this closet, the two adding a rich boiserie look, is similarly equipped with files to store Mrs. Halliday's (Mary Martin's) musical scores.

Tom Lee



How can a boy have a racing-car setup in an apartment? This designer's answer was to install a raceway on a foldaway board over his son's bed (the underside is papered to match the wall). Tracks are fixed, and shelves at the side store cars and extra equipment. The board lowers like a drawbridge and is always ready to go. (Works as well for toy trains.)

Mary Martin



The star's recorded performances would almost fill a room, so finding space for other albums she and her husband cherish is a triumph. Here enough is sliced off a closet to store their recent favorites. Each shelf can hold 120 records.

Mrs. Richard Rodgers

Utilizing hidden space is a talent of this famous householder (author of "My Favorite Things"). Her TV set is masked behind secretary doors at a good viewing level. Another trick, not shown: Shelves built on the reverse side of her dining-room screen store glassware for instant use.

Jeremiah Goodman

Where can you put a big record collection? Designer Goodman flanked double windows with cabinets to solve his problem. By adding 14 inches of depth to the windows he created more interesting "reveals" and enhanced the charm of the room. Doors to cabinets open on the window side rather than at the front so they could be hidden by (and clear) the curtains.

Ben B. Bodne

This closet-behind-a-closet devised by the Algonquin's owner suggests an old mansion's secret room. It actually is an efficient dead-storage closet. Screening it is an elegant "vestibule" closet designed to take care of guests' coats and hats.

Marion Mill Preminger

To hold her gloves, scarves, belts, and sweaters neatly and near at hand, the author of "All I Want Is Everything" uses her headboard as a disguised storage wall. Built into each side are three drawers, measuring 7½" by 19" by 13".

Fannie Hurst

Like Topsy, this maze of shelves in the popular author's closet just grew. They are improvised of soda-bottle cases, 4½" by 24" by 16", on which you pay a 75-cent deposit (then keep it if you wish). Stacked any way you want, they add up to as many storage shelves as you need.

What to serve
WHEN THEY WON'T GO HOME!

The invitation reads: "Cocktails—Five to Seven." But if your party turns out to be a succès fou, there will be a handful of merry souls still around at 9 P.M. Not only around, but hungry—indicating you have to produce something stronger than potato chips to forestall instant malnutrition. Foresight is the obvious solution.

With one exception (the fettuccine), all these recipes can be prepared ahead, even the day before, and all can be on the table in a matter of minutes. What's especially good about these recipes is they have staying power, so any leftovers can be served to the family the following day.

A pot of hot, rich coffee is certainly in order, and, if you feel so inclined, a small dessert.

Glazed Canadian Bacon with Mustard Yoghurt Sauce

Buy a 4-to-5-pound piece of Canadian bacon, all in one piece. Rub surface lightly with dry mustard.

Mix ½ cup grenadine syrup with 1 cup apple juice and pour over the meat. Place in preheated 325° F. oven and bake for 2 hours, basting with syrups and juices regularly. Cool to room temperature.

Cut in rather thick slices, reshape the meat in a neat roll, and place on a serving platter garnished with water cress. Serves 8 or so.

Serve with Mustard Yoghurt Sauce: Spoon plain yoghurt into a bowl, sprinkle very generously with dry mustard, and blend thoroughly with a spatula. Do not overbeat, or the yoghurt will become too liquid. Fold in a handful of minced chives or parsley.

Serve with small rounds of French bread.

Fettuccine

Cook egg noodles according to package directions (two 8-ounce packages will serve approximately 8). This will take from 12 to 15 minutes; then taste to make sure it is al dente—firm to the bite, not soft. Drain thoroughly. Return to the pan. Add 1 cup (½ stick) softened butter, 1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese, 1 cup heavy cream, and a very generous sprinkling of freshly ground black pepper. Shake vigorously to blend well, then toss with a fork. Serve immediately on hot plates.

Paul Steindler's Senegalese Soup

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 small onion, coarsely chopped
- 1 carrot, coarsely chopped
- 1 stalk celery, coarsely chopped
- 2 small cinnamon sticks
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves
- 1 heaping teaspoon curry powder
- 3 or 4 cans chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon tomato purée
- 2 heaping tablespoons commercial almond paste
- 1 tablespoon red currant jelly
- 3 to 4 tablespoons arrowroot
- Salt
- Pepper
- 2 cups heavy cream
- Toasted coconut

Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan, add the onion, carrot, and celery. Cook over a moderate heat, giving it an occasional stir, until vegetables have taken on a little color. Add cinnamon sticks, bay leaves, cloves, curry powder, and chicken broth. Stir until well blended. Simmer over low heat for 30 minutes. Strain.

Stir in tomato purée, almond paste, and current jelly until paste has dissolved. Simmer 30 minutes. Mix the arrowroot with a little cold water to make a smooth paste. Stir into soup thoroughly to thicken slightly. Cook a few minutes longer. Salt and pepper to taste. Refrigerate.

Just before serving, combine with heavy cream. Serve well chilled in soup cups, with a sprinkling of coconut on top. Serve to 8 with hard rolls or French bread. The basic soup may be made ahead of time, even a day ahead, and refrigerated until needed.

and pavements represent contemporary ideas of beauty—and is such beauty natural? A few decades ago the phrase could only have been applied to the landscape of rivers and forests, plains and mountain and seashore: those who attended the conference would have been naturalists and conservationists, not predominantly urbanists, city planners, and architects. But Aristotle would have understood the new meaning given to the phrase, for in his philosophy what man achieved and perfected was a part of nature, indeed the noblest part. Today, even while we seek to preserve the countryside and the wilderness, we recognize increasingly that if beauty is not found in the man-made environment it may ultimately vanish from the world altogether.

We come thus to a new pleasure in the thought of city life: we make fresh resolves that we shall repair the damage that we have allowed to take place and in the future build with a feeling for the things that make urban life attractive. We shall plant trees along the sidewalks, create more neighborhood parks and squares, provide better places for children to play, provide such amenities as benches and shelters, and outdoor cafés and waterfront vistas.

All this is to the good and indeed if vigorously pursued could give a whole new meaning to democracy. For there is no group of citizens too small or modest to bring about improvements in the neighborhood scene. Government programs and foundations are increasingly aware of the importance of demonstration projects, and these can often find the necessary financing. Private enterprise, moreover, can be persuaded of the value of good design and of some contribution of space to the public domain. The saving of a building representative of a past era—perhaps even a modest building that cannot make claim to great architectural beauty or to outstanding historic importance—may be the accomplishment of a few alert citizens and make a significant addition to the color and diversity of the urban scene. So can something as basic as trees, and as fragile as flowers.

A special interest of my own has been signs and lettering. Nothing can more decisively mark a street than the quality of its graphics: indeed it is very often only the graphics that we see—everything else fades into the background as our eye picks out the information we need. Yet in the United States such graphics have been uniformly bad: weak letters, confused or blatant signs, a jumbled, illegible, and gaudy book of instructions laid out for the passing citizen to read. Private groups working with professional advisers can begin to set up standards, and by persuasion can often convince both public and private interests of the advantage that comes from better architectural and street lettering.

The hard truth, however, is that just when we are coming fully to realize the opportunity for small-scale improvements on city life, the need for changes on an immense scale begins to confront us. What has been called the "cosmetic approach" can go just so far. Amid the pressures of population and the disproportionate growth of cities something more difficult is ultimately needed. If men and women are going to make of the modern city the home they instinctively seek, they will have to think in fresh terms and act on a wider front than anything they have previously thought practicable.

At the White House conference to which I alluded earlier, there was, understandably, a good deal of talk about planting more trees on city streets. But in the giant cities of tomorrow, the trees lose their meaning—and so, for that matter, do the streets.

The old-fashioned street was a place where a number of functions were served simultaneously. Traffic passed; pedestrians moved upon their journeys; men and women met to talk and to exchange the news of the day. But in the city of tomorrow, traffic and pedestrians will obviously have to be separated, and so perhaps there will be a separation between "walkways" and those squares or meeting places where the older values of citizenship and neighborliness are developed. The highways for fast traffic, now too often cutting athwart the life of a city, may well become integrated with buildings. When we have thought through these new relationships and created new forms appropriate to them, we shall be in a position to appreciate the true beauty of the modern city.

The problem is to shape cities which can absorb the huge populations of tomorrow, provide for the massive movements of men and goods, respond to the great pressures of swift transportation —and can still preserve the essential qualities of urbanity. These simple human objectives should not be too difficult to achieve, but the plain fact is that we have at the moment very little idea as to how to go about getting them. Each time we build what we think is the beginning of a perfect city, we find that it is strangely dead and uniform.

Therefore, we shall probably continue to live with conflicting emotions in regard to the city. Knowing it is the form of human habitation typical of the modern age, we have at least learned not to run away from it. Sometimes we curse it for its inconvenience, its bad air, its impossible parking problems. Sometimes we dream of what the city of the future could be, if only men would build with a wisdom and humanity matching our technical skills.

But perhaps best of all, and in our happiest moments, we accept the city for what it is: a place of inevitable confusion and contradictions which yet somehow manages to give men and women more sense of what it is to be alive than any other possible environment. There are those who say of my city that it is fun to visit but that they would hate to live there. How much more nearly does the opposite seem true to me! I pity the poor visitor, assailed by unaccustomed glare and noise, trying to find his way about where the signs point in opposite directions and the taxis never appear when you want them. But to live there, to feel at home in the midst of so many bright implausibilities—that is a supreme reward.

I know a street where the trees do still have meaning, and from the houses that step down its gentle slope one can look out to watch friends and neighbors pass. Sometimes it pleases me to think of all the things going on within a mile or so, and the very thought of them is an insurance that in such a city man could never be bored and his appetite for life could never be satisfied. ■ world, but I wouldn't sell it for anything. I believe if you have something good, hang on to it. Don't think you'll ever have that luck again. I count my blessings here. There is no other place where I could live as well.

"I've been so lucky with my tenants. Most of them have been in the arts, creative people. Paula and Harold Sterner—he was the architect—were among my first tenants. He worked with me and Ted Sandler in plotting out the changes I had to make in the buildings. Billy Baldwin and his decorating staff headquartered here for eighteen years. The John Geralds lived and worked here.

"Once Cole Porter heard I had an apartment vacant and told Leonard Hanna about it, so he came here, and even installed his own elevator. Dwight Wyman lived here.

"Victoria Tree has her flower shop here and is really the one responsible for the way the garden thrives.

"The wiry outdoor furniture I designed myself and had it painted with a trompe l'oeil marble finish. It's an idea I stole from the furniture outside the Stockholm city hall. I first saw it in 1952 while I designed the Kungsholm interiors for the Swedish American Line.

"I've been fortunate in having good influences in my life. My father was not only an excellent business man, he also appreciated and collected art. So as a kid I was subjected to good things, and encouraged to follow my own direction which, of course, was design. When I was 13 the family bought Wentworth Hall, a hotel in Jackson, New Hampshire, and you won't believe it, but they let me redecorate it. I did it with red, white, and blue flowered chintz from Sears-Roebuck.

"Charles Duveen was one of my father's friends so, after a session at the Harvard School of Fine Arts, I got my first job at Charles of London, twenty-five bucks a week for dusting Queen Anne chairs.

"Since then I've done all sorts of jobs. I was in on the beginning of Bergdorf Goodman's antique shop. I designed sets for Cecil Beaton. I redesigned Peacock Alley for the Waldorf, commissioned Vertés to do the murals, and worked with him. And all the time I have had private clients and that's the greatest, most satisfying job of all. Some of my clients are third generation of the same family.

"To me decoration is not a matter of matching washcloths to wallpaper. I feel my calling in life is to help my clients live better. But I think decoration must always be approached with a sense of history: find out what the clients' past has made them, and what kind of ideals this past has given them. I must help them to the fulfillment of their ideal way of living. And when the job is done, I want it to look as if they had done it, as if I had had nothing to do with it except to work out the mechanics of getting things done. Much of the time, it's a matter of 'cleaning and pressing' what the clients already own —taking their tired golden oak and pickling it, giving it a new lease on life. I don't believe in throwing everything out and starting from scratch. It destroys your personal history. And, by the way, soap and water is a good thing to start with. Many things need little more than a good cleaning.

"Amster Yard itself is the result of 'cleaning and pressing' rather than drastic remodeling. I didn't really rebuild—I restored, added mechanical changes that make it possible for me and the people around me to live better, with elegance and finesse, right in New York. New York is a collection of neighborhoods, but you can be as social or unsocial as you want to be. Your world can be as private as you make it, but the people who have the most fun are the ones who involve themselves in neighborhood activities. I enjoy being chairman of the East Forty-ninth Street Association, here in Turtle Bay, and for 20 years I've been the president of Prescott House, a settlement house and school.

"The city is drab and dreary only if you make it that way. It's the do-nothings that have a miserable time. For anyone with pazazz about them, it is the only place in the world to live." ■

Even after we decided on the move, we kept finding reasons to un-decide: Finding new schools for the children was more complicated than I had anticipated; the kind of apartment we wanted apparently didn't exist—at a price we could pay; at times the job of emptying out the closets and basement and garage and shed and other pack-rat spaces of our house seemed absolutely impossible.

But we made it. We are here, and every day we are newly convinced that where we are now is where we belong now. Our apartment is less than half the size of the house, yet instead of feeling cramped we all seem to be expanding.

• My husband says he's infinitely more productive in his work. I can't vouch for that, but he's certainly more fun for us all. The Long Island Railroad's loss is our gain, three important hours a day.

• The children, who were only good sports about moving to the city in the first place, are turning into enthusiasts. During their spring vacation we made elaborate arrangements to commute to their original stamping grounds, so they could see their old friends and paint their boat and spread out a little. But one by one, for different reasons, they came to us and asked if we couldn't spend at least a part of that time in the city. What they like best, I think, is the independence that sidewalks and buses bestow.

• As for me, I am walking on air. It may be polluted air but it's magical. For the first time in years, I feel as though I am in charge of my day, instead of the other way around. That is, without cutting into the time I want to spend with my family, I can now spend a little time on my self. It's time that didn't exist before or, if it did, couldn't be gathered together in large enough chunks to enjoy. Take, for instance, my probable schedule for today (in May, at this writing). Tomorrow will be different, as was yesterday, and I am exhilarated by that fact alone. But here's today:

At 7:30 this morning I had my café au lait, complete with the New York Times, in bed. I could have slept till eight, when my husband and children begin to stir, but I love beginning the day with this luxurious, leisurely gloat. I don't want to forget that by 7:30 last year I'd have been up 45 minutes, cooked and served breakfast to all, located the last schoolbook, and made a fast pass at my lipstick. By eight I'd have been shackled to that steering wheel to start my daily chauffeuring.

At 8:30, when my husband and the children left for their separate jobs, I sat down to my own long-neglected work of free-lance magazine writing. Now I can count on at least three solid hours at the typewriter, without interruptions. This lovely state is induced partly by the children's advanced ages, of course—for years, at least one of them was at home—but partly, too, by the impersonal detachment I feel toward the kind of home maintenance that used to consume both my time and my thoughts. If anyone comes to feed or fix the furnace today, I won't notice, much less care.

At 12, I'll amble over to the French Institute, for an hour's worth of corrective tape-work on my accent. This twice-a-week class will consume one hour. Most important: my travel time will be five minutes each way.

I'm not sure about lunch. My husband may walk back to the apartment from his office if he's not business-lunching today, or an interview I've been trying to arrange may come through. The uncertainty itself is pleasurable; for years my lunch plans had to be constructed as carefully as a stone wall, and were therefore just about as enjoyable. However lunch goes, I want to look up a statistic at the library this afternoon. It won't take ten minutes, so before I'm due to collect Molly at her school, I'll pop across the street to revisit the Museum of Modern Art's current show.

A little after three, Molly and I will be walking back from school. I could easily send a sitter for her, or have her use the school car, or let her wait for her older sister to bring her home, but I find I enjoy the walk and her company. Maybe the difference is having the option, but I think it's being able to pay attention to her instead of to my driving.

After a slight raid on the refrigerator, we'll continue on downtown to the small swimming pool at the Y, still walking all the way. The older girls may meet us at the Y, but Laurie will already have been horseback riding, today, and Maggie's school has its own swimming pool, so probably they'll prefer to loaf a bit before starting their homework. They don't have to decide ahead of time, and they don't have to agree, for one or both of them can walk to the Y without me. When I was unchained from that steering wheel, they were freed from enforced mass movements.

By six, the children will be having their evening meal. I'll have the adult dinner pretty well under control, the cocktail tray will be set out, and my husband's key will be turning in the lock. I'll actually sit down with him—we may even talk!—and when homework questions or school-day anecdotes begin to pop, there'll be two of us to enjoy or cope or do whatever's called for. By the time he would be arriving home in the country, we'll now be well dined and wined, sitting over coffee in the living room. There is the prospect of a whole evening ahead. So tonight at 8:30, when the curtain goes up on the ballet at Lincoln Center, I'll be there. I'll be alone, for my husband is not a ballet buff, but we'll both enjoy the evening more than we did when geography forced us to make such trips jointly or not at all.

Such a schedule may not meet your own specifications for nirvana, but given that day-long freedom of choice, you could devise your own kind of day. Out where everything requires a trip, I just couldn't. Time and distance defeated me. I found myself evaluating every activity in terms of total elapsed time—that is, a one-hour course is not worth two hours total, so why go? In essence, only the essentials of living were "worth the trip"; all the fringe benefits were lopped off by my (I suppose) puritan reluctance to waste time. I overdid it, I know. In order to amortize my travel time, I now see, I pyramided my errands (as if to say: "While you're up, get me a case."). But no matter how each individual accommodates to it, the problem of logistics is the controlling one out there.

In his own way, my husband was also following a first-things-first approach to life. The first thing was to get to work and back. Who could ask for anything more?

Well, finally, he could, and I could, and we told the children it was "our turn." Feeling selfish, we moved back. Maybe it's just these smog-colored glasses I've been wearing ever since, but I think it's the children's turn, too. It's their turn to find out who and what they are in a spot where they can meet all kinds of whos and whats. As for our own identity, the diagnosis is now clear: we're of the breed that has concrete in the blood. ■

Opera puts up its Standing-Room-Only notice at almost every performance. Now the city's inhabitants are working on a Gallery of Contemporary Art.

A community that has been surprisingly avant-garde for half a century is Buffalo, New York. Here, in the Albright-Knox Art Gallery, the first United States showing of German Expressionist painting was held in 1906. The next year saw a major show of French Impressionist Art, and within a short time the first exhibit anywhere of photography as an art form was offered. Even the Museum of Science in this industrial town was ahead of its time, pioneering in educational exhibits that were the envy of museums in larger and wealthier places.

Buffalo's excitement about new trends in art has continued. During this past winter there was a remarkable Festival of the Arts Today, a two-week carnival of the newest of the new in art, music, and theater. "Op" and kinetic art, electronic and atonal music, four unfamiliar Ionesco plays (including the American première performance of one called Bedlam Galore), avant-garde dance, films, and a variety of lectures, discussions and symposiums were all part of the esoteric fare. So successful was the venture that Buffalo is thinking of an encore and the possibility of starting a professional repertory company.

The excitement has a way of spreading from one part of the country to another. St. Petersburg has built a large all-purpose arena and a smaller auditorium in its Bayfront Center, and minutes away is the new Museum of Fine Arts.

Houston is about to have a striking theater-concert hall with teak walls, red upholstery, a floodlit exterior, and outside veranda.

Oklahoma City's sixteen-year-old Mummers Theater is using a Ford Foundation grant of over a million dollars to build a playhouse and move out of the old warehouse it now occupies.

And San Diego, whose inhabitants had virtually given up hope of seeing any improvement come to a downtown area that has been described kindly as "blighted," thrilled this winter to the opening of the Civic Theater. The San Diego Symphony's eighty members were thrilled, too, at being able to say good-by to a drafty high-school auditorium and take up residence in a beautiful 3,000-seat concert hall. The first performance there symbolized the hope of a city for its urban renewal program, which calls for an expenditure of $21 million on a community concourse containing a mall, a civic administration building, and a convention hall.

Last December Los Angeles opened the Pavilion—the first building in a $32.2-million Music Center for the Performing Arts. With lush décor and impeccable acoustics, the Pavilion is a concert hall to delight performers as well as audiences. It is the permanent home of the rejuvenated Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra. Once this performance hall was available, a resident ballet company was formed. It made its debut at the Pavilion three months later. And a new city opera company also offered its wares during this time.

In April the same proud city premièred its Los Angeles County Museum of Art, hailed as the largest to be built in the country since Washington, D.C.'s National Gallery made its debut in 1941. Strikingly imposed on Wilshire Boulevard, the Museum of Art consists of three modern buildings that are set into pools of sparkling water and surrounded by fountains. In addition to a collection of art valued on opening day at $35 million and expected to grow by leaps and bounds in this hyper-affluent community, there is a theater that began its career with a regular chamber-music series, and there is a children's art studio. With these two important cultural improvements appearing on its scene in such a short time, Los Angeles proudly bears the title "artistic capital of the western United States," and has spurred other cities on to greater efforts in their own behalf.

One of the places put on the defensive by Los Angeles was San Francisco, which had previously claimed cultural leadership for the Pacific Coast, glorying in its museums, opera, and theater troupes. Impelled by the competition, San Francisco is planning a cultural center that its mayor hopes "will be the envy of every city in the world."

THE real prototype of the American culture center is New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, conceived and dedicated ten years ago and still not complete. It was born when the Metropolitan Opera realized that its ages-old quarters were getting increasingly inadequate, when the New York Philharmonic was being evicted from its traditional base in Carnegie Hall, when a large tract of land, in prime Manhattan territory, was being cleared of slums and debris that had been accumulating for several heedless generations, and when a group of prominent New Yorkers agreed it could be done.

Since the fine arts were already well taken care of in more than half of the city's fifty-odd museums, Lincoln Center was conceived as a home for every branch of the performing arts. Already open are the dramatic, elegant, and beautiful Philharmonic Hall, and the New York State Theater for dance, light opera, and musical theater. These two buildings face each other across a large plaza, which is in itself a much appreciated feature.

About to open are the Vivian Beaumont Theater, designed to house the Lincoln Repertory Company and the Library and Museum of Performing Arts, which will contain the New York Public Library's music, theater, and dance collections. The Juilliard Building will house the famous music school, a chamber-music hall, and recital studios. And the new Metropolitan Opera House will provide the last word in facilities for the nation's grandest opera company.

In many parts of the country a college or university has provided a cultural focus for the entire community. An outstanding example is Ohio State University, whose dramatic, dance, music, and lecture programs are widely attended by the citizens of Columbus. The University of Illinois has a new arena that can handle symphonic concerts as easily as sports events, and its 16,000 seats are as frequently occupied by residents of Champaign and Urbana as by members of the student body. And a superb new concert hall at Butler University serves the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra and traveling theatrical performances as well as the academic community there.

In other parts of the country the vision of one man has awakened a community. Such was the case in Fort Worth, Texas, where newspaper publisher, Amon Carter, provided land, a Foundation, and an art collection. Benefiting from this impetus are the Amon Carter Museum of Western Art, the Fort Worth Museum of Art, the Children's Museum, the Coliseum, the about-to-be-built Kimball Museum of non-Western Americana, and the Casa Mañana, a theater-in-the-round which combines a drama school and summer-stock performances. A few blocks away a zoo and a botanical garden complete the cultural attributes that have brought new pride to the city's inhabitants and new inhabitants to the city.

The director of the million-dollar Children's Museum spoke glowingly of its pace-setting preschool science program for three-, four-, and five-year-olds, and noted that more than half of the museum's annual attendance of 200,000 is actively involved in its programs.

ALL over the United States, citizens are making plans. It is expected that within the next ten years about 1,000 new theaters and multipurpose arts buildings will appear. Of the centers now either under discussion or starting to go up, four pretty well represent the national picture.

One in Detroit is expected to take two decades and $250 million. In it will be a museum of anthropology and natural history, a museum of science and technology, a theater, a concert hall, and a planetarium.

Atlanta will expand its art museum, provide a larger concert hall for its symphony orchestra, build a sizable theater with an eye to an eventual repertory company, and increase the resources of the Atlanta School of Art. All of this will take place in the Atlanta Memorial Cultural Center now going up on Peachtree Street.

The State of New Jersey is planning a Garden State Arts Center along the scenic Garden State Parkway. Here a playhouse, an amphitheater, a mall with historical exhibits, a botanical garden, and nature trails will all be financed by tolls collected by the State Highway Authority.

$15.5 million Congressional appropriation is providing half of the financing for a cultural center on the Potomac to serve the nation. This is the marble, glass, and bronze John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, designed by Edward Durell Stone to accommodate a concert hall, an opera house, a theater, and a cinema and theater-in-the-round.

"The people," Shakespeare said, "are the city." He meant that the people are the will of the city; what the people want, the city gets. And what do the people of America's cities plainly want? To nourish their minds, their hearts, and their spirits with evidence of beauty. ■

Container plants can be used exactly where and when you want them but keep in mind that one really large container is easier to maintain and will support healthier plants than a collection of small pots and tubs.

Plants will grow better, develop more strength to withstand the rigors of winter, and require feeding and watering less often in a large soil area than in a small one. And even such things as bulbs, which you may want to grow in pots so they can be set out of sight after blooming, will be easier to care for if the pots are put in a large planting box.

What about soil for containers? Any good garden soil will do, but I use these lighter mixtures.

Soil for all deciduous and annual plants: one-third vermiculite; one-third garden loam; one-third a mixture of equal parts humus (screened compost), bone meal, fish meal, and blood meal.

Soil for acid-loving plants, such as rhododendron, pieris, and azalea: one-third vermiculite, one-third garden loam, one-third peat moss mixed with humus (screened compost or leaf mold), plus a dollop of iron chelate—according to instructions on the package.

These mixtures are relatively light weight, which is a consideration when containers must be moved, and is particularly important for roof gardens.

Despite all the problems of big-city gardening: soot fall, heat, and wind whistling down the canyons, the battle is half won when you know which plants are best adapted to the life. Following are some good dependable plants for Manhattan—that most trying of all garden spots.

Flowering trees: Silk tree (Albizzia julibrissin), and rose of sharon (Hibiscus syriacus); other trees: weeping willows, especially Salix niobe, Moraine locust, and Russian olive (Eleagnus angustifolia).

Shrubs: Forsythia spectabilis, sweet pepperbush (Clethra alnifolia)—for a shady place, Weigela florida, and Persian lilac.

Vines: These are perennials: Boston ivy, (Parthenocissus tricuspidata), Virginia creeper (P. quinquefolia), wisteria, and fleece-vine (Polygonum auberti)—which must have sun. Use the following annuals for quick effect: Morning glory, scarlet runner bean, and the moonflower (Calonyction aculeatum).

Groundcovers: For shade: Vinca minor, Ivy (Hedera helix), and Ajuga reptans. For sun: creeping thyme (Thymus serpyllum), sedums of all kinds, and Juniperus horizontalis.

Sometimes the only possible place for plants is indoors. Thanks to new developments in lighting, indoor plants need no longer be tied to a window location. Almost any dark corner can be a setting for green plants.

To keep plants growing, the light must be within six to eight inches of the plants, for eight or ten hours a day (or night). This usually requires a special fixture. One good idea is to have a retractable unit recessed in the ceiling above the planting area. This can be let down by chain or pulley to give the plants the close-up light they need. Use a minimum of two four-foot 40-watt white or daylight fluorescent tubes in a reflecting fixture, or use the special tube lights now made to promote growth.

Here are some foliage plants that do quite well in limited light: Dracaena warnecki, aspidistra, Pandanus veitchi, philodendron in variety, Aucuba variegata, and sansevieria.

A few such plants along with a jet of water, and some interesting stones are all you need to have the breath of a living garden no matter where you are in the city. ■

Italian Meat Loaf

6 slices cocktail rye bread
2 slices firm textured white bread
1 medium onion, finely chopped
Few sprigs parsley, finely chopped
1 pound top round beef, ground
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
Dash freshly ground pepper
Butter
1 can (8-ounce size) tomato sauce
1 teaspoon oregano

Break up the bread, place in a bowl, and add 1 cup cold water. When bread has soaked up most of the water, squeeze it out gently. Combine with onion, parsley, beef, cheese, egg, salt, and pepper, working mixture together very thoroughly.

Place into a greased baking pan and shape into a loaf. Dot with butter and bake in a preheated 375°F. oven for ½ hour.

At this point, pour the tomato sauce over the entire loaf, scatter oregano on top, and bake another 20 minutes.

Good hot or at room temperature. Serves 6 or so.

Rudolph Stanish's Moussaka

2 pounds chuck steak, coarsely ground
1 small onion, chopped
½ whole nutmeg, grated
2 tomatoes, peeled, coarsely chopped
Salt
8 baby zucchini
2 small eggplants
½ cup salad oil
Freshly ground pepper
½ pound freshly grated Parmesan cheese
6 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk

Place meat in a large, heavy saucepan with 3 tablespoons water and cook over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, until meat is crumbly—about 10 minutes. Add the chopped onion, nutmeg, chopped tomatoes, a good dash of salt, and cook 20 minutes. Set aside.

Trim ends off zucchini, slice thin; peel and slice eggplants thin.

Heat the salad oil in a very large roasting pan until it smokes. Add the zucchini and eggplant, cook over high heat, stirring constantly, until vegetables are mushy. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Spread in a flat baking dish (about 9 by 14 inches) or in the bottom of a large ovenproof casserole. Sprinkle with about ⅓ of the grated cheese. Spread the meat mixture on top and sprinkle with another ⅓ of the cheese. Melt the butter in a saucepan, stir in the flour until well blended, and cook until butter foams. Stir in the milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce has thickened. This will take five minutes or so. Season with salt to taste.

Spoon the hot sauce over the entire surface, sprinkle with remaining cheese and bake in a preheated 375°F. oven for 1 hour, or until top is golden brown.

Moussaka can be made early in the day or the day before, refrigerated, then heated in a slow (250°F.) oven until hot through. If refrigerated, bring to room temperature before reheating. Serves 8 to 10.

Julia Child's Onion Soup*

1½ pounds yellow onions
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons flour
6 cans beef broth (about)
½ cup dry white wine or dry white vermouth
Pepper
3 tablespoons cognac (optional)
Grated Swiss or Parmesan cheese

Slice the onions very thin (you should have approximately 5 cups) and cook very slowly, covered, with the butter and oil in a large, heavy saucepan for 15 minutes. Remove the cover, stir in salt and sugar (sugar helps onions to brown) and cook over a moderate heat, stirring frequently, until onions have turned an even, deep brown. Sprinkle in the flour and stir for 3 minutes.

Heat the beef broth to a boil, then take off the heat, stir into the onions until well blended. Add the wine, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Simmer, partially covered, for 30 to 40 minutes, skimming occasionally.

Set the soup aside, uncovered, and reheat when ready to serve. To reheat, bring to a boil only. Just before serving, add the cognac. Serves 6 to 8.

To toast bread: Slice crusty French bread about an inch thick and bake in 325°F. oven for about half an hour or until dried out and lightly browned. Place the toast rounds in soup plates and pour soup over them. Pass the grated cheese separately.

June Platt's Quiche Lorraine

Pastry for a 9-inch pie shell
12 strips bacon
4 whole eggs
2 cups heavy cream
Pinch nutmeg
Pinch cayenne
Dash of sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground black pepper
1 cup grated Swiss cheese

Line the pie pan, crimp the edges, and refrigerate. Fry the bacon until crisp. Drain. Break into small pieces.

Combine eggs, cream, nutmeg, cayenne, sugar, salt, and plenty of pepper. Beat with a rotary or electric beater until thoroughly combined.

Sprinkle bacon pieces over bottom of pie shell, cover with the grated cheese, and add the egg mixture. Place in a preheated 400°F. oven and bake 25 to 30 minutes or until a knife inserted in center comes out without any custard clinging to it. Serve hot or at room temperature. Serves 6 to 8.

Gnocchi

½ cup butter
½ cup cornstarch
½ cup farina
Salt
4 cups hot milk
2 cups freshly grated Parmesan cheese
4 egg yolks, well beaten

Melt butter in top of double boiler, mix in cornstarch, farina, and a good dash of salt. Stir in milk gradually and cook over direct heat, stirring vigorously, until mixture gets very thick. Take off the heat, place over double boiler, and cook 3 more minutes. Stir in 1 cup of the cheese. Cool slightly. Combine with well beaten egg yolks. Spread to a thickness of about ¾ inch in a buttered oblong baking dish. Cool. (Prepare the gnocchi to this point if you wish to hold it, then follow directions to bake.)

Cut gnocchi into 2-inch squares. Place squares in a buttered oblong baking dish. Dab each square with a knob of butter, and

Sophie Bullock

Are you one of the discerning gardeners who loves the beauty of that spring garden aristocrat, the stately Tulip? . . . or do you find gaiety in the cheerful faces of the frolicsome Daffodil? . . . or does your pleasure come from growing some of the hundreds of other unusual spring garden companions? If so . . . you will certainly want to select your favorites with care from the pages of Wayside's 1965 Fall Planting Catalog . . . the finest of all garden catalogs. This helpful 144-page book not only lists and illustrates over 1300 rare fall planting items of the highest quality . . . from trees to ground covers . . . it also tells you how to grow them. All have been grown and rigidly tested in America's most carefully supervised nursery.

It's Wayside's quality and Wayside's choice selection that makes the difference

New GIANT TULIP, Sophie Bullock
Sophie Bullock is another Wayside introduction we can recommend without hesitation. This new, perfectly hardy Ideal Darwin Tulip has a handsome, flawless flower which is carried erect on sturdy tall stems . . . 27 inches high. Its color is a lovely cream-white, lightly feathered rose-red toward the edge of the petals. As the flower ages, this attractive feathering becomes more pronounced. Center of flower is yellow with light colored anthers.
Six, $2.25; Doz., $4.10

New FRAGRANT HOSTA, Royal Standard
An oasis of cool green that you'll enjoy all summer is created by a planting of this delightful light green Hosta. In August and September, the plant is further enhanced by charming, exquisitely fragrant, white, lily-like flowers. They bloom atop rigid 18 to 20 inch stems, giving the plant a regal appearance. Hardy as an oak, requires no care and withstands temperatures of 10° below zero.
Each, $2.00; Three, $5.70

sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Top with a second square, butter, and cheese.

Place in a 400°F. oven for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Serves 6 or more.

Chili Con Carne

4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons salad oil
2 large onions, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 pounds ground beef
2 to 3 tablespoons chili powder
4 to 5 fresh tomatoes, peeled, coarsely chopped, or 3 cups canned tomatoes
3 cans beef broth (about)
2 cans (1-pound size) kidney beans, drained
1 teaspoon celery seed
1½ teaspoons cumin seeds
Good pinch oregano
Good pinch cayenne
Salt to taste

Heat butter and salad oil in a large, heavy pan. Add the onions and garlic and cook over moderate heat until onions are soft. Do not brown. Add beef and continue to cook, breaking the meat up with a wooden spatula, until meat has lost its color.

Stir in the chili powder (more if you like it hot), tomatoes, 1½ cups beef broth, the kidney beans, and all the seasonings. Continue cooking, stirring occasionally, over very low heat for 1½ to 2 hours. If mixture dries out, add more broth. Chili Con Carne should be wet but not "soupy." Taste for seasoning. Serves 8. Usually accompanied by tortillas, which should be browned on a hot griddle on both sides until they are "freckled." ■

Chicago

Cape Cod Room, Drake Hotel, 140 East Walton Place, a Midwest version of down-east atmosphere, with fresh flown-in seafood a specialty.

Chez Paul, Rush and Ontario, lately in new quarters, keeps its devotees of the chicken Kiev and similar Franco-American dishes for which it is famous.

Imperial House, 50 East Walton Pl., has been known to present the full and mannerly gamut of a French gourmet dinner and then produce a banana split for a quixotic guest, all elegantly au point.

Jacques, 900 Michigan Ave., is the place to see the beau monde of the city, especially at lunch. Food is excellent continental. There's a garden.

La Tour, 400 East Randolph, on top of a new building with a great view of the city. Food is good. French.

Maison Lafite, in the Churchill Hotel, 1255 North State, extremely elegant in a French Provincial fashion, with an excellent French menu.

Maxim's, 2 North Clark, in its turn of the century art nouveau décor, faithfully copies its Parisian namesake and comes pretty close to it in food.

Pump Room, Ambassador East Hotel, 1300 North State, noted for its sumptuous pseudo-Regency décor, costumed waiters, and dishes served from flaming swords.

Los Angeles

Chasen's, 9993 Beverly Blvd., serves up gourmet meals of the hearty variety, but its celebrity clientele also likes its Hobo Steak and Chili. Expensive.

Perino's, 4101 Wilshire Blvd., very grand food, very fine wines, and a very enthusiastic, well-heeled clientele among gourmets.

Hollywood, California

La Rue, 8631 Sunset Blvd., fine food of the French-Italian genre, elegantly presented, highly priced.

Scandia, 9049 Sunset Blvd., probably the best-known and most esteemed Scandinavian restaurant in the country; food and drink are beautifully and imaginatively prepared.

New Orleans

Antoine's, 713 St. Louis St., since 1840 synonymous with New Orleans, surprisingly modest in atmosphere, but food is elegant, with Oysters Rockefeller and pompano en papillote favorites.

Brennan's, 417 Royal St., handsomely done in the grand manner of New Orleans' belle epoque, with a garden to look at or eat in. Beautiful French and Creole meals. Famous for brunch.

Caribbean Room, Pontchartrain Hotel, 2031 St. Charles Ave., considered by some to be unmatched for fine Creole cuisine: does great things with crab and shrimp.

Commander's Palace, Washington Ave. and Coliseum St., an elegant Garden District mansion where one may sample a particularly well-made Sazerac cocktail, then dine by a patio fountain on Creole specialties.

Galatoire's, 209 Bourbon St., another gustatory landmark in the city of fine food, maintains the highest standards of haute cuisine and a fine cellar.

The Esplanade, Royal Orleans Hotel, Royal and St. Louis Sts., serves excellent continental meals with continental chic and, like all other restaurants in the city, at remarkably moderate tariff.

New York City

Brussels, 115 East 54 St., a charming town-house dining room where a bouquet of red roses is always in bloom, concentrating on fine French and Belgian cuisine; is noted for Ostend sole, waterzooi, and a knowledgeable sommelier.

Chateaubriand, 131 East 54 St., a direct descendant of the famous Chambord, which was partly owned by its proprietor chef and his partner who pursue perfectionist haute cuisine.

Café Chauveron, 139 East 53 St., one of the small elite "greats" of haute cuisine, where all is elegantly done, including French décor and service. Wines are exceptional. Expensive.

Forum of the Twelve Caesars, 57 West 48 St. In a setting of imperial purple, bronze, and mosaic, recalling the grandeur that was Rome, the most classically erudite menu in the world, researched out of Apicius, translated into excellent modern meals.

The Four Seasons, 99 East 52 St. Food sums up the very finest in contemporary American cuisine, with emphasis on the fresh and seasonal, imaginatively presented in two spectacular dining rooms which change their colors with the seasons.

Edwardian Room of the Hotel Plaza, gilded turn-of-the-century marble-hall stateliness makes the room like the hotel itself—a symbol of excellence on the New York scene.

La Caravelle, 33 West 55 St., in the luxurious tradition of fine French cuisine, with seasonal foods frequently flown from abroad. Good cellar.

La Croisette, 1063 First Ave., dispenses the great dishes of France and, as its name implies, makes a specialty of Côte d'Azur cuisine.

La Fonda del Sol, 123 West 50 St., Name any land south of the border and you can feast on its food here against a brilliantly amusing background of colorful artifacts. Children love it and are loved. Gentle prices.

Le Manoir, 112 East 52 St., owned by two alumni of Le Pavillon, purveys beautifully prepared French dishes in a Breton atmosphere under a choice collection of old lamps. Pleasant prices.

Le Pavillon, 111 East 57th St. Considered by most cosmopolitan gourmets who acknowledge its owner, Henri Soulé, as the master of haute cuisine in the U.S.A. Food, wine, and service are superlative, tariff high.

Lüchow's, 110 East 14 St., hearty Germanic dishes in a high-ceilinged, wood-paneled, beer-baron-Gothic landmark that can't have changed much in 83 years. Brisk, busy, a bargain.

The Rainbow Room, 64th floor, RCA Building. Go for an excellent dinner and the enchantment of a nighttime city view. On a clear, sparkling Sunday noon, go for the view and the most imaginative brunch in town. (Same management is opening restaurants in the Museum of Modern Art, in the Sherry-Netherland Hotel, and the new CBS building.)

The Regency Hotel, Park Ave. and 62 St. Its restaurant is a place for special celebrating, bright with crystal chandeliers, upholstered in taupe velvet, designed to glamorize its occupants. Continental-American food.

Tower Suite, 48th floor Time-Life Building, like a glittering, mirrored penthouse dining room, overlooks the city, offers a menu-less dinner of many courses, solicitously served by a maid and butler at each table.

Trattoria, Pan Am Building, purveys the good things you find in little restaurants of Italy—antipasto, vitello tonnato, panettone are exemplary, served from 7 A. M. to late supper, with sophisticated informality.

Voisin, 30 East 65 St., despite several changes of address maintains its same perennially elegant, classic French look, its classic French menu, and its distinguished reputation.

San Francisco

Ernie's, 847 Montgomery St., harks back to Victorian grandeur, gilt, glass and flocked wallpaper, also maintains the grand manner in its French-Italian cuisine and impeccable cellar.

Jack's, 615 Sacramento St., faithfully frequented by San Franciscans who have inherited the 100-year-old-habit of coming here for good, sound American food. A place to hobnob with local celebrities, especially at lunch.

Kan's, 708 Grant Ave., exceptionally good Chinese dishes, with Peking duck a specialty and no chop suey permitted on the premises. Order a day or so ahead and the meal can be a feast.

La Bodega, 256 Columbus Ave., for lovers of flamenco, paella valenciana, and all things Spanish, as authentic in food and atmosphere as you could ask.

L'Orangerie, 419 O' Farrell St., has lately burst upon the confraternity of gourmets with a brilliant, happy light. All is elegantly French, the décor a matter of orange trees. Wine only.

Trader Vic's, 20 Cosmos Place, probably the most imaginatively exotic of all restaurants in a city noted for its wealth of international food. Chinese and Polynesian dishes are not all to be found here. French, Asian, and Indian cuisines are equally excellent.

Yamato's, 717 California, proves that a Japanese meal can be as delicious as it is entertaining. Known for its sukiyaki, but serious buffs can order up more esoteric dishes with their sake.

Washington, D.C.

Golden Parrot, Connecticut at R. St., an old-mansion-turned-restaurant, has a red plush quality, serves continental food with a strong American flavor.

Jockey Club, Massachusetts at 21 St., considered by many a cosmopolite the place to get the best French food in the town. Elegant and costly.

Paul Young's, 1120 Connecticut, claims a certain fame because President Kennedy ate here, as do many bigwigs. Good American food in a grand setting.

Rive Gauche, Wisconsin at M St., Georgetown, serves very fine French food in surroundings reminiscent of Paris.

Parker

is making grass GREENER these days

Is thatch making your lawn brown and ugly? Thatch, that matted, dead grass imbedded in the turf is the worst enemy of a healthy, green lawn. Well, Parker is making grass greener these days with the new Thatch-O-Matic Power Rake that easily, quickly, removes thatch by power raking instead of arduous hand raking. And, the Thatch-O-Matic removes thatch without damage to living grass. You can rent the Parker Thatch-O-Matic at most Hardware Stores and Garden Centers.

Parker

is keeping grass GREENER these days

After de-thatching your lawn, keep it greener by regularly using a Parker Lawn Sweeper or Vacuum. Unlike the bag-type mower that catches only a portion of the grass clippings as you mow, a Parker Sweeper easily removes practically all of the grass clippings, leaves and other debris; prevents thatch build-up . . . keeps your lawn greener. Manual, trailer and powered sweepers and vacuums are available.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL'S REMODELING ISSUE

we set up housekeeping in the Village, and were still living there 18 months later when our first child was born. By the spring of 1950, we had three children sleeping in one room and, although we didn't seem to realize it, were long overdue for the next move in the ritual progression, the borrowed-station-wagon transfer to Long Island, Connecticut, or to Cheever country in Westchester. Instead, when a colleague of mine obligingly decided to resettle in Washington, we resettled ourselves on East 94th Street in her roomier apartment, which was really the lower two floors of a brownstone. Three years later we bought a brownstone of our own four blocks south where, rich in space and poor in pocketbook, we have lived ever since. Meanwhile, the children in the family have grown to six, including a nephew who joined us by adoption.

If I concede that much of city life is every bit as difficult as our outlander friends may tell us, and further agree that many people—and I don't mean just avid gardeners and light sleepers—would be miserable here, may I list several of the things we like about it?

We enjoy, for one thing, not having to live our lives at the sufference of train schedules. I suppose the most important reason we stayed in town was that Charles so detested the idea of commuting. He is now a law-school professor who can teach at night, if need be, and not be faced by a jolting ordeal by New York Central at the end of a 12-hour day. Nor are the rest of us faced with a temporarily fatherless household on such nights, when he might quite reasonably decide to take the coward's way out and stay over in the city. If, on a shorter working day, the two of us want to stop off for a drink or a whole evening with someone from our respective offices or with a college friend we happen to run into, we can do it without asking leave of that Procrustean schedule or worrying about making the next morning's 7:59. Thus, social life in the city is often impromptu and informal. Some New Yorkers enjoy the ceremonial party routine; some studiously avoid it without being thought of as particularly eccentric. Weekends, in any event, aren't given over to strenuous atonement for the social deficiencies of the other five-sevenths of your life. And there's an added dividend in the great miscellaneous world of the city: though you may choose to, you're not virtually bound, as you may be in some two-acre-zoned suburban communities, to spend all your spare time with other couples who, professionally and chronologically, have reached a stage of life almost identical with your own.

Another argument for staying in town, if we had ever argued about it, was that I hoped to go on working. The mother of a family who wants to keep her hand in some trade or profession has to have all that I've been blessed with—a phrase I use advisedly. She must have a forebearing husband, a patient employer, and dependable domestic help, which is more easily arranged for in the city, and the helper doesn't have to be driven to the other side of the township after a long, hard day. Her office must also be close enough to home so that, if all hell breaks loose there, she can be on the scene in ten minutes. Since the employer to whom I was most happily committed had his headquarters on West 43rd Street, the suburbs were out. But even if I had stopped working for several years, as many women do when their children are young, I think I would have preferred not to be isolated geographically from the world I hoped in time to get back to.

As for the children, the hardest period with them in the city is obviously when they are all quite small. The park routine can be tiresome. On the other hand, I notice that country children often spend a good share of their time puttering about under the dining-room table instead of in the perfectly available outdoors. At any rate, this stage of family life, not an easy one wherever you live, does eventually pass. And from the time they're six or seven, it seems to me that many city children lead very satisfactory lives. Ours began to ride the Madison Avenue bus to school in those years, and when they're ten or eleven they're capable, at least during daylight hours, of going almost anywhere they want in the city, using public transportation, including the subway. Independent souls, they move around town under their own steam, free to enjoy what is not at all a dull environment, to cheer the Beatles in front of Delmonico's or see a Yankee game, to make friends with the brontosauri in the Museum of Natural History, or play baseball or ride their bikes in Central Park, where my husband sometimes joins them on weekends. When they're older, they meet their friends at the corner drugstore or at each others' houses and, in at least one respect, live rather a simpler existence, I think, than some of their suburban counterparts: no one under eighteen may drive in this city, and even a college boy with a car is a rarity. When my high-school-age children are out of sight, I can be reasonably certain they're not careening along some highway in a souped-up sports car under the dubious control of a teenager who's had too many beers.

The fact that the world is made up of all sorts and conditions of men comes as no rude surprise in later years to city-bred children, nor will they be in danger of regarding people of different races and nationalities in terms of stereotypes, to be condemned or idealized out of all reason. My children's schoolmates over the years have included delegates from most of the ethnic and religious groups that make up the great melting pot, and any given group, not excepting, of course, the WASPs, has turned out to have its paragons, its good-enough kids, and its rascals. Unfortunately, the urban crime rate may also cease to be a set of remote statistics to city kids, as when two poorly dressed teenagers knocked one of our younger boys off his brand new bicycle and raced off with it. But perhaps the knowledge that this is rather a savage world in which such disasters—and far worse ones—may well happen is a lesson that is better learned early. No child in our neighborhood will ask, as did a young friend of ours from one of the more affluent suburbs: "But why would anybody steal a bicycle? Everybody has a bicycle."

When the bicycle heist happened in front of the place where we buy our newspapers, Sol Haas, the owner, abandoned his store, jumped into his nearby car, chased the heisters 30 blocks, wrested the bike from them, and delivered it back to our house, wearing the gratified smile of a TV hero who had just foiled a gang of rustlers. So much for the fable that you never know your neighbors in New York or that, if you do, they all walk rapidly in the other direction as soon as you're in trouble. One of the satisfactions of living in the city is seeing the more dismal legends about it so often confounded. Of course, some of them are true. But don't ask me about those. I'm sure the lady over there from Westport will help you. ■

Architect W. Nelson Anderson and Decorator Elizabeth Emery, the new owner started her personal project, restoring the façade to its original appearance, repairing the interior, replacing vanished mantels and such with like ones, finding furnishings of or in harmony with the 18th-century ones, and at the same time incorporating some of today's major conveniences—a modern kitchen, up-to-date bathrooms, an elevator, air conditioning.

Replacing the lower part of the façade, destroyed when the wide warehouse door was installed, entailed a lot of brick-picking—the selection of 432 blue-glazed headers. Equally careful attention was given to interior detail.

The furnishings are a felicitous mix of antiques, reproductions, family heirlooms, and other sympathetic pieces of unknown age.

The small back yard has been glorified into a garden and given a little pool, not large enough for swimming but deep enough for a dip or a plunge, and the narrow back alley has become a parking space for visitors' cars.

This painstaking labor of love, now completed, has resulted in a private residence surely even more charming than it was in the days when Society Hill was living up to its name.

At present the tatterdemalion neighborhood is in the midst of spotty but widespread renewal, involving federal funds and private enterprise. Margaret Walsh's achievement in combining the best of two eras is proof that renewal can be a literal term, a promise that Society Hill will bloom again. ■

THE SUGGESTED TRIAL
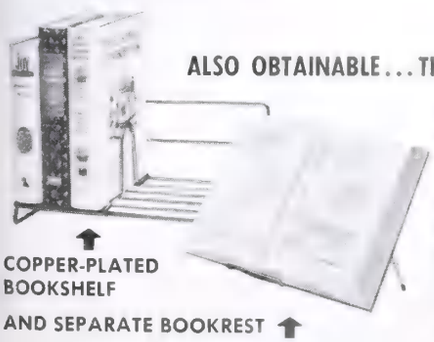
You simply agree to buy three Club Selections or Alternates within the next year.



BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A home-library building plan every book-reading family should know about

THE OBVIOUS purpose of this suggested trial is to have you discover, by actual experience, the extraordinary opportunity you will have to acquire a well-rounded library of useful as well as beautiful books at little cost—through the Club's unique Book-Dividend system. If you continue after this trial, with every Club choice you buy you receive a Book-Dividend Certificate which, together with a nominal sum—usually $1 or $1.50, occasionally more for unusually expensive volumes—can be redeemed for one of the Club's Book-Dividends.

✶ HOW CAN THIS BE DONE? A portion of the amount members pay for the books they buy is accumulated and invested in entire editions of valuable books and sets through special contractual arrangements with the publishers.

These are the Club's Book-Dividends. Since its inauguration the almost incredible sum of over $330,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been received by members through this unique plan.

✶ GOOD SENSE ▪ There are three other long-proved benefits of membership. First, members have a wide choice among the best new books—at least 200 a year. Second, the prices to members average 20% below retail prices. Finally, the Club's unique method of operation insures you against missing the new books you fully intend to read.

ALSO OBTAINABLE . . . THE "RECIPECENTER"†

nspiration: Romantic Vienna Floor: Montina Vinyl Corlon

Gilded mirrors, satin, filigree—things from a romantic past—help create a graceful atmosphere for dining. For such a setting choose a floor that's rich in design and color—like Montina Vinyl Corlon by Armstrong.

Montina is made of stone-like chips of vinyl veined with color. They are set in deep, translucent vinyl to create intriguing, pebbly texture. This textured surface has a practical advantage, too. It helps hide scuffs and heel marks.

Because Montina Vinyl Corlon comes in long, wide rolls, there's scarcely a seam wall to wall.

And Montina can be used anywhere in the home—even in most downstairs playrooms, directly over the concrete.

In Canada, send 25¢ to Armstrong, Upper Wall St., New York, N.Y. P.Q. Floor shown: style 6631, Montina. Trademarks [illegible] of Armstrong Cork Co.

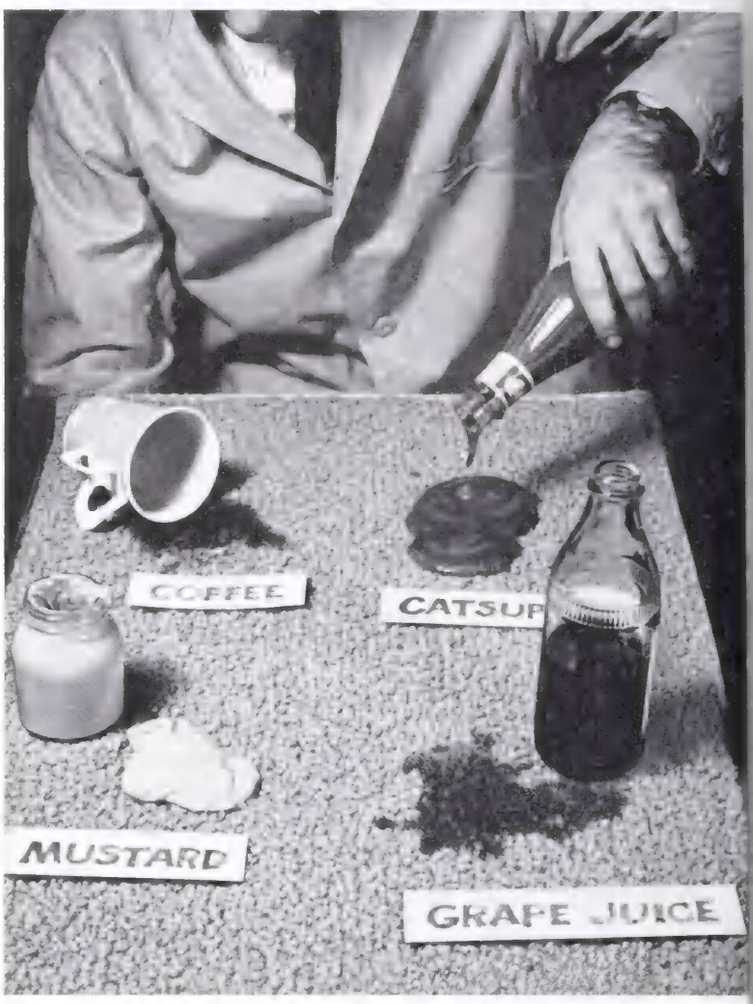
Mohawk's new Ultra Trendtex® Carpet ...so beautiful, so durable, so care free!



On the next pages read how Good Housekeeping confirms the remarkable facts about this years-ahead new Acrilan carpet from Mohawk.

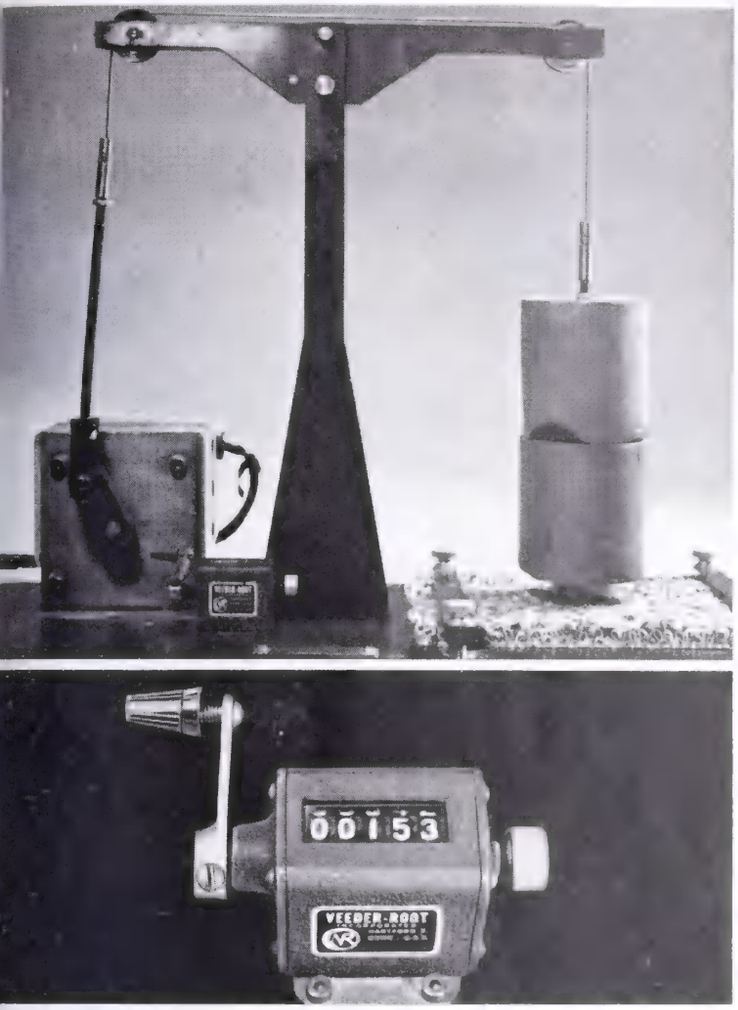
Tested on every score, Ultra-Trendtex



Durability Test! The test: four solid hours of pounding and twisting by this multi-directional abrasion machine — roughly the equivalent of many years of wear. The result: Mohawk's Ultra-Trendtex carpet of Acrilan acrylic and modacrylic can really take it! Examined after this punishing treatment, the pile was found ready for years of service.

Cleanability Test! The test: samples are stained with mustard, catsup, grape juice, coffee — some of the toughest staining agents. After 24 hours these must be removed successfully with ordinary rug shampoo. The result: Ultra-Trendtex shows its amazing stain resistance. All were removed easily with no unsightly loss of color or disturbance of surface texture.

esiliency Test! The test: a load equivalent to the traffic f a 180-pound person is applied 360 times at the rate f 6 times a minute, in one concentrated area, after hich carpet is measured for thickness. The result: ltra-Trendtex far exceeds Good Housekeeping's re-uirements, with a 91% regain of thickness after just ve minutes, a full 97% after 24 hours!

Traffic Aisle Test! The test: Good Housekeeping's grueling "carpet aisle." Carpet is examined before and after being walked on 20,000 times, then inspected after vacuuming and home cleaning. The result: A rating well above the Good Housekeeping requirement. Tested for cleanliness and for thickness on their Compressometer, Ultra-Trendtex was found practically good as new.

Choose your new Ultra-Trendtex carpet in rich tweeds or plain colors, in a complete range of Contemporary tones. You couldn't find a better Acrilan carpet value for just $10.50 per sq. yd.

Why settle for a miniature lamp with just one intensity?

This new Eagle Lamp gives you three for the price of one

A High Intensity that provides the equivalent of 100 watts of illumination... pure-white, glare-free ...that lets you see things in a different light. It's the perfect light to read by, write by, sew by, make-up by, do any kind of close-up work by. And because it casts no shadows, adds no color of its own, it's ideal for color-matching or painting.

Use it anywhere. The 4½" round base fits in the palm of your hand, makes any desk or table top instantly bigger. The flexible gooseneck bends, twists, turns to shed light wherever you need it. The shade swivels a full 360°.

A Medium Intensity that's ideal for any kind of background lighting. You'll find thousands of uses for this versatile little lamp. Eagle, long a household word in electrical specialties, makes every important part (except the bulb) right in their own factories where Eagle engineers guard the quality from start to finish. Result: a lamp you can enjoy for a lifetime of pleasure.

The Eagle Lamp offers all these extras too. A convenient handle on the shade that makes light-directing easy. A slotted tab that pulls out for wall hanging. A felt-covered bottom that protects against scratching. Approval by Underwriters' Laboratories.

APPROVED BY UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES

A Low Intensity that's just right as a night light. Use it in baby's room or in your bedroom where you need a lamp that provides just enough light to see by, without disturbing anyone, yet is ready to shed plenty of pure-white light at the turn of a knob.

See the new Eagle Lamp at department stores, specialty shops and hardware stores in these decorator shades: bronze, sand, grey, black, pastel green. $11.95, including bulb. If not available at your favorite store, order directly from Eagle Electric. Send check or money order and specify color.

some things improve with age

Lunt sterling silver, for one. How many others can you name? (Fair game!) What else do you own that won't ever pass its prime? Hasn't any built-in obsolescence whatever? Actually does grow lovelier, more glowing, as the years go by? Think about that. Lunt is the real thing. The silver of a lifetime. Lunt, like love, is here to stay.

STERLING

For information write Lunt Silversmiths, Dept. HB-3, Greenfield, Mass.

Barwick gives a rich, new look to limbo...

It was a great day for Goombay . . . when Gene Barwick rolled out his thick red carpet on the beach. The heated beat of drums echoed up and down Bay Street. A native dancer loosened up for the limbo. Underneath it all, exotic Barwick carpet . . .bright as the sun, rich as pirate's gold. You'd think such deep magic out of reach. Not so. Barwick is modestly priced. Yet if you owned the Bahamas . . . you couldn't buy finer carpet than Barwick.

Before you go out and spend a lot of money on custom draperies, you owe it to yourself to ask these questions.

1. Do you need an airy weave to bring the outside in?
2. Or do you need a denser weave to keep the outside out?
3. Will the fabric you've chosen shrink or stretch out of fit?
4. Is your window exposed to a great deal of sunlight that might damage the drapery fabrics?
5. Will the fabric wrinkle?
6. Can you afford or do you want to afford the cost of cleaning bills?
7. Are you decorating windows in an "active" room where spotting, spilling, even an accidental fire can be a problem?
8. Is this fabric truly as beautiful as you were hoping to find, or are you just compromising?

Owens-Corning Fiberglas custom drapery fabrics come in every type of beautiful weave, style, pattern, and color to suit any decor, enhance every type of window or room.

Fiberglas* fabrics are the only ones that are also sun-safe, fire-safe, washable, water-proof, and never need ironing. Isn't it worth your while, and more than a little fun, to ask your decorator about Owens-Corning Fiberglas Fabrics? Or see them in better fabric departments?

Valuable names and places from our little black book to yours

By EPSIE KINARD

The "permanent" pleating of fabric—to turn a bedroom into a frilly world of fluted canopies and dust ruffles, or a baby's bassinet into a vision of crinkled pink chiffon and net—is done by B. J. Denihan, 505 E. 75th St., N.Y.C. Besides sunburst, crystal, circular, knife, box, or accordion pleats, hand-done for $2.50 a yard, they'll carry out your own pleating ideas from a paper-creased sample. Before buying fabric, ask about yardage.

Where to get a quilted historic chintz, the Wedding Ring quilt that you've pieced, or your great bargain in Hong Kong silk? Islip Quilting Co., P.O. Box 296, West Islip, L.I., N.Y., will quilt any fabric in the yardage, already cut for making slipcovers, or seamed for making bedspreads. You can choose between washable Dacron or nonwashable cotton wadding for a filler; between machine or hand-guided outline quilting in a wide choice of patterns. Send for brochure and prices.

How to get made-to-order cords and tassels for swagged valances, curtain tie-backs, stair-rail ropes, or bolsters? And braid, fringe, edging, guimpe, or woven welting, in designs made to order or in colors dyed to match your other fabrics? The drapery fabric department of your local store will take orders (along with your color swatch, sample, or sketch) for Cons-i Products, Inc. to fill. This firm, whose special weaving, dyeing, and matching antique designs have helped restore our historic houses' and museums' treasures, will fill even as small an order as one yard.

TV snackers and spillers and pets with muddy paws needn't keep you from using lush pastel or breath-catching white fabrics in your home. You can have them pretreated with a repellent finish that protects against water, oil, or greased-based stains. Perma Dry, 3 W. 17th St., N.Y.C. will fluorodize any fabric, even velvets or silk; will specially pretreat slipcover cottons to make them washable. When sending yardage, allow two inches per piece for testing. Prices range from $3.50 for one yard to 55 cents per yard for 50 or more y rds.

Having household fabrics woven to order may seem like a belle epoque indulgence, but a Michigan housewife who keeps three looms busy brings this luxury very much into our times. Using fine imported and domestic yarns, Mrs. H. J. Horrigan, 25205 Inkster Rd., Farmington, Mich., will make up any design or color you want for upholstery, curtain fabrics, bedspreads. After receiving your ideas, she'll submit a choice of swatches.

House Beautiful is building a list of china-matching and replacement sources. Please send information and addresses to Epsie Kinard, Room 702, 572 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022.

What's new in

Wood Flooring

Wood was a popular floor even back in Biblical days. It was pleasantly warm and not too hard underfoot, and it had character. Those attributes still hold. In the thousands of years that have elapsed, the material itself has remained the same ageless product. But the way we use it and keep it has changed.

The biggest change is in its maintenance. Penetrating sealers and modern resin finishes have made wood floors sensibly easy to care for. Modern technology has also widened the range in which a wood floor is suitable. There are varieties that can be installed on concrete, at or below ground level. New thinner types of flooring are ideal for installing over existing floors in remodeling. They don't appreciably alter the existing floor level. Of special importance, factory prefinishing has made it possible to have a new floor in a single day. The moment it's put down, it's ready to use.

Wood flooring is a long-lasting product. Distress and aging often put a glow on furniture, and a wood floor is a kind of furniture. It can actually improve with use, gain in interest. The years don't wear it out. They add mellowing subtleties of color and a sense of belonging to the scene. If extreme neglect and abuse disfigure a floor, it can be sanded down to reveal an entirely new surface—an important asset.

Wood is versatile. It can be laid in any kind of geometric design (parquetry), shaped in curves, and inlaid (marquetry). One wood can be combined with another or even with metal. Typical examples are a stripping of light maple in a teak floor or a sunburst of brass in a walnut floor. But more important perhaps than these specialties are the basic wood floors, the everyday varieties whose low cost is no reflection on their beauty or worthiness.

Most common are "strip" floors. As the name implies, these are made of narrow boards, usually from 2″ to 3¼″ wide. "Plank" floors are made of wider boards (3″ to 8″). Since these boards may be too wide to be held securely by nailing at the edges only, nails may be driven through the face of the boards and concealed by wood or brass plugs. The plugs are so decorative they are sometimes inserted even when not needed. One unusual style of plank flooring alternates beveled wide and narrow boards, and is available in a popular dark finish.

COLONIAL PLANKING

Block floors are a variation on the parquet floors in which several wood strips are bound together to make individual square blocks or tiles. The blocks can be laid in mastic, or nailed, and are available prefinished.

There is also a laminated (plywood) type of block flooring. Of three plies and often no more than ⅜″ thick, it is one of the lowest in cost and ideal for remodeling purposes. It is this type that can be laid on concrete at or

Owens-Corning Fiberglas makes the Beta yarn, not the fabrics or the bedspreads

A Fiberglas* Beta* bedspread is so beautiful you'd never let anything happen to it.

But it's nice to know you can.

Accidents will happen, but a damp cloth will wipe it clean—if it's a Fiberglas Beta bedspread. Spill, spot, drip, drop—and relax. Fiberglas Beta bedspreads machine wash, never need ironing, won't wrinkle, stretch or shrink out of fit. Firesafe too. That's how Fiberglas Beta bedspreads stay as beautiful as they start—new and fresh-looking year after year after year. See them in leading department stores in your city.

"standard custom floors." They come in such woods as plain or quartered oak, red oak, Gothic oak, walnut, cherry, and teak. Gothic or fumed oak is produced by a special heat and steam treatment that stains the wood with its own juices and produces a wonderful look of age. It is not a surface effect. The stain goes all the way through.

A "Fontainebleau" floor offers what might be described as an en-below ground level. It can also be installed over radiant-heated slabs and is toxic-treated to prevent termite damage.

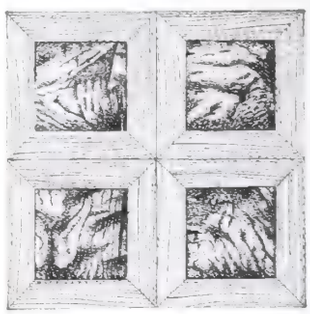
By all odds, the most popular wood for floors is oak. This is because the Northern Hemisphere, both here and in Europe, is almost one oak forest. It is an excellent wood, has good stability and wearing qualities, and takes finishing well.

Walnut, maple, beech, cherry, pecan, and hickory are other woods in common use. More unusual floors may be made of exotic woods such as teak, mahogany, ebony, and palisander. Sometimes walnut is stained to look like ebony. Real ebony has a tendency to crack and check and is seldom satisfactory if used in more than a small piece.

Most woods come in several grades. Grade is primarily a matter of appearance. Higher grades are usually more uniform in grain and color, but for rustic, informal, or natural effects the lower grades, containing mineral streaks, sapwood areas, and tight knots, may actually be more desirable. Color sealers on lower grades can mask imperfections.



Brown is the most popular color sealer, but there are other colors to consider. A subtle pastel green may be just the thing to blend with the color scheme. Currently popular are dark floors. Many decorators favor them, feeling the dark tones "hold the floor down" and show off furnishings to better effect. When Mrs. Kennedy did over the White House, she stained its floors a darker shade.

Europe is famous for its antique floors, many of them dating back to the 18th Century. Some of the most famous of these antique floor designs are available in reproduction and are known as sists of squares of beautifully figured wood, each square enclosed by a mitred frame. The "Thomas Jefferson" is an inexpensive laminated variant of this, with elongated pickets enclosing each square. The "Marie Antoinette" design has squares enclosed by interwoven wood strips. The "Haddon Hall" is a reproduction of a famous English basket-weave floor.

Actually, any design can be reproduced in wood, and if there are special requirements or a per-pieces of the art and may cost twice as much as a reproduction of the same design. A 20′ by 40′ 18th-century antique floor in popular French styling usually commands from $5,000 to $10,000, installed. Many have a significant history, and the magnificent patina of their years is a fitting background for an Aubusson or Savonnerie, where a lesser floor might not do these rugs justice.

When antique floors are duplicated, they may be done as new antiques, or the aging may be simulated. This "antiquing" is usually exaggerated. Authentic or not, most customers seem to demand it. Antiquing is done after the floor is installed, typically with scrapers, wire brushes, and awls (for worm holes). Since no two floor mechanics work alike, if two are engaged on the job, they will cross over as they proceed to get a pleasant and uniform mix of their individual styles.

A good floor—new or antique—is only as good as its installation. It takes a mechanic who knows wood floors. If it is laid on an uneven surface, it will be uneven. There must be proper allowance for expansion and contraction. Nails must be of the type and spacing recommended, with no skimping or short cuts.

Maintenance is easy. Floors that have been sealed, stained, and waxed last indefinitely without refinishing. Three or four waxings a year will keep them in top shape. But waxing must be done properly: All old wax must be stripped off clean, and two or three coats of good paste wax applied, with buffing between each coat. Water should never be used on a wood floor.

Wood floors may be ordered through dealers listed in the classified phone directory, or through decorators and architects if the job is a special one. ■ sonal motif to be incorporated in a floor, a custom order will handle it. Cost depends on the labor.

Most standard varieties of prefinished flooring, installed, are about $1.50 to $2.50 per square foot. Standard custom patterns can be installed for about $3 to $7 per square foot. Special custom patterns may be higher, depending on the labor required to produce them. The laying, sanding, staining, and finishing (as required) are included in these prices, but not the cost of repairs that may be required on the original floor.

There is a good supply of genuine antique floors available. Most of these come out of France, Italy, and other West European countries. These are, in reality, not just floors. They are master-

MORGAN-JONES Insulaire® blanket: a family coverage plan for all seasons

Fit for a queen—or a king-size bed—"Insulaire" is the thermal blanket to be reckoned with. It warms you in winter (just toss any light covering over it), cools you in summer (thousands of tiny air cells speed away body heat), does a jolly job of sleeping you comfortably 365 nights a year. And beautifully, too. "Insulaire" looks like an afghan Granny might have knit. Comes in the most heavenly colors, patterns, designs. All machine-wash-and-dryable. Sizes? As we said, queen, king and, naturally, single and double. Nice? Stores, opposite.

About colors, now. Cornflower, snow, sand, curry, lemon, sea-spray, avocado, carnation, rose, persimmon, lilac, cherry red.

Yes, even dried-egg spots

At last! A dishwasher detergent that really does both!
(1) cleans difficult food stains (2) ends water spots

You need a dishwasher detergent that does more than stop water spots. Now it's here!

No matter what the stain—dried-in grease, sticky chocolate, goóey syrup, filmed-in milk, smudged lipstick, stubborn tea stains—even dried-up egg spots—now you can have glasses, silver, dishes, pots that are cleaner, brighter than any other dishwasher detergent can make them—and without water spotting.

Electrasol's even-flow formula cleans without clinging. This is due to an extraordinary wetting agent that makes water "wetter" so it cleans even the most difficult stains—then rolls right off your dishes. Will not spot, film or streak...no matter how hard the water...or what make your dishwasher. No wonder Electrasol is recommended by every leading dishwasher manufacturer.

From the kitchen of a famous food editor come helpful answers to some common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

Does refrigerating baked custards cause the liquid in the bottom of the dish? No. If custards "weep," as the saying goes, there is some imbalance in the recipe or they have been baked incorrectly. Restaurants bake and refrigerate custards days in advance without any such dire results. We can only answer by saying, "Find a good recipe and follow it exactly."

Is there an easy way to tidy up a serving dish once the food is on it? Cotton swabs, dear lady, available in your drugstore. Just dampen the little cotton tips and "swab away" any spills, then discard. So much simpler than a bulky, damp cloth. On HOUSE BEAUTIFUL we use them constantly, finding them especially useful when we've frosted a cake and some of the frosting drips onto the cake stand.

What is meant by fines herbes? Unless the recipe specifically calls for other herbs, it is a mixture of parsley, chervil, chives, and tarragon. At one time, fines herbes meant mushrooms and shallots, but today this combination is called a duxelles.

What is the secret of clear ice cubes? The secret is so simple it is almost ridiculous. Boil the water to get rid of all the air and bubbles which make the ice cloudy. Pour into ice trays, cool, then refrigerate.

What is the difference between pink and white Champagne? Basically, Champagne is a white wine made from a combination of white and blue-black grapes. The wine is white because the juices are removed from their skins immediately after pressing. With pink Champagne, the juices are left in contact with the skins to give the pinkish color. In some instances small quantities of red wine from the Champagne district are added to achieve the correct shade of pink. As for sweetness, this depends on the amount of sugar syrup added by the grower (all Champagnes have sugar added).

and this is the factor that determines the dryness or sweetness of the finished wine. A pink or rosé Champagne would not necessarily be sweeter than other types. French Champagne designated as Brut has the least amount of syrup added, and a dry or Sec, the most.

Is it possible to prevent brown sugar from hardening? Sugar experts recommend removing brown sugar from package and storing in an airtight container such as a large-mouth pickle jar with rubber rings (usually available in hardware stores) and buying only as much as you can use up in a short time.

Why do eggs stick like glue to pots, pans, dishes, egg beaters? Chances are you wash them in hot water, which makes the remnants of the egg stick harder. Cold water is the answer. Allow equipment to stand in or run it under cold water, as soon after use as possible; then wash in hot suds.

What precisely are truffles and how are they used? A member of the tuber family and kin to the famous morel or sponge mushroom, the truffle is a fungus fruit that matures underground. Truffles range in color from white (the famous Piedmont of Italy) through shell pink to brown to shiny jet black (the magnificent Périgord of France). Of the many types, those most highly prized seem to combine the savor of a filbert and a properly matured cheese. Black truffles are added to dishes and sauces for the sake of their penetrating scent, whereas white truffles are rarely cooked more than a couple of minutes and are often eaten raw.

Is there any trick to cleaning up a raw egg spilled on the floor? Cover it well with salt and allow to stand for 15 to 20 minutes, then sweep it up with a broom. Easy?

Why do baked cakes sometimes have "air holes"? It's because the batter hasn't been evenly distributed and there are, quite literally, pockets of air. This usually happens only in rich, butter cakes such as pound. Once the batter is in the pan, run a spatula through it, then give the pan a good bang on a table. Don't, however, be tempted to do any banging with an air cake (sponge or angel), or you'll bang out the lovely air that makes them light.

What is monosodium glutamate? To explain it as simply as possible, it is a natural substance found in most of the foods you eat, but in greater amounts in meats, poultry, fish, and vegetables. Technically, it is one of the amino acids that make up protein to build and repair body tissues. First discovered in the Orient, it is used to enhance the natural flavor of foods. Unlike salt or sugar (although it looks like both) it has no individual taste. Known in the professional world as MSG, it is used widely by leading food processors. Ac'cent is the brand most familiar to Americans and Aji-no-moto, to the Japanese. A splendid Chinese cook we know, who has used it all her life, suggests the best way to learn to use monosodium glutamate properly is to begin with sauces and soups and use small amounts—$\frac{1}{8}$ teaspoon to 2 cups.

Our Readers Tell Us

On reading our comments about washing or not washing salad bowls (April, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL), Mrs. Robert O. Branch, Waterford, Connecticut, wrote to say: "Salad bowls are rather a fetish of mine. Last year I bought some unfinished ones (why do they put a finish on in the first place?), rubbed them inside and out with plain salad oil until the wood was saturated, then let them sit overnight before washing. The patina has increased with use and now they are treated just like any dishes that have to be hand-washed." A sensible solution to the salad bowl problem. ■

PLAYER-PIANO FUN—FINE PIANO PLEASURE

Shelves

By DAVID X. MANNERS

WHY? The biggest lack in American homes today is storage, and shelves offer the easiest way to get it. They are also an inexpensive way to add interest to bare walls and make skimpy furnishings count for more. They can hide unattractive architecture, change a room's dimensions, or divide its functions.

Many kinds of shelving units come ready-made, or knock-down for quick assembly. It's also easy to make your own shelves and fit spaces and requirements exactly. In some cases, no tools are needed at all.

WHERE? Shelves are useful in every area of the house. Walls aren't the only place for them. They can be freestanding and serve as room dividers. They can be combined with existing furniture to improve their style and utility. They can extend cabinets, go under tables, or in tiers on top of them. They can be hung on the back of cabinets or closet doors. They can fill a doorway or window you want blocked and make it appear the openings never existed. In garage, attic, or basement, they can be hung from rafters.

Shelves create storage in an apartment, where there's no space for necessities like a vacuum cleaner or extra bedding. Install shelves for this purpose in a corner and hide them with a decorative screen. Even a large screen can be readily moved if it's hooked to the wall on one side and set on casters.

HOW? Shelving is available in fine woods, such as teak and walnut ($2 per foot), as well as inexpensive pine (20 cents). Even low-cost shelves can be given distinction with decorative edge-moldings, available in variety at most lumber yards.

Flush doors make good shelves, and commonly come in birch and Philippine mahogany for as little as $5 or $6. Since they're usually at least $1\frac{1}{8}$" thick, they look substantial. Almost any door is wide enough to divide into two shelves. If it has a hollow core, the space on the cut side can be filled with a wood strip. Most lumber yards will do the sawing.

Pine shelving boards come in sizes up to 1" by 12". The actual size of a 1" by 12" board is $\frac{3}{4}$" by $11\frac{1}{2}$". Where you need greater width than $11\frac{1}{2}$", use plywood, or join one board alongside another with white glue and corrugated fasteners, hammered in from the bottom side. Nail a $\frac{3}{4}$" by $\frac{3}{4}$" board across each end as added reinforcement.

A $\frac{3}{4}$" shelf, supported only at its ends, should not span more than 30". If longer than that, it may sag, especially if it's loaded with books. To improve looks, attach a $1\frac{1}{2}$"-wide facing strip along the shelf's front edge. It will make the board look thicker, and also act as reinforcement, especially if glued and securely nailed. Use 6-penny finishing nails, and sink the heads just below the surface.

Instant shelving can be made by alternating boards of appropriate length with concrete blocks, glass blocks, flue tiles, bricks, or other supports. Shelf spacer columns of wood are also available. They screw into place, and can support freestanding shelves and shelves without support on one or more sides.

A shelf in a closet can be supported with cleats. Cleats are merely strips of wood attached to the wall under each self end, and possibly also along its back edge. The strip may be $\frac{3}{4}$" quarter-round, or other molding.

Bookcase-style shelves can rest on the floor or hang on a wall. If hung, the important support is the cleat on which the rear edge of the case rests. Almost all weight will be on it, so it should be well nailed or screwed to the wall.

Secure fastening usually means attachment to studs, the wall's vertical structural members. One way to locate studs is by rapping on the wall. The space between studs sounds hollow. Another is to look for baseboard nails. They are usually driven into studs. Or explore with a fine drill in inconspicuous places. Typical studs are spaced on 16" centers, so when you've located one, you have a clue to the others.

When shelves turn an inside corner, get a smooth transition and good support with a beveled lap. Instead of butting the shelves together where they meet, bevel the two meeting edges at 45-degree angles. Lower board supports the upper.

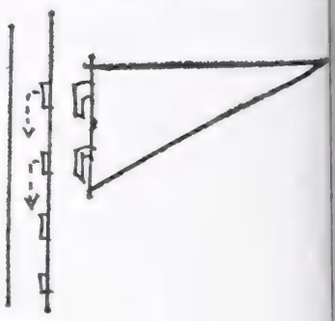
When designing book shelves, make them at least 1" higher than the books you will store. In general, allow 8" for paperbacks, 10" for average books, 12" for encyclopedias, at least 14" for children's books. The highest shelf most adults can reach is 78".

To hang on the back of a door, fit shelves into a box frame. To keep things from falling off when the door is used, nail a wood or metal gallery along the shelf's edge.



In a cabinet or a closet, slotted metal strips screwed to side walls can support shelves. Cliplike shelf supports can be inserted at any point along their length. Strips come in brass, chrome, black metal, or primed for painting.

Inexpensive shelf rests (5 cents each) merely fit in holes drilled in the wood sides of a cabinet.

Another type of slotted meta strip accommodates shelf-support ing brackets. Shelves rest on th brackets and do not require fa tening. Brackets come in 6", 8" 10", 12", and 14" sizes and ar from about 35 cents per foot in chrome, 50 cents in brass.

Another type of bracket sup port is inserted in the holes o perforated hardboard.

Tension poles can be shelf sup ports. The poles adjust to a tight fit between floor and ceiling, by a spring or a screw device. They eliminate any need to fasten to walls.

Shelves can cantilever out from the wall with no visible means of support. Good-size boards for the purpose are 2" by 10" planks. They are attached by drilling through the shelf, from front edge to back, and to a depth of about 3" into the wall studs be hind. Bolts $\frac{5}{8}$" in diameter and 10" long are then screwed into these holes, which should be $\frac{1}{16}$" or $\frac{1}{32}$" smaller than the bolts. The bolt head should be recessed about 2" into the edge. If a socket wrench is used to pull the shelf up tight to the wall it will help impart great structural strength. A bolt every 48" is sufficient. Bolt holes can be concealed with wood plugs made from dowels, or by nailing a facing strip over the shelf edge. ■

Late report on

Resilient Flooring

If you haven't shopped for flooring in the last few years, you will be amazed by the tremendous advances that have been made. Five major developments are making news.
See examples in color on pages 170-171

1. Texture is what you'll notice first. New techniques for embossing plastic flooring materials have given them a totally new feel, and an almost unbelievable quality of reality. The third dimension of texture makes vinyl brick an authentic duplication.

Texture is expressed in many ways. The surface of the material may appear carved, with stylized designs standing out in relief. It may be pitted, fissured, or grained in the manner of natural materials. Smooth marbelesque tiles may be bevel-edged, belying they are but a thin overlay. Marble surfaces may now be matte, with the subtle tooth of an antique.

There is a practical side to texture. Women in high heels notice immediately that it is more secure underfoot. And texture masks indentations, scratches, subfloor irregularities, and soiling. Instead of being walked on and ground in, soil tends to lie loosely in the recesses, where it's more responsive to cleaning by vacuuming. Matte and textured floors make it possible to have white floors without impossible maintenance.

What the "natural look" of texture has done to low-cost flooring is especially spectacular. It has given vinyl-asbestos tile floors imposing new stature and usefulness. Its colors, too, have been greatly improved. Even asphalt tile is now being textured.

2. Seams are disappearing. The trend is to "no seams." Texture plays a role in the "no-seam" look, for texture hides seams. The floor becomes monolithic—all of one piece. Tiles in the 12″ by 12″ size are gaining increasing favor. They are 75 percent larger than the long-dominant 9″ tile, with comparably reduced seams.

Most important is the rising popularity of sheet materials. They make possible an apparently seamless floor, for by special ironing the one or two seams an average room does have can be almost completely erased. One type of sheet flooring has vinyl foam backing. It makes the floor quieter, warmer, and more comfortable underfoot. It is highly resistant to indentation and, like many other sheet vinyl floors, can be installed anywhere, including basements.

3. Flooring out of a can. This is the newest development. Its potential is unlimited. Basically a urethane plastic, it's troweled on the floor. Vinyl chips are sprinkled on it and then a finish coating applied. The result is an extremely durable floor with absolutely no seams, not even where the floor meets the wall, for the material can be continued onto the wall as a base or cove. It's available in a wide selection of color patterns. In appearance, it's most like terrazzo.

This liquid floor is installed only by specially trained mechanics. It can be coated over existing floors that are in good condition, and, underlaid with a rubberlike substance, it is even recommended for use outdoors. It can be renewed in future years. Installed cost is comparable to that of other high-quality floorings.

4. Outdoor flooring. The long-felt need for a durable, lightweight surfacing for sun decks, balconies, and walk-on roofs has been answered. It's a new vinyl flagstone, the first resilient tile ever manufactured for use outdoors. It's a handsome walking surface and, installed above a porch, garage, or room below, it serves as a completely watertight covering. It can be installed over any smooth wood or concrete.

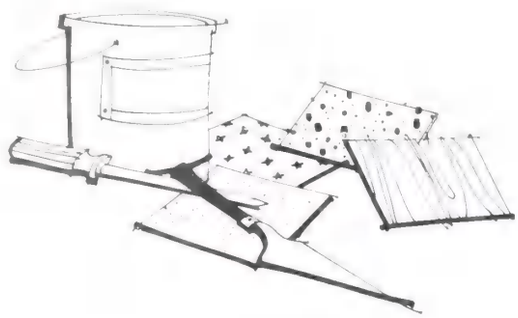
The flagstones, 18″ square, are in true stone colors. When laid, joints are kept slightly open to allow for expansion and it gives an added "stone" quality. Installation is by factory-trained technicians only. It's not expensive, considering that it's both a floor and a roof.

5. New tile shapes and combinations. New shapes and kinds of tiles offer opportunities for greater versatility and creative improvisation than ever before. There are tiles that are like individual bricks. In effect, each man becomes his own bricklayer, and the bond (or pattern) in which they are laid is up to him.

Normally, flooring materials do not belong on the wall, but several of the new tile shapes go especially well there—for example, the yard-long strips of stylized bamboo. Used on both wall and floor, flooring materials give the illusion the floor area is more spacious.

Exotic Moorish shapes can be laid in a single color, so the sinuous edges of the ciboloid tiles create the total pattern, or two colors may be combined, alternately or in rows. In a floor of single-color tiles, occasional contrasting tiles may be inserted as accents.

In addition to familiar square tile sizes (up to 36″ by 36″), there are rectangular ones, such as 6″ by 12″ and 3″ by 9″. Two or more sizes are being mixed together these days for striking effect: for example, 12″ by 12″s and 3″ by 3″s. Actually, it's a classic cut-marble pattern technique. There are hexagonal and diamond shapes, and strips of various widths.



Many dealers offer flooring pattern pages, each showing a different geometric composition. Tile colors are blank, so the purchaser can experiment by filling in his own color choices and visualize the result. Some manufacturers offer custom cutting and design services for achieving curves, inserts, and the like.

Tips on shopping. How much should you spend for a floor? A truly fine flooring is expensive, and you may never want to change it. In that case, you will want something that outlives fads and will ride easily with any change in decoration. If not, plan to change your floor as you would fabrics or wallcoverings.

Too many floors are tolerated because they are not worn out, though they have lost their visual justification. To the apartment dweller and other moving families, the transient kind of flooring does make especially good sense.

It would be pleasant to say that a new floor can always go right down over the old, but it isn't true. There is a definite risk. A new floor is only as good as the old one under it, and unless it is absolutely secure and in good shape, it would pay to have it taken off. If you plan to pick up a floor for use again, it will come up more easily if put down without felt as an underlayment.

In shopping for floors, see as large a display as possible. It is one thing to look at a single tile, or a 3″ by 3″ sample of a material, and quite another to see a complete floor of it. ■

If your dishwasher detergent leaves ugly spots...

You need Cascade.

Cascade's amazing "sheeting action" eliminates drops—leaves dishes spotless. There's nothing like it!

Only Cascade has Chlorosheen, the most remarkable spot-preventer there is. Chlorosheen actually makes water ripple right off in clear-rinsing sheets. Water drops can't form . . . ugly spots can't form. Dishes come out sparkling, spotless. And Cascade is completely safe for fine china patterns.

You're just camping out till you come home to sterling

You're modern. But you're no machine. Your hands have feelings. Your eyes have an appetite. And sterling satisfies them. Reed & Barton most of all. It is nicest to hold. And best to look upon. Shines softest. Ages most gracefully. Brings significance to an instant supper. Adds warmth to a cold little lunch. Bring home all you can hold. nobody but nobody offers a disposer with a five-year Protective Warranty like In-Sink-Erator

In-Sink-Erator Model 77 has a special talent for saving money. This disposer is engineered to perform better, longer, with very little servicing needed. Other brands make proud claims, too. But nobody offers a five-year protective warranty to equal In-Sink-Erator's!

- Nobody but nobody doubles disposer life—like In-Sink-Erator. Grinds in both directions, cuts shredder wear, thanks to patented Automatic Reversing Switch.
- Nobody but nobody solves accidental jams like In-Sink-Erator. Exclusive Self-Service Wrench frees jams quickly. No broom handle bother, no service call expense.
- Nobody but nobody offers an exclusive Detergent Shield—except In-Sink-Erator. No corrosion damage from caustic agents in detergents.

Nassau's Nicer at the Nassau Beach Hotel

Quite deliberately, we've made the Nassau Beach the "fun" hotel of the islands. We provided a private balcony for every room, with a spell-binding view of the ocean. We arranged poolside luncheons with calypso music for every day. And we painted each night with the glamour and gaiety of Latin American music and limbo, native shows and dancing to 5 bands, and parties, parties, parties. Top it off with treasure hunts, crab races, water skiing, sailing, skin and scuba diving, barbeques, beach parties, aqua shows, and you'll agree the Nassau Beach is "where the action is".

Discover it for yourself... the pleasure's all yours.

Lady, Lady, Lady! Don't hand-rinse with your new FRIGIDAIRE dishwasher —just shake off the large stuff

No dishwasher is really a disposer. Bones, watermelon rinds, large scraps belong with the garbage. But the new Frigidaire Dishmobile will handle just about everything else. Emulsifies it, floats it down the drain. The technical explanation would bore you stiff, but it's the new Frigidaire high speed reversible pump that does it. Just remember—with a new Frigidaire Custom Imperial Dishmobile, you definitely don't have to hand-rinse your dishes before loading. Think of the time you'll save! And along that same line—you can put in the breakfast dishes, push a button, and they'll be rinsed right away. Then you can wait till evening to do a full day's load. Other features? This is only the beginning! Your Frigidaire dealer has the details. Why not drop by when you have the time? In the meantime, remember—no hand-rinsing!

Sanitize your dishes sparkling clean

HOME IS FOR COMFORT

HOME IS FOR HERITAGE®

Whether you snuggle, scrunch, slouch, or just plain sit—a comfortable chair or sofa is certainly the very essence of the "comforts of home." In the Heritage Furniture Collections there are well over a hundred upholstered chairs and sofas that combine exceptional comfort with traditional Heritage elegance. Your Heritage upholstery, however, will stay elegant as well as comfortable far longer than ordinary upholstery, thanks to a unique combination of good old fashioned hand craftsmanship plus a continuing program of scientific research into new and better methods and materials. All in all, whether you are just starting up or refurnishing, the difference in price between Heritage and a cheaper "look-alike" will more than repay you in added satisfaction over the years...by a comfortable margin.

Another comfortable thought. *Your Heritage upholstery is a very individual expression of your taste. (The combinations of Heritage styles, fabrics, and finishing details available are virtually infinite.) Our Selection 120 Program also enables us to make chairs, sofas and sectional pieces in the exact lengths you require with a wide choice of arm, back, and cushion styles. Rare?
It's non-existent!

Naturally, onions don't come in cobalt blue. But—to the everlasting joy of collectors—the famed Meissen Blue Onion is still very much a reality. In china by Lorenz Hutschenreuther, heir to the Meissen tradition . . . every piece identical in form to its ancestral counterpart . . . made from the same pure white china clay for over 100 years. It's true china. And, as with every piece of fine china ever produced on the European continent, it contains no animal bone ash. The inner circle of craftsmen who share the secret of its brilliant underglaze cobalt blue decoration and fine pattern definition know that "types" or "potteries" just can't be Blue Onion. So be sure to look for the Lorenz Hutschenreuther seal. 5-piece place setting, $24; 10-cup coffee pot, $26.50. For brochure and name of nearest source, write Paul A. New Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95% of airborne dust and pollen

Out comes clean air to fill your home . . . to help free your wife from daily dusting and cut your cleaning bills. The Honeywell "whole-house" Electronic Air Cleaner fits in the return air duct of any forced air heating—cooling system, removing up to 95%* of the pollen and other particles passing through it.

Air in your home contains millions of impurities. You only see the larger particles of dust that settle on table tops and shelves. It's a time-consuming . . . sometimes even a daily dusting job to get rid of them. But that's only half the story. The smaller invisible particles—over 90% of the total—the pollen, soot, smoke, cooking grease, bacteria and industrial wastes do most of the real damage.

They may cause discomfort, soil furniture and draperies, put a dingy haze on windows and mirrors, and leave white areas or "ghosts" lurking behind pictures. The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner is highly efficient when it comes to catching these smaller particles—the ones that can pass right through ordinary filters.

You'll notice the difference! Your family will enjoy the comfort of purer air. Mirrors, windows, walls and furnishings will stay and look cleaner. You'll save money on cleaning bills. Of course, your wife won't throw away her dust cloth—no air cleaner can remove particles that settle before they enter the system. But her dusting time will be reduced. And the money you save can pay for your air cleaner.

Get the benefits of the same filtering system used extensively in hospitals. On a 3-year FHA loan, it can cost as little as $14.38 a month, installed in your present home. In a new home it may be included in the mortgage for under $2.00 per month.

If you don't have a forced air system or are renting a home, the Honeywell Portable Electronic Air Cleaner could be your answer. Ideal for your office—or conference room, too.

Do yourself and your wife a favor. Just mail the coupon for information on Honeywell's whole-house or room-portable Electronic Air Cleaners.

*As measured by the National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

MAY RELIEVE ALLERGIES. The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95%* of the airborne irritants passing through it. Of course, it is not a cure, but it may relieve allergies. Ask your doctor if it might help you.

Gas Center is three appliances in one: supplies heating, hot water, 4-burner range. Its built-in hydronic system has 3-gallons-per-minute hot-water capacity, heats an average two-bedroom condominium or apartment; requires only one gas inlet and one flue. About $500 in this 45,000 b.t.u. model. AGA-approved for use on or against combustible materials; has insulated cast-iron construction. Total size is 30″ by 25½″ by 36″ high. By Hydrotherm, Northvale, N. J. 07647.

Hidden, pull-out knife sharpener

This innovational can-cutting wheel stays clean and unclogged. It cuts into the side rim, never touches can content; leaves a tapered lid that can't fall into the can; leaves the can smooth-edged, drinking-safe. Powerful motor drives the can opener or the knife-sharpener's honing wheel. $29.95; by Sunbeam Corp., Chicago, Ill. 60650.

It's Worth Mentioning

By JULIE POLSHEK

Both are the same table: the "V" structure in the center makes the conversion instantly, effortlessly, and automatically locks either height. In cocktail-table guise, it has 17½"-inch height; raised for game or serving use, stands 27½" high. Top is 36" by 21" with leaves down; 36" by 36" extended. The handsome furnishing is choice ash finely crafted and finished; legs have rollers. $198; from W.&J. Sloane Inc., N.Y. 16.

Battery-operated pushbutton unfurls the desired length of toweling: releasing the pushbutton stops the automatic roller and locks it motionless for one-handed tear-off of the unrolled toweling. It's an innovation that once used becomes indispensable. Mirra-Cote Towel-O-Matic costs $7.95; holds regular or jumbo roll; is cordless, operates on 2 D-cell flashlight batteries. From Breck's, 86 Breck Bldg., Boston, Mass.

Handprinted linen is embedded in KayDee fiber-glass bowls and used as is for equally ornamental dish towels. Ivy pattern's palette of shaded greens is printed on bleached homespun-type linen; in Pennsylvania-Dutch-Quilt, unbleached linen is merged with rooster-red, yellow, and black. The bowls are machine-washable, nonstaining, 13" diameter. $5 each; towels, $1. Casual Living, 108 Chatsworth, Larchmont, N.Y.

Sweepclean is a dustpan built into a floor cutout in any convenient spot in the room or behind a door. You just sweep into the receptacle's depository and periodically, when need be, empty the sweepings. In place, the 6"-deep receptacle sits in its 12" by 27⅛" floor frame; only the hooded depository protrudes on topside. Sturdily built of heavy-gauge steel; has coppertone finish. $9.95. Ultran, Bloomington, Minn.

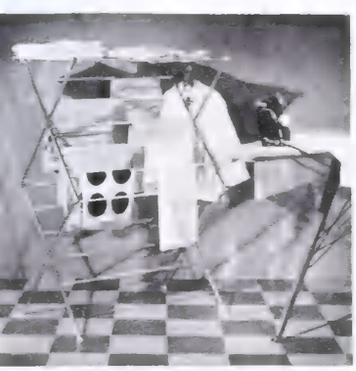
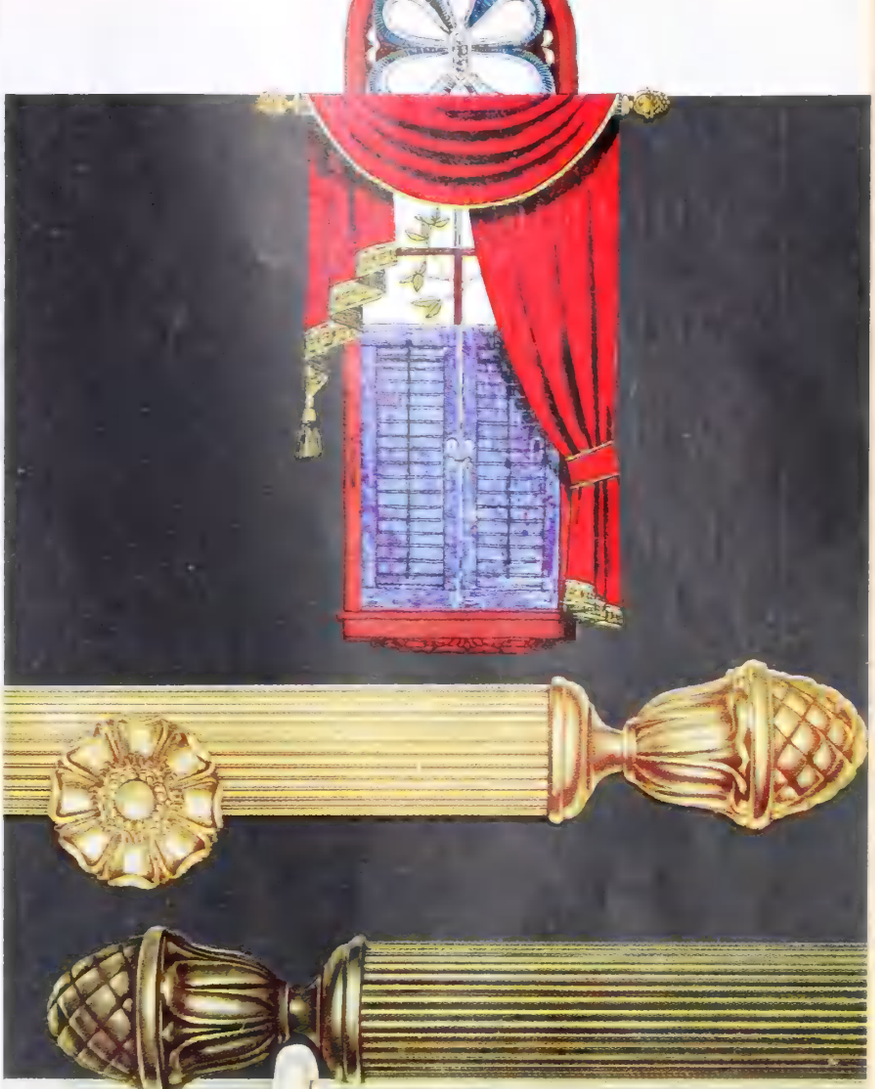
Quaker City Sink Cabinet adds a modernizing storage enclosure to any old-fashioned kitchen sink (of apron type). Precision-made of weighty steel finished in white-baked enamel. The kit has interlocking panels easily assembled, rigid when erected; telescopic corner panels create a precise fit. Comes in three adjustable sizes (41″-54″, 54″-60″, 36″-41″) with round or diagonal corners. $29.95; 30″ high. From Macy's, N.Y. 1.



Thermo-Serv is insulated by its triple plastic walls; keeps beverages chilled or hot for hours. It makes dripped coffee with control dripping action that produces a superb, full-flavored brew; or carafe alone is fine for tea brewing. $9; color-styling units bronze, brown, white. Matching Thermo-Serv mugs $6.95 for 6. The ware is finely made of heavy-gauge plastic. From Hammacher-Schlemmer's, N.Y. 22.

This disc prevents mildew or mold; its effective vapor has a fresh, clean smell free of chemical odor; gives long-lasting protection, dispels closet mustiness. You just hang SunBurst Mildew Disc in closet or garment bag or set it into storage containers. Its vaporizing impregnation is a new mildew-mold preventative used commercially on oranges. $1; $5 for 6. From Chemaster, 24-64 45th St., L.I. City, N.Y. 11103.



New wet-weather accessory for the entry hall includes even a sitting spot for overshoe removal. Umbrellas stand in an adjoining 5-niche rack, drip into the tray that parks overshoes. Brass-finished frame has sturdy tubular-steel construction; seat's upholstery is black, leatherlike vinyl over foam padding. Rustproof tray, also black, snaps over frame unit. Nova Rainy Rack costs $10; from Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn 1, N.Y.

Cal-Dak Foldaway Dryer updates a household classic. In updated version, rack height adjusts to suit each need; the dowels are plastic-coated for nonsnagging service; their mixed yellow-and-aqua array in a chrome frame has sprightly glamour. Sets up in seconds, carries lightly, folds flat. Fits into bathtub for drip-dries; in laundry, holds a washer's load. $7.95; all-metal; Stern's, 41 W. 42nd St., N.Y. 36.

PENNIES MORE IN COST • WORLDS APART IN QUALITY

There is a very special quality about J & B Rare that sets it apart... a flavour so subtly different and delightful that words simply cannot describe it. So try J & B Rare and compare it. Prediction: you will make a most rewarding discovery. J & B is a product of the two-centuries-old house of Justerini & Brooks whose patrons have included, along with the immortal Charles Dickens, many of history's great.

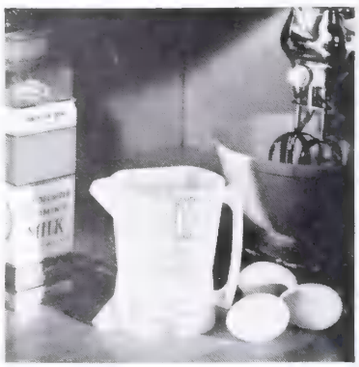
Kalimar Power-Zoom Scope gives zoom viewing, the never-before binocular feature makes objects seem to move toward you, enlarging all the time. Battery-powered push button actuates zooming, also controls zooming speed; adjacent button restores normal binocular action. The zooming gives from 2½ to 8 times magnification. $199.95: ultra-fine in every detail, precision-made. From Medo Co., 20 E. 45th St., N.Y. 16.



Any floral cuttings become an artistic bouquet when set into the Tiara Flower Arranger: with its tiered design, decoratively massed or tapered arrangements are an easy feat for anyone. The interlocking bowls and dividers are all individual units that stack variably, nest when unstacked for storage. $3: its structure is a heavy-gauge, crystal plastic. From Tucker Sales Co., 225 S. Meramec Ave., Clayton, Mo. 63105.

Choice walnut and finest Swedish stainless steel are elegantly brought together in Rainbow Woods' buffet servers. Fjord III Hostess Susan revolves on a ball-bearing base integrated with the walnut stand. Handle's notched base unites the bowls (5¼" diameter). $12. Fjord I Server has also a walnut contoured base, bowl-holding handle. $5. A finger flick unhooks the bowls. From Buffet Shop, B. Altman, N.Y. 16.

For consecutive wet-and-dry measuring, you just flip this two-in-one cup end-to-end: its time-saving value for assembling recipe ingredients is obvious. The 2-cup and 1-cup vessels, created by a partition molded into the plastic structure, are both marked with cup-and-ounce calibrations so either can be used for "wets" or "drys." The spouts are large: handle is easily gripped. $1: Artisan Galleries, 2100 N. Haskell, Dallas 1, Texas.

Both are time-savers that make expertness easy for anyone. Meat Baller, an Italian import, captures the meat between scissor-action scoops that produce perfectly round, uniform-size balls. Minit-Chef Pancake Maker dispenses batter in round, pancake shape; degree of finger pressure on the spring-loaded plunger governs the quantity dispensed. Either, $1: from Miles Kimball, 33 Algoma Blvd., Oshkosh, Wis.

Now—Have armfuls of huge lavender-blue flowers 6 months a year, every year!

STERN'S HARDY PERENNIAL GIANT ASTER (Aster frikarti)

Fill Your Home With Flowers from June to November! You'd have to search far and wide to find an exquisite flower with as long a blooming season as Stern's Giant Aster, also called "Wonder of Staffa." Starting in June it blooms continuously right thru to November. And what beauties they are! Each plant bears an abundance of bright lavender-blue flowers with golden yellow centers. Unlike other asters that barely measure 1" across, these are giants, up to 2½" wide, on strong stems about 18" tall. Excellent as cut flowers, they last up to 2 weeks in water. A must for any perennial bed or border, especially beautiful next to chrysanthemums Winter-Hardy! Grow In Sun Or Semi-Shade! So easy to grow, they thrive in ordinary garden soil and reward you with years of attractive flowers. Especially free of pests and disease—one of the hardiest of all garden perennials.

FOR ARMFULS OF HUGE FLOWERS, MAIL TODAY!

GUARANTEED! You must be delighted or notify us within 2 weeks after you receive plants and we'll send a refund or free replacement for any unsatisfactory plants.

STERN'S HARDY EVERGREEN "BLUE CARPET"* JUNIPER (Juniperus horizontalis hybrids)

A single plant spreads into a beautiful 4-6 foot carpet! Virtually no patch of land is too tough for Stern's "Blue Carpet" Juniper. It's perfect for steep banks or slopes, even bare, unsightly areas where little else will grow. Grows along and over retaining walls, even filling in holes and cracks, making it ideal at walk intersections or at the entrance to your home. Spreads so thickly, it's excellent for rock gardens, as it covers outcropping rocks. Not even seaside conditions can daunt its growth. One plant alone spreads out into a carpet up to 6 feet long at maturity, grows so densely and compactly, it will cover and hide the most unsightly areas.

Lovely feathery foliage decorates your landscape 12 months a year! Unlike many ground covers, "Blue Carpet" Juniper is strikingly beautiful. Spring and summer, its delightful feathery foliage is an intense silvery blue-green color. In fall and winter, the foliage changes to a most stunning lavender-purple, to create a breathtaking contrast with snow and ice. Tiny silver seeds often nestle among the foliage adding immensely to its charming beauty.

Never grows taller than 10 to 12 inches! Another outstanding feature is the fact that "Blue Carpet" is a prostrate grower—never grows taller than 10 to 12 inches! This saves hours of laborious clipping or cutting.

Hardy and drought-resistant! This exciting plant thrives in any well-drained soil . . . even in dry, rocky or sandy conditions. Grows in full or partial sun. It laughs at winters. With the barest care, will decorate your landscape for years.

Supply very limited—order now with full guarantee! Stern's "Blue Carpet" Junipers are ready for planting now at new low prices. Supply is limited. So order at once. Plant 4 ft. apart. You must be delighted or notify us within 2 weeks after you receive plants and we'll send a refund or free replacement for any unsatisfactory plants.

LIKE VINTAGE WINE... AGING MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

You couldn't find a more delicious bacon anywhere—it just isn't available in most stores and markets. The real secret is in the 300 year old traditional method of preparation. This fabulous bacon is taken from only the finest prime porkers, then dry-cured in salt and sugar. After aging, we smoke it over mellow hickory fires. This and more makes Jordan's the freshest, tastiest, most flavorsome bacon you've ever eaten. You receive it, rind off, neatly packaged in cloth, and you'll find it stays fresher longer than pre-sliced bacon. Another advantage, slice it to a thickness suiting your taste. I guarantee you'll like it best, or I'll refund your money. Try it, at only $5.95 per slab (4 to 5 lb. av.). Post-pd. You'll want to order more.

You can teach your 2 year old to read!

THE DOMAN-DELACATO READING DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM, featured in P.T.A. JOURNAL, LADIES HOME JOURNAL, PARADE, and LIFE, is giving an educational head start to thousands of pre-schoolers. With this kit of tested materials—using a play approach during a few minutes a day—your child can learn to read—as young as two. University research has proved that children who come to school as readers start ahead and stay ahead of those who wait until age- 6½ to learn this vital educational skill. In addition, psychologists now demonstrate that an enriched pre-school environment can add as many as 20 points to a child's I.Q.

You can teach your young child to read just as easily and naturally as you taught him to hear and speak language. A simply written Parent's Manual included in the kit tells you all you need to know. Already, more than 50,000 parents have used this joyfully simple and effective approach with their pre-school children.

School teachers are delighted with a child who comes to school already knowing how to read. Many school districts have provided special enrichment programs for children who do not have to spend time learning to read.

Use the coupon below to write today for a FREE PROSPECTUS describing the DOMAN-DELACATO READING DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM. You will receive it by return mail with no obligation whatsoever. This may be the most important gift you ever give your child!

COLONIAL COTTON, in Federal reds and blues, pioneers an Early American spirit in a big family kitchen, a snug paneled den. For cafe curtains or full drapes, to cover cushions on a deacon's bench, it's 54″ wide, protected with Scotchgard. The pattern repeats in approximately 19″. On beige ground, $3.50 a yard. From Jeredith Manor, P. O. Box 130, HB9, Nyack, New York 10906.

SERENITY PRAYER, "O Lord Give us the strength to accept with serenity the things that cannot be changed; Give us the courage . . .; Give us the wisdom . . . Amen," is reproduced on a split coin, double key chain set for a pair who share this simple, dignified invocation. Silver plated, $1; sterling, $3.95; 14k gold, $37. Crescent House, 135 Central Park Road B, Plainview, N.Y. 11803.

IT'S THE NUTS that are larger than life that make eye-catching hors d'oeuvre servers with cocktails before dinner. Highly glazed ceramic replicas of a walnut, peanut and almond are so life-like, they'd fool a squirrel. Approx. 5½ to 7½″ long, each will hold lots of peanuts, cocktail nibbles. Gift-boxed, $3.95 ea., 50¢ post. Specify walnut, peanut, or almond. Ashlee, 247 W. 35th St., HB9, N.Y. 10001.

PINK ELEPHANTS served up to unsuspecting guests, will give them the screaming meemies. Ice is inside the elephant cubes, so there's no melting to dilute drinks. After the Life of the Party has had his third drink, slip an elephant in his Scotch-on-the-Rocks and he'll take the pledge. Use over and over, set of 12, $1. From Spencer Gifts, 622 Spencer Bldg., Atlantic City, New Jersey 08404.

New Scientific Discovery Grows Fingernails!!

At last—Science has discovered a product that really grows fingernails that won't chip, crack, break or peel. Not a lacquer, hardener or build-up—it works just the opposite . . . Fas/trength is a penetrating liquid that binds internally, like a flexible glue leaving the nails in their natural state so the nails can still flex and resist, without breaking, able to breathe freely without becoming brittle—the main cause of breaking nails. And the price is so reasonable—a 6 month's supply for only $1.98 with a 30-day money back guarantee offer that costs you nothing if you don't have lovelier, longer nails within 2 weeks. Ladies, you have nothing to lose with this offer so send for Fas/trength today. Complete kit with instructions only $1.98 plus 20¢ postage.

Decorator's Diary

What's new on the home furnishings market and a few words from a decorator on making the most of it

"There's a marvelously well-bred scent to this house," commented Anne Mayo, as we waited for our hostess. We were paying a call on Martha Reed to inveigle a contribution to our college alumnae fund. "What is it—pomander balls, lavender, potpourri?" Before I could toss out an opinion, Martha appeared, and we both realized we'd shared a chem-lab locker donkey's years ago.

"You've lived abroad," I said, my eye lighting on a Chippendale pie-crust tilt-table, with a patina usually seen on English country-house heirlooms, "and picked up some antique beauties."

"Not really," said Martha. "Most of these pieces are good American reproductions. I think it's the way I wax them that gives them their honest-to-goodness signed-original look."

"What do you use that's so very different?" Anne asked.

"Chiefly elbow grease in conjunction with the finest wax in the world—or at least a wax discovered by the head of the Baker Furniture Company only after he'd scoured the world for it. It's called Saint's Satin Wax. You use a tiny smidgeon and lots of arm action. According to Mr. Baker, there's no short cut to a fine patina, and I believe him. If you love your furniture, it doesn't seem like work. The wax comes in marvelous-looking tins—a gift box of two, including polishing cloth, is $3.50. I order it by mail from The Craft Shop, 220 Lyon, N.W., Grand Rapids, Michigan. And it comes in two delicious flavors—lavender and lemon verbena."

"Lemon verbena!" cried Anne. "I just knew it would be some substantial scent like that!"

Meantime I, embarrassed not to have known of this cosmetic for fine furniture, reached for my notebook. "May I have that name again?"

"He should have been a disc jockey," said Regina Martin, rather ruefully for a bride. She was speaking of her husband. It was in connection with her problem of planning a living room that would cater to his intense concern with hi-fi equipment as well as to her own notions of domestic good looks and orderliness. Young Mr. Martin, it appeared, had made the worrisome announcement that he expected her to reserve space, from the tiny apartment's living-room door to the fireplace wall, for the installation of "a really great stereo system." In Regina's mind it was as if he had proclaimed that the honeymoon was over. It meant that he had not informed her that a well-heeled uncle had greased his palm for that very purpose. "There wasn't even a card on the gift table," she said, and I managed to look suitably scandalized at the duplicity of men.

"We air conditioned our 7-room home for just $975."

Mr. & Mrs. M. L. Humphreys of Kansas City, Kansas were surprised by the reasonable cost of General Electric Central Air Conditioning. "Our home has 1,832 square feet of living area," Mr. Humphreys observes, "and the two-ton unit we had in the living room before didn't begin to cool the rest of the house. Our G-E system keeps every room at the same even temperature."

"I have sinus trouble," Mrs. Humphreys remarks, "and I was really afraid central air conditioning would make it worse. Actually, central air conditioning has relieved it. My head stays clear as a bell. It's wonderful."

"We love to entertain," continues Mrs. Humphreys, "but when the temperature got to be over 100° and the humidity high, it used to be almost impossible. Now, we have friends in all summer long."

If you have forced-air heat—as the Humphreys do—you, too, can enjoy General Electric Central Air Conditioning at a very modest price. Call your G-E dealer for a free survey and installation estimate. Ask him, too, about his easy financing terms. He's listed in the Yellow Pages under "Air Conditioning Equipment."

GENERAL ELECTRIC

"Isn't it exasperating—when there's hardly space enough for two end tables in the living room?"

"Well, yes and no," I replied, using the diplomatic approach. "It all depends upon how great a hi-fi buff he is."

"Oh, he's that, all right," she said. "He's woof, tweeter, AM, FM, and transistor-conscious—at least, he talks this way, and it was the component system he rigged up for his parents that made his uncle think he'd like one for himself—I mean, for us, I suppose."

"We must face it," said I. "We're dealing with a connoisseur—a nothing-but-the-best type—but you, in your innocence, have already suggested the solution that is certain to satisfy both of you."

"How so?" asked Regina.

"When you said 'end tables,' that little hammer tripped in my subconscious, reminding me that KLH, of Cambridge, Mass., one of the most distinguished names in sonics, has a completely new approach to hi-fi sound-making and how to house it.

"So far as you and I are concerned we could call the system 'musical tables' and rejoice in the way it lets you have your Hi Fi and hide it, too. It's a record player and FM stereo tuner and radio neatly boxed in a walnut case with a hinged top and—here's what's news—set on a circular, trumpet-shape cast-aluminum pedestal. When it is not in operation, it is, in effect, a usable table—21″ wide, 15¼″ deep, and 22″ high. Two speakers also boxed in oiled walnut, and set on similar pedestals, amount to matching end tables, 19″ wide, 15¼″ deep, and 22″ high. You could even put them both together as a coffee table. Not only this, but the speaker grille cloths can be changed to chime in with whatever decorative fabrics you're using in the room. The cloth panels are edged with Velcro and attach to a Velcro edging around the speaker frame, so they pull off, easy as adhesive tape. John Price of John Price Associates designed it, and it's really important furniture."

"Ah, yes," she said, pensively, "but it sounds too good to be true. Just wait till my husband starts twisting knobs and asking questions."

"Just wait, indeed," I replied with the utmost confidence. "You'll have to wait till September, anyhow, when it is actually on the market. But I'll bet you a couple of opera albums that he'll be carried away by its electronic perfection, its concert-hall performance, its transistorized circuitry, and all that sort of thing."

"I'll never be able to remember those words," she said.

"You won't have to," I said. "Just tell him to be a dear and invest that check in a KLH Twenty Plus model. If he's as knowledgeable as he lets on to be, he'll know."—M.G.

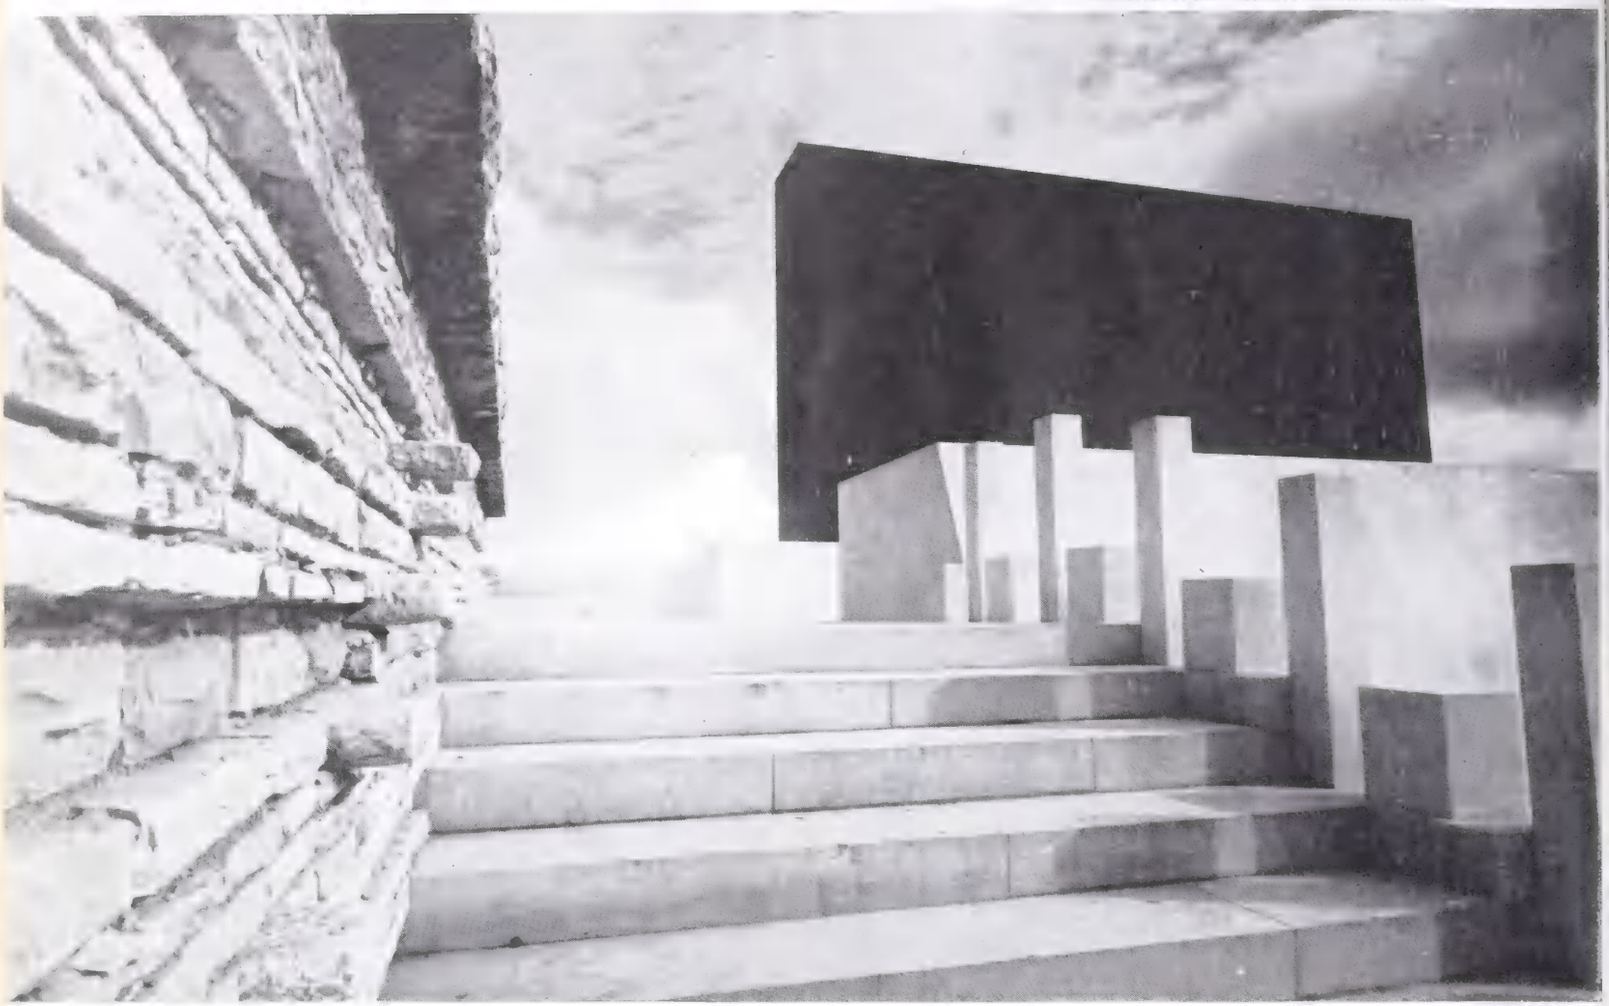
Now: room to room carpeting.



It used to be done room by room. The parlor got the best carpet. Because everyone behaved in there. The dining room got a dark, dreary pattern. So spills wouldn't be catastrophes. And bedrooms often got hand-me-downs. No more. Now there's one fiber that fills every carpet need in the house. Cumuloft® nylon. It gives you deep, plush pile for living-room luxury. It's so easy to keep clean, you can pick a cheery color for the dining room. It's non-allergenic, safe for the nursery. And so economical, you can carpet all the bedrooms without feeling extravagant. Cumuloft nylon is incredibly long-wearing, too. Even where the traffic is heaviest—on the stairs, in the hallways, in the family room. (You see, every carpet of Cumuloft nylon pile is made to meet mill and Chemstrand quality standards. The most uncompromising standards in the carpet industry.) Now, what about carpeting the kitchen and bath? There's no reason not to. In fact, Cumuloft comes in so many rich colors and textures, the more rooms you have the better you'll like it.

And that just about covers everything.

ISRAEL

THE ROBUST RENEWAL OF AN ANCIENT LAND

Go to marvel at a prophecy fulfilled:
the desert has rejoiced and blossomed as the rose.
bitter water has been made sweet.
and there is milk and honey in the land

At this time of the world, when kindergartners lisp the story of the solar system and folks sit calmly drinking beer as they watch a man walk in space, our sense of wonder is in mortal danger of becoming atrophied. As a precautionary move, we say to all the blasé, "Visit Israel."

Here is the only country in the world which in itself is something to marvel at. Its very existence is cause for wonder, and to observe what human beings can accomplish in 18 short years is reason enough to make the trip. Expect no moonlight-and-roses romanticism. No scenery stuns you with its extraordinary beauty—although there is certainly loveliness in the white, bedazzling harbor-heights of Haifa and, for those who like their landscape wild, the almost frightening desert grandeur of the Negev and the craggy surrealism of King Solomon's Mines.

It is a hard country, where every green leaf has been labored for. Wherever there is gentleness you may be sure it has cost a struggle—and that smiling fields and woodlands are ready to revert to sunbaked desert at the slightest letup in attention. This is what makes it so marvelous to drive for miles past fragrant orange groves, the roadside alléed in hand-planted pines and clouded with mimosa. It is what gives you pause in the Tel Aviv market, where strawberries are plum-size and artichokes like cabbages; the profusion of produce (Please turn to page 197)

New Polycrest® is Gossip-proof!

Pick, pick, pick! Leave the room and they're at it. "Expert" criticism on everything, from a random speck of dust to your taste in wallpaper, lampshades, furniture, etc., etc., etc....

One thing you don't have to worry about is that gossip-proof carpet of Polycrest. (But go ahead—pick, pick, pick.)

Take the color. Look close, now. Its depth. The warmth and richness of it. (And Polycrest looks just as good in any other color.)

Or the pattern. The deep, clear, clean lines. Pattern you can depend on to keep its original shape and definition. Polycrest's pile. Full, lofty, bulky, with a depth and richness you like to dig your toes into. Spots? Wear? Polycrest is the most stain- and wear-resistant fiber in the business.

It has practically no static electricity, so no shocks. (A minor point.) You won't be shocked by the bill, either. Polycrest is remarkably reasonable in price. (A major point!) We say Polycrest has the best combination of features in any carpet fiber...

But, don't take our word for it, go see Firth's "Graceleigh."

THIS VENERABLE BARN—stolid, capacious, single-minded, mellow—stands by patiently while busy men prepare heating ducts, roll out wire mesh, and lay vapor barriers, in the first of many operations that will result in a full and glorious new life.

This is remodeling at its highest power, where the old matériel, vista, trees, foundation, and ambience is reason enough to build anew. This old-building touchstone is the baker's yeast that, saved from one batch, best begins another.

In this remodeling issue you will see garages, kitchens, and entire houses transformed to enjoy a brilliant reincarnation.

To tailor a house precisely to size, comfort, convenience, serenity, taste, and dreams takes often a superior architect, a good builder, a landscape architect...always an owner with 20/20 vision. We are immensely grateful to a dozen such who have let us come in with our cameras and questions to record for you the candid Befores and the triumphant ever-Afters.

Sarah Tomerlin Lee

In Solebury, Pennsylvania, the barn, below, as it was before its present owners, Mr. and Mrs. John Root, revised and expanded it into the functional house shown above.

Partially enclosing the new patio, below, are the original field-stone walls that once belonged to the "straw barn" section, which, having lost its timber portion in a fire decades ago, now provides a sky-ceilinged area for sunning, relaxation, and entertaining.

NEW LIFE FOR AN OLD BARN

"It was a derelict, a wonderful wreck—and a project worth working on." That was John Root's first reaction to the Bucks County barn, built in 1822, that he and his wife, actress Margaret Mullen, chanced on and purchased in 1963. Time, fire, and disuse had not destroyed its fieldstone walls, so a stalwart shell remained to get remodeling off to a good start. As an architectural designer, John Root brought not only enthusiasm but skill to the undertaking. His experience included creating sets for many Broadway plays, among them, coincidentally, George Washington Slept Here, which involved a Bucks County stone house. The metamorphosis of an old barn into a comfortable, convenient, contemporary home, shown here and on the following four pages, was accomplished in one busy year of dividing, adding, and changing, occasionally transposing a window or door from its original exterior service into interior usefulness.

The main entrance, shown in a close-up above, and again below, left, is part of the addition the Roots made to the fieldstone barn, seen below, when the year-long job of construction and reconstruction was getting under way.

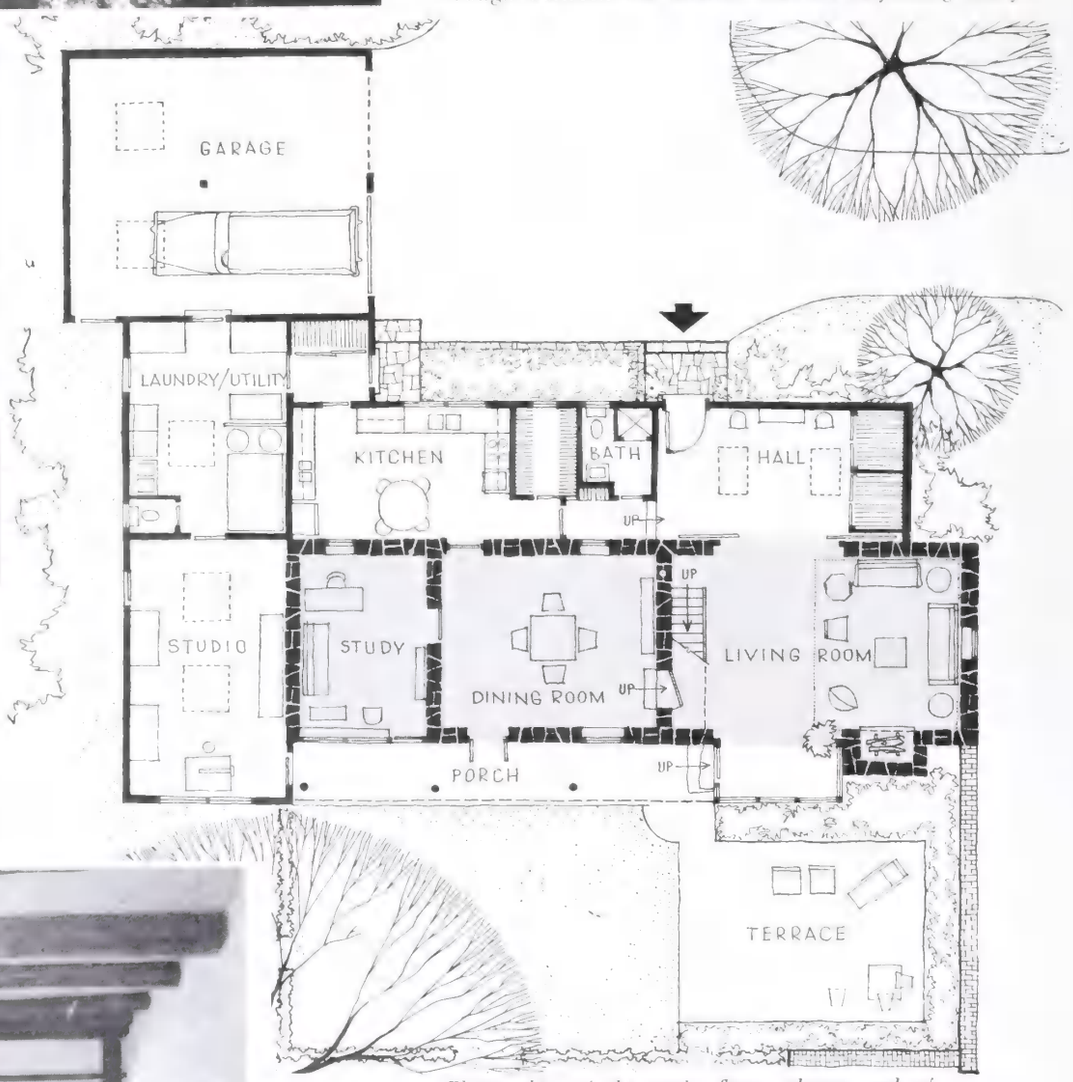
MAKING THE MOST OF THE FORMER BARN'S LOFTY INTERIOR

In designing the living room, opposite page, John Root used the full height of the original two-story building to dramatic advantage, and, to make the roof-reaching new fireplace look as if it had always been there, he had it constructed of fieldstone to match the tall, old stone walls.

Kept: the old barn door above, now newly windowed and functioning as part of the interior; the deep window embrasure in the dining room, right, making a decorative point of the wall's thickness. Harmonious replacement for the old flooring: warm-toned Mercer tiles handmade in nearby Doylestown.

Doorway above opens on the dining room. At the top of the rustic stair is the library, its peaked ceiling a precise arrangement of beams and plaster in piquant contrast to the irregular stones of the walls. The door at right, above, leads to the bedrooms.



Part of the Roots' kitchen, left, with its bright complement of superlative modern equipment is, appropriately, in the new addition to the house: the kitchen continuation, above, is along the old outside wall. One of the former outside windows has been retained in the interior as a visual pass-through between the kitchen and the adjoining study.

John Root's workroom, above, where he uses his designing talents on the reconstruction of a variety of old houses in Bucks County and on the plans for new ones—his knowledge of the countryside a great asset.

In Mrs. Root's bedroom, above, the four-poster wears, properly, an Early American coverlet. Close by on the second floor, the writing and TV room, right. Its pairing of original fieldstone with newly inset glass areas is typical of the freehand way the barn shell has been updated for contemporary comfort.

A ROMANTIC REMODELING:

THE CLASSIC REVIVAL OF A MODERN HOUSE

Paradoxically, Architect John Woolf remodeled his not-very-old house in Bel Air, California, in order to give this contemporaneous, beautifully made building a patina of age. In the process he changed it from a cerebrally functional, sparsely embellished house for a family with four children—as Architect Craig Ellwood designed it in 1955—to a sophisticated pavilion for an adult of poetic tastes and classic leanings.

Mr. Woolf enlarged the living room, built a new kitchen, and rearranged the bedroom space. (Plans are on page 138.) Ornamenting the terrace with Doric colonnades, he gave the pool area the romantic quality of an atrium. For the delectation of rooms that do not view the pool, he created garden courts with plashing fountains and exotic vines. His business partner, Decorator Robert Koch, furnished the rooms in rich, eclectic style.

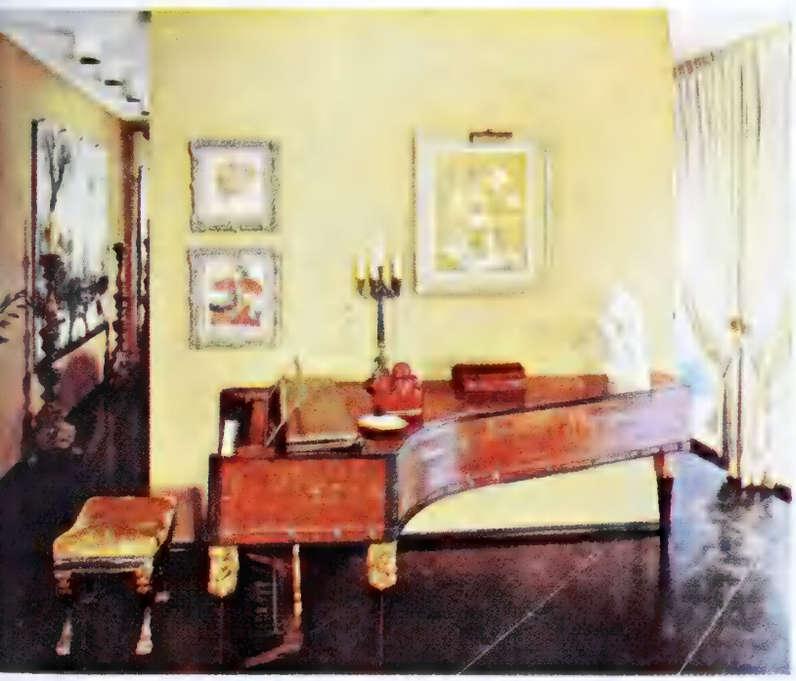
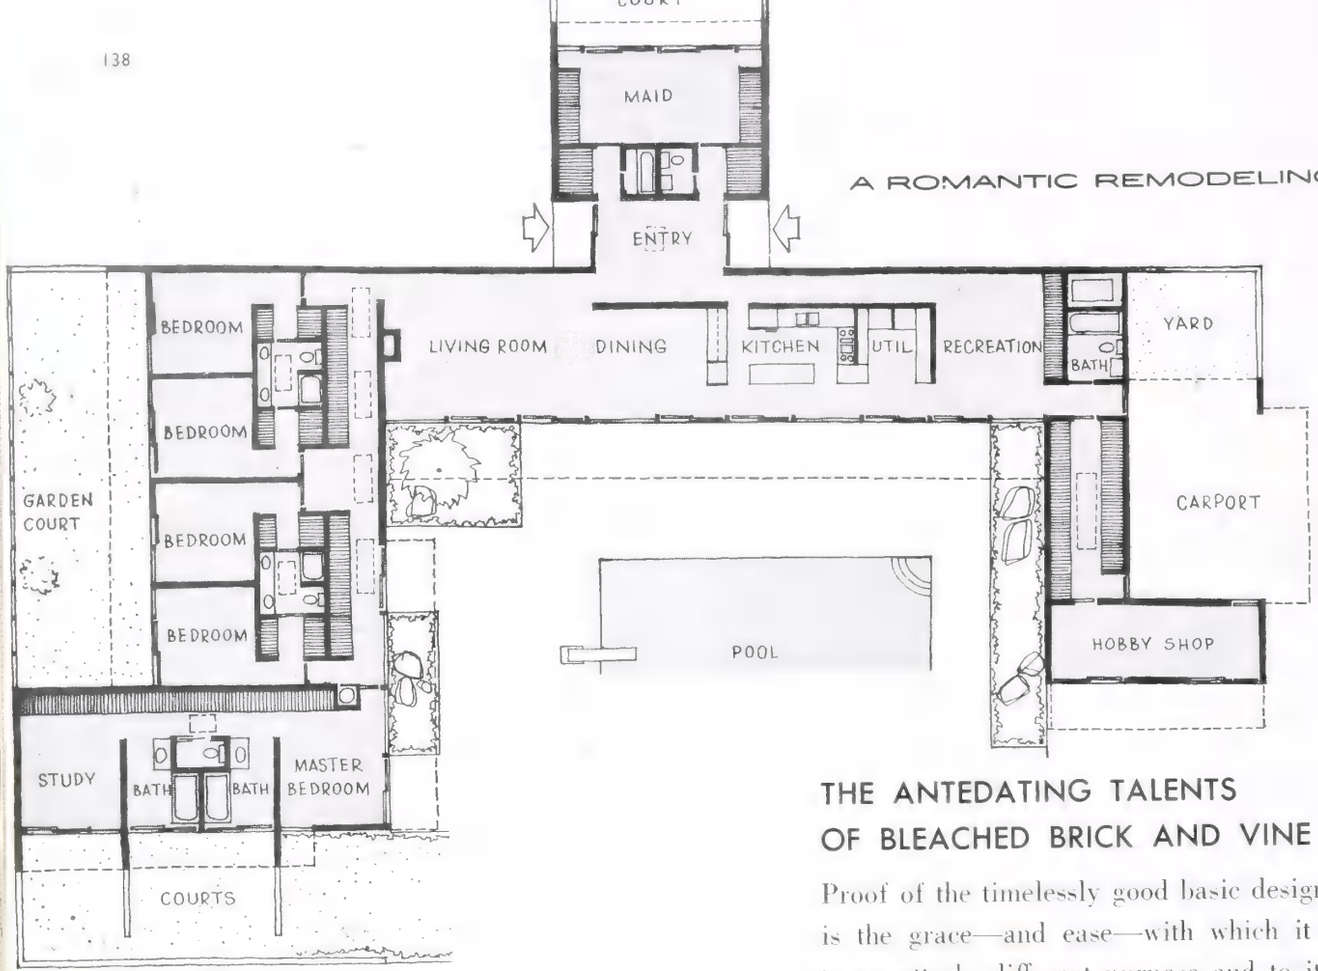
In the enchanted hour of dusk, one might be reliving the past in a columned villa of Baiae or among the temples of Paestum. By night, the house glows like gold, colored as it is inside and out in a mellow palette of honey-color travertine, antique terra cotta, with fabrics in topaz, amber, burnt sienna. By day an intrinsic ornament of the house is the magic filtering of light and shadow through its several skylights, and the strangely lovely, almost subaqueous luminosity of sunlight reflected into the rooms from the pool waters. Left, the house as it looked before it was remodeled.

ALL "AFTER" PHOTOGRAPHS BY DANFORTH-TIDMARSH

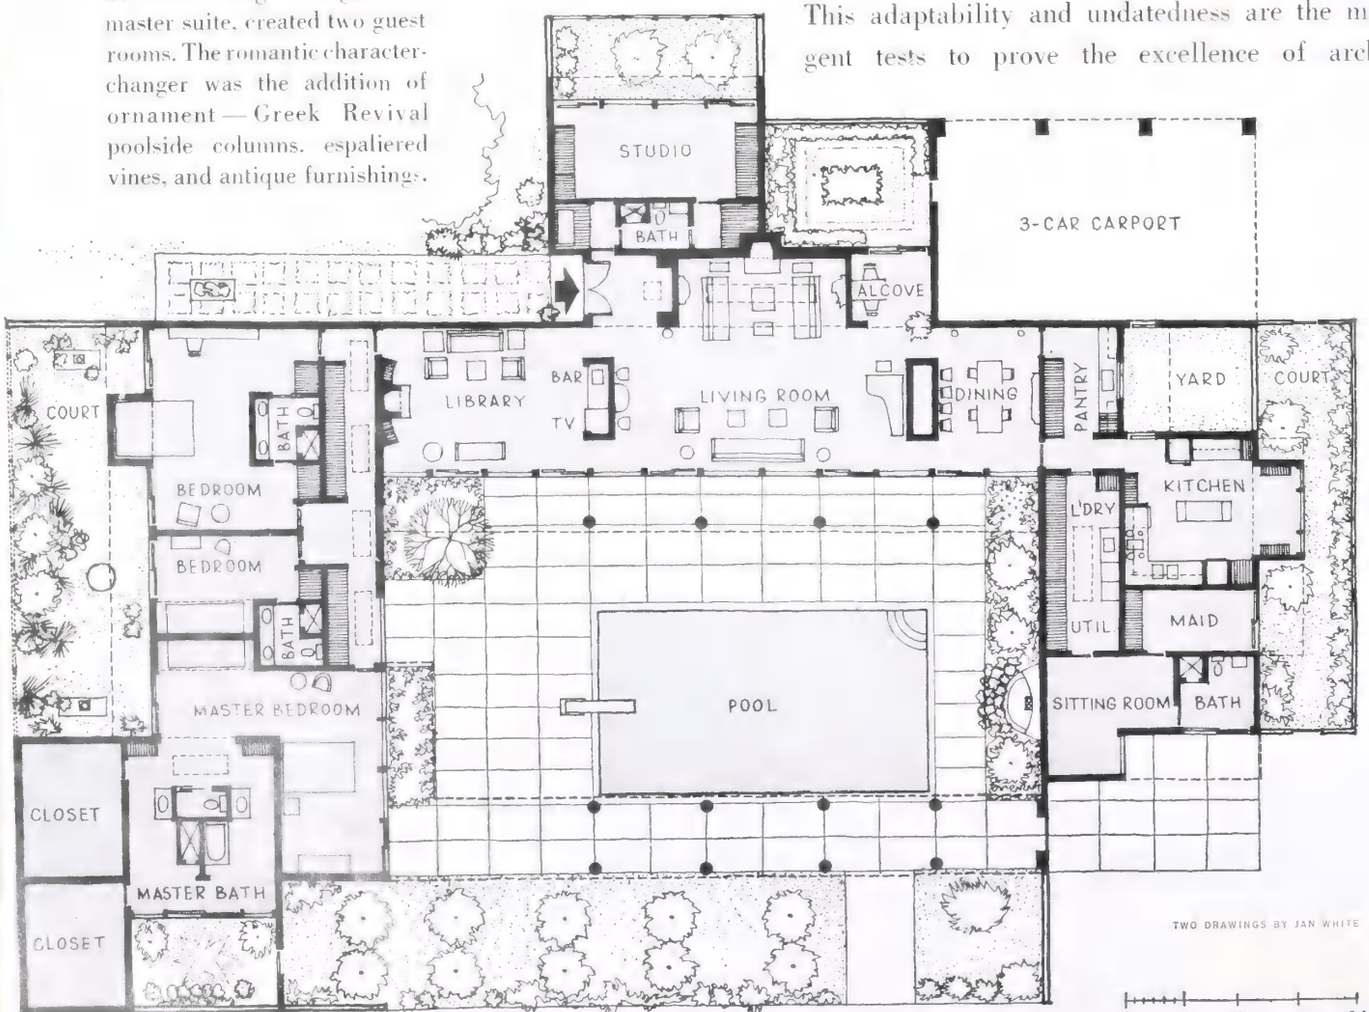


Among Mr. Woolf's Oriental treasures is a cache of 18th-century Chinese paintings. In the living room, two are hung against the rough-sawn travertine fireplace wall, and two have been incorporated into the tops of coffee tables, left. Mantel is carved wood, painted and glazed to simulate terra cotta, which sets the color tone for the whole house. Except for sofas, all major furnishings in this very contemporary house are antique. On the mantel: Tang dynasty figurines and a 5,000 B.C. Egyptian bronze. Tall painted sconces, above, and the lamps flanking the couch, left, are Venetian.

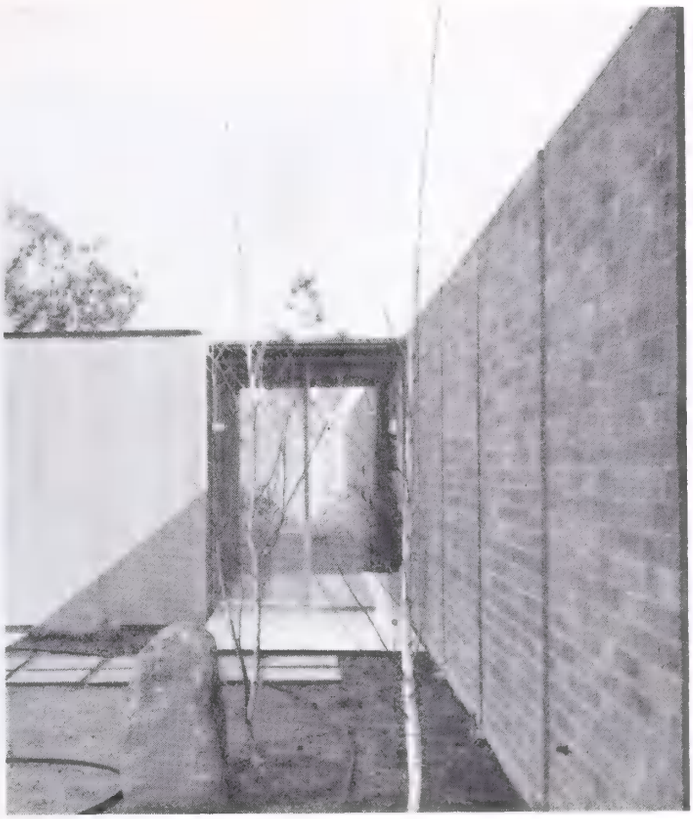
HOW A TASTE FOR THE POETIC PAST CAN TURN BACK THE CLOCK



The skylighting system was originally devised to guarantee the brightness of this house in a canyon. But Mr. Woolf uses it also to spotlight important artifacts and furnishings, like the placid Kwan Yin in the entry foyer, left. The remarkable French clock is a fluted and marbleized column of wood and the first lovely thing your eyes light on. In the living room, the nougat-colored travertine mantel wall is similarly dramatized with overhead light. The coffee table is an antique lacquer bride's chest from China. All major fabrics are Scalamandre silk, the sofa a damask, the jewel-like cushions velvet, the curtains, below, silk sheer. The burnished amber of an 18th-century Austrian spinet fits into the honey-to-terra-cotta color spectrum. Below right, an original Pillemont screen is hung on the dining-room wall. Side chairs are Empire, armchairs antique Venetian.



THE ANTEDATING TALENTS OF BLEACHED BRICK AND VINE



Proof of the timelessly good basic design of this house is the grace—and ease—with which it has converted to an utterly different purpose and to its new owner's quite different tastes. Looking at the "before" pictures, you will see how appropriate its former "pared down" modern furnishings looked. Yet the romantic furnishings of its new owner look equally at home there today. This adaptability and undatedness are the most stringent tests to prove the excellence of architecture.

Structural change centered around the extension of the living room and the brand-new kitchen and maid's quarters. Rearranging partitions in the bedroom wing enlarged the master suite, created two guest rooms. The romantic character-changer was the addition of ornament — Greek Revival poolside columns, espaliered vines, and antique furnishings.

One now enters the house along a pebble-and-brick walk, bounded by a wall of the bedroom wing. Wall-facing is outsize 3″ by 12″ brick, terra cotta overwashed with a honey-color finish and espaliered with ivy. The lath is pine flooring board stained terra cotta. Entry doors are 18th-century Viennese. A Spanish lantern lights the entrance.

AFTER

Part of the former living room became a library, its fireplace extended with curved bookshelves. TV and a bar are built into the partition which separates this area from the new living room. Mellowing influences: antique Swedish trundle-bed couch, ivory-inlaid Chinese table, Greek marble statue.

THE EVER PRESENT, EVER PLEASANT GARDEN

In the days when children determined the practical nature of the materials and planning of this house, the bedroom wing consisted of master bedroom and four stall-like, sparsely furnished children's rooms. Mr. Woolf, re-evaluating the space, increased the size of the master bedroom and made two bedrooms of the three children's rooms. Repartitioning and an insulating row of storage closets along the outer corridor give this wing quiet and privacy from the rest of the house. One room was extended with an alcove.

BEFORE

By glassing-in the bedroom-wing court, Mr. Woolf has acquired a good substitute for a greenhouse where ferns and orchids thrive. Esthetically, as you see opposite, it is a delight for occupants of the bedrooms, patterned as it is with a pitted aggregate and pebble floor, furnished with a classic marble garden table and a standing wood temple guard from India. Color palette of the bedrooms is still tinged with terra cotta. French Directoire bed, opposite, far right, is placed against a flat wall which is given the look of an alcove by draperies. You can glimpse the garden through the sliding glass doors. In the lower picture opposite you see a Spanish bedhead and an eclectic but effective mixture of a marbleized modern table used as a dresser, an Italian Regency chair, and a very "in" bed-throw—vicuña from Ecuador.

The master bedroom and bath have their own quite secluded garden, left. One wall is garlanded with a copa de oro vine: against another there is an espaliered pear tree. Master bath carries out the terra-cotta theme in coral marble.

Once this court, left, served as play area for the youngsters, whose rooms opened on it. Now, walled in obscure glass and roofed in plastic screening, it gives all three bedrooms a garden vista of tree ferns, fuchsias, and exotics.

A NEW WING WITH RESPECT

Broad veranda at back of house, above, catches hilltop breezes and overlooks the play lawn and tennis court. Private balcony on the new wing enjoys the same advantage. Picture at left shows entry and new round plant containers made of precast sections of storm drain. They are topped with concrete flanges for sitting.

FOR THE PAST

When adding to a house with a strong character of its own, there's always the problem of relating the design of today with that of the past. This 20th-century addition to a 19th-century Dutch colonial country house strikes the perfect balance.

The new wing, with its glass window-wall, easy indoor-outdoor relationship, and open interior space is an unsentimental, up-to-date architectural solution. But in deference to the character of the old house, the roof wall is clad with the same cedar shingles, and its shape echoes the gentle curve of the gambrel roof.

The house was originally built as a summer place and year-round weekend retreat in northern Westchester County. It serves this same purpose for the new owners, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Stern. They did, however, feel the need for a comfortable bedroom, sitting room, and bath, somewhat apart from the activity of four children and their friends. (Please turn the page)

Sitting end of new sitting-bedroom. Dramatic pine tree and vista beyond can be enjoyed in comfort even when frosted with snow, because end wall is insulating glass. Sliding doors open to balcony. At left is edge of fireplace that divides room.

Bath off library replaces one removed for entry to new wing. Library doubles as guest room. Kitchenette in hall serves it and master suite. Fine point in shower: skylighted sink for shaving. Beneath the addition: a caretaker's apartment.

A NEW WING WITH RESPECT FOR THE PAST continued

The connecting link between the new sitting-sleeping area and the house includes a bath, dressing room, and a wide storage-dressing corridor. The suite can be closed off from the main house with one double door.

A freestanding fireplace with openings on four sides separates the sleeping from the sitting area. A special flue makes it possible to enjoy a single open fire from the bedroom, sitting room, window seat, and dressing corridor (see plan below). Moreover, from the bed, one can see through the fireplace to a view of the trees and rolling hills beyond the end wall of glass. The arched ceiling, sheathed with narrow strips of stained redwood, and the full-width balcony further extend the apparent size of the room. Heating and air conditioning for the new wing are handled through one combined system which also filters pollen and dust from the air, and adds or removes humidity as required for thorough year-round comfort.

Changeling kitchen:

ECHO OF EARLY AMERICA

In times past, many an American house had a hospitable kitchen very similar to the one shown on these pages. Same kind of brick fireplace, with cooking utensils alongside. Hand-hewn oak for ceiling beams and plank floor. Cabinets, like these, of pine. Here and there the warm shine of copper and brass, the cool gleam of pewter, the strong black of hand-wrought iron hinges and candle holders. A dining table and comfortable chairs were part of the picture, for the kitchen was a family room, a gathering place. Just such cordial charm was what Mr. and Mrs. A. Fuller Leeds wanted for the kitchen of their old hill-top house in Fairfield, Connecticut. They scouted New England for antique woods and hardware to re-create an authentic atmosphere. (Please turn to page 182)

Inadequate was a mild word for the kitchen in the otherwise pleasing house that Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Radzwiller bought in Morris Plains, New Jersey. Needed instead: a spacious, splendidly equipped, expertly planned kitchen, where Mrs. Radzwiller could fully express her genuine talent for cooking, conduct her small classes in foreign cuisine, and have at hand her collection of unusual kitchen utensils, among them the tortoise-shape vegetable grater, from India, you see on the opposite page. To accomplish the necessary remodeling, specialists were called in. Result: an ingenious kitchen, engineered in the best modern American manner, yet clearly reflecting Mrs. Radzwiller's cosmopolitan interest in cookery and, too, her knack for putting antiques to current uses—witness the old carriage lamps now lighting the island unit. CONVERTED FROM A GARAGE

ARCHITECT: Lloyd Flood

The floor plan above indicates how effectively the former garage was turned into a combination kitchen, breakfast room, and family lounge, each one of the three areas defined but not walled off from the others. The oak table, placed conveniently close to the work island, is used only for informal meals, as there is also a separate dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. James Halliday decided that they would change the garage of the house they had purchased in Lafayette, California, into a big kitchen-family room. One thing they didn't want to change was the espaliered apple tree growing as wide and as high as the back of the building. They not only kept the tree but managed to bring it, visually, right into the kitchen. To do this, they had the siding ripped off this wall and panels of glass inserted between the stud framework, as seen above. This not only makes the tree an everyday part of their lives, but also brings a flood of filtered sunlight into what had previously been unrelieved gloom. The other three walls are lined with cedar paneling, random widths having been chosen for the sake of a more interesting linear pattern. The warm-toned cedar contributes to the welcoming look of the room and, with the invited-in apple tree, must be one reason why a young visitor once commented: "This is a nice outdoor house."

FOR COMPACT COOKING: TWO ON THE AISLE

While there was no change in the size of Mrs. Dengel's kitchen after its remodeling, there was a great change for the better in its looks, and an apparent increase in its size, proved by comparing the "before" picture, right, against the top two pictures on the opposite page. They show how the tiny (6'4½" by 9'7") room was glorified by putting bright ideas about equipment and arrangement to work, thereby rising above mere space limitations. To mask a discouraging view out the window but retain the light, handcrafted plastic was molded in the kitchen's colors and inserted in front of the glass.

Many American apartment dwellers find their bite-size kitchens completely inadequate. Such was the kitchen in the apartment Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Dengel bought in New York's East Fifties, seen, left, in its "before" condition. Veronica Dengel, a writer-lecturer, began the transformation with the color planning. Her favorite color, a cool blue, was chosen as the basic shade, with a delicate pink and white for the counter top. The combination lightened the room and made it look larger. Highly efficient new equipment on both sides of the working aisle compensates for the meager space. A set-back in the cabinets provides a special place for bartending.

BRIGHTLY INDIVIDUAL: KITCHEN IN A CO-OP

After the remodeling plan, above, had been put into effect, the new look, shown on the opposite page, deserved resounding bravos. This changeling kitchen's "aria" is composed of Swedish tiles. The brilliant tones of yellow, blue, green, and white set the cheerful color scheme of the room.

When Blanche Thebom has an ambition, she is likely to fulfill it. She wanted to become a famous singer; she is a Metropolitan Opera mezzo-soprano. She wished to serve the cause of education; she is a trustee of the Institute of International Education, which includes in its functions the administering of the Fulbright Fund. One of her many other fulfilled wishes concerns a kitchen. She wanted a big, beautiful, efficient one, which, as you see, she now has. Because her concert career, plus her judging of some of the country-wide auditions sponsored by the Metropolitan Opera National Council, takes her away from New York frequently, her kitchen was specially designed for her own convenience. (Please turn to page 186)

THE LITTLE HOUSE THAT MOVED

ALL PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Satisfied with the unpretentious exterior of the house, the James E. Pollaks let well enough alone. They merely cleared away the overpowering bougainvillea vines to expose the charm of the house. They removed the picket fence and pushed the contoured flower beds forward so they could be enjoyed from inside the house as well as from the street. A rosarian, Mr. Pollak experiments with unusual roses along the sunny walk, under the trees, and in the rear garden.

Incongruous as it may appear from the pictures on these three pages, this little house started out in life as a red brick garage in Los Angeles.

Its story begins in the housing shortage following World War II. Condemned to annihilation unless moved out of the path of a California freeway, it was put up for public auction. Its buyer moved it across town to a quiet cul-de-sac in the Brentwood section of the city and converted it into a tidy but conventional two-bedroom Cap Cod cottage.

Its next and present owners, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Pollak, consulted Architect Edla Muir about the wisdom of buying it and the possibilities for enlarging the "garage" before they made the final decision to purchase. It was Miss Muir's opinion that the house must have been structurally sound to have survived the radical move. It was her advice that the Pollaks buy, but live in it a year before making any changes or additions.

At the end of a year their antique furniture and selection of paintings were very much "at home" in the small brick house. (Please turn the page)

Only ten feet were borrowed from rear brick terrace for guest room and garden room. The result was a more harmonious exterior and a more unusual interior. Above right is den before remodeling. Right is after addition. Bedroom is at left beyond bookshelves.

Behind the French armoire doors, below, set into a new cabinet in the garden room, are some of the accoutrements of daily living that mean much to the Pollaks. Stereo equipment and records, flower-arranging apparatus, a typing table, and lots of room for supplies.

All the Pollaks felt compelled to do was add a master bedroom and bath and take down two inhibiting walls: one between the dining room and den and one leading onto a new brick terrace in the rear (replacing it with sliding doors).

In the intervening fifteen years, the Pollaks were busy—with their work, civic projects, and raising a son—too busy to bother about the discomforts of cramped closets, typing on the kitchen table, and an inaccessible dining patio. It wasn't until Mrs. Pollak spotted an antique French spiral staircase and couldn't resist buying it that they began a second remodeling phase.

Once again they called on Edla Muir and outlined a dream they had of building a second-story bedroom that would overlook their beautiful sunken garden. The staircase would provide a convenient access to the new room. (Please turn to page 190)

How to shop for
A HOUSE WORTH REMODELING

By DAVID X. MANNERS

You can get more for your money in an older house. You can also get less. There are pitfalls as well as blessings. But if you shop wisely, you can come out ahead.

The primary consideration is location. What is the house near? What do you have to drive through to get to it? What is the future of the area? Is it up-and-coming, or are business and industry encroaching? What is the school situation? How about recreational and cultural facilities?

Many people buy a house principally because it is near their work. But in these days of fast cars and superhighways, it is important to readjust standards of what is near. Miles may mean only minutes. If you buy in a marginal area because of its convenience, face this fact: If you improve your house, you won't increase its value in proportion to your investment. Invariably it is better to buy a lesser house in a fine neighborhood than the best house in an inferior area. Then you won't have to worry about the wisdom of making improvements.

There are physical factors that make some locations better than others. Even within a small area there may be widely divergent climatic conditions. Some parts of town will get the breeze, be cooler in summer and warmer in winter. Others may be plagued by industrial smoke, smell, or noise, or take the brunt of electrical storms. Some may be damper or more humid.

There are factors of compatibility. Is the neighborhood conventional or informal? Are they your kind of people? Will there be playmates for your children? If you are unfamiliar with an area, careful probing can help you to a wise decision. If you have strong doubts, consider renting for a year before you buy. It's better not to be rushed, but it will entail the expense and trouble of an additional move—from the house you rent to the one you buy.

What is its style and age? You can do more with some houses than with others. Usually it is best to look for a house with some semblance of architectural authenticity or classic styling. There are some houses 50 years old that still don't look far out of date in terms of current design. English-style, timbered houses, in vogue in the late 20's and 30's, have some charm and quality that persist. Colonial houses are almost ageless.

Look at a house, if you can, when it is at its worst. Winter is a good time to shop. With the trees bare, you may see things that don't show up when they are in full leaf. Spring thaws may reveal leaks in a basement that is bone-dry in midsummer. Don't be overly influenced by some one thing you like especially, so that you shut your eyes to everything that is unfavorable.

Houses built in the late 1930's are generally superior in quality and workmanship to those built after the war. Houses built in the postwar period, and which are 15 to 20 years old, invariably need new kitchen cabinets and equipment. Bathrooms 35 years old always need doing over. A complete new kitchen will cost a minimum of $5,000. Count on a minimum of $1,500 for a bathroom. When kitchens and bathrooms need doing over, they are bargaining points. The seller should discount his price somewhat to offset the cost of modernization. (Please turn to page 199

An old garage, with a shed as an appendage, standing forlornly in an overgrown field—only an imaginative alchemist would dream of transmuting such base material into a small gem of a house surrounded by a rather formal spread of greenery and bloom. Such an alchemist is Mrs. William Burleigh, who, house-hunting near Old Lyme, Connecticut, was shown the old building, saw its potentials, bought it, and transformed it into the house you see here. One wall was given a new face, left; the others are still the originals. Approached from the long driveway, the white house, with its shutters painted a subtle mauve-brown, has a Palladian grace belying its garage origin. Landscaping was done bit by bit; now clipped privet hedges, a series of trees and flower beds make a lovely setting for yesterday's garage, today's house.

GROUND FLOOR

Rising from its Westchester hilltop like a battlement at Kenilworth, this stone tower originally held a water storage tank for a large suburban house, since torn down. Built in 1906, it served as a buttress for garage and servant quarters until the early 1940's, when they were made into an apartment and tiny rooms installed in the tower itself (its water-storage function no longer needed). Recently a younger generation completed the transformation by adding a spacious modern wing. In designing the new structure, Architect Perry M. Duncan incorporated a massive stone chimney that relates the new to the old and allows a fireplace on each level, downstairs in the family room, upstairs in the living room. The main rooms are on the upper level, for two reasons: to connect conveniently with the bedrooms (over the old garage) and to view the wooded property more easily.

DRIVEWAY INTO TERRACE

RESETTING THE SCENE: STAGE I

A flagstone floor, a new gate in a new wall, planting beds and boxes, statuary and lush foliage—all a supreme disguise for an old driveway. So successful was this rearrangement planned by Designer Otto Zenke for the North Carolina home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hollingsworth that it is hard to picture this bowered terrace in its original state (drawing at left). Two brick retaining walls existed, so it was necessary only to add a short wall to make the terrace enclosure complete. At top, a look through the new gate toward the rear wall, with steps down from the house. A bank of windows and twin doors replaced the garage door, while the garage itself became a recreation room (photograph at right). The drive to the street was narrowed to a brick walk. Border planting here and throughout the terrace beds makes liberal use of the shrubs and ground covers that thrive in the mid-South climate: boxwood, azalea, wistaria, and ivies. In addition to other garden sculpture, the gate is guarded by a large stonework eagle. For the solution to the garage problem, please turn the page.

DRAWING BY MADELAINE THATCHER

The new garage was added to the house on the opposite side from the terrace shown on preceding page. A new breezeway, designed for outdoor living, separates the garage from the remodeled den. The den was expanded with a brick-floor section, its streetside window blocked up.

STAGE II: NEW GARAGE, BREEZEWAY; REMODELED DEN

When the Hollingsworths gave up their original driveway and the lower-level garage, the next step was inevitable in our car-dominated society: a new garage. It was accomplished at the other end of the house, in a remodeling that also added a breezeway and changed a tiny unused room into a den-library. What happened is clear on the plan above. At the right, the dogwood-shaded addition is seen from the rear. The new floor-to-ceiling window in the den looks up the grassy slope of the land, photograph at left. Commanding the view is Mrs. Hollingsworth's antique desk. This light-flooded alcove has almost ideal conditions for the collection of tropical plants. Across the room, photograph below, bookshelves fill the space where a window originally looked out to the street. Symbolized in this change of windows is a 40-year shift in America's focus of interest—from public front porch to private rear terrace. The door here opens on the new breezeway, which is furnished almost like another indoor space. In the mild climate that prevails in Carolina, it can be used during nine months of the year.

THE BEAUTIFUL NEW FACE OF

What's this? Wood, tile, brick, slate, pebble, bamboo, mosaic? Not one. All are vinyl or a vinyl combination . . . and therefore have the remarkable ability to take color brilliantly or subtly, and to assume surface textures with the willingness of wet clay in a sculptor's hands. As for their ease of installation, care, comfort, resilience, and quiet—they are the remodeler's principal ally. For House Beautiful's editor-to-reader report on the latest news in resilient flooring, please see page 50.

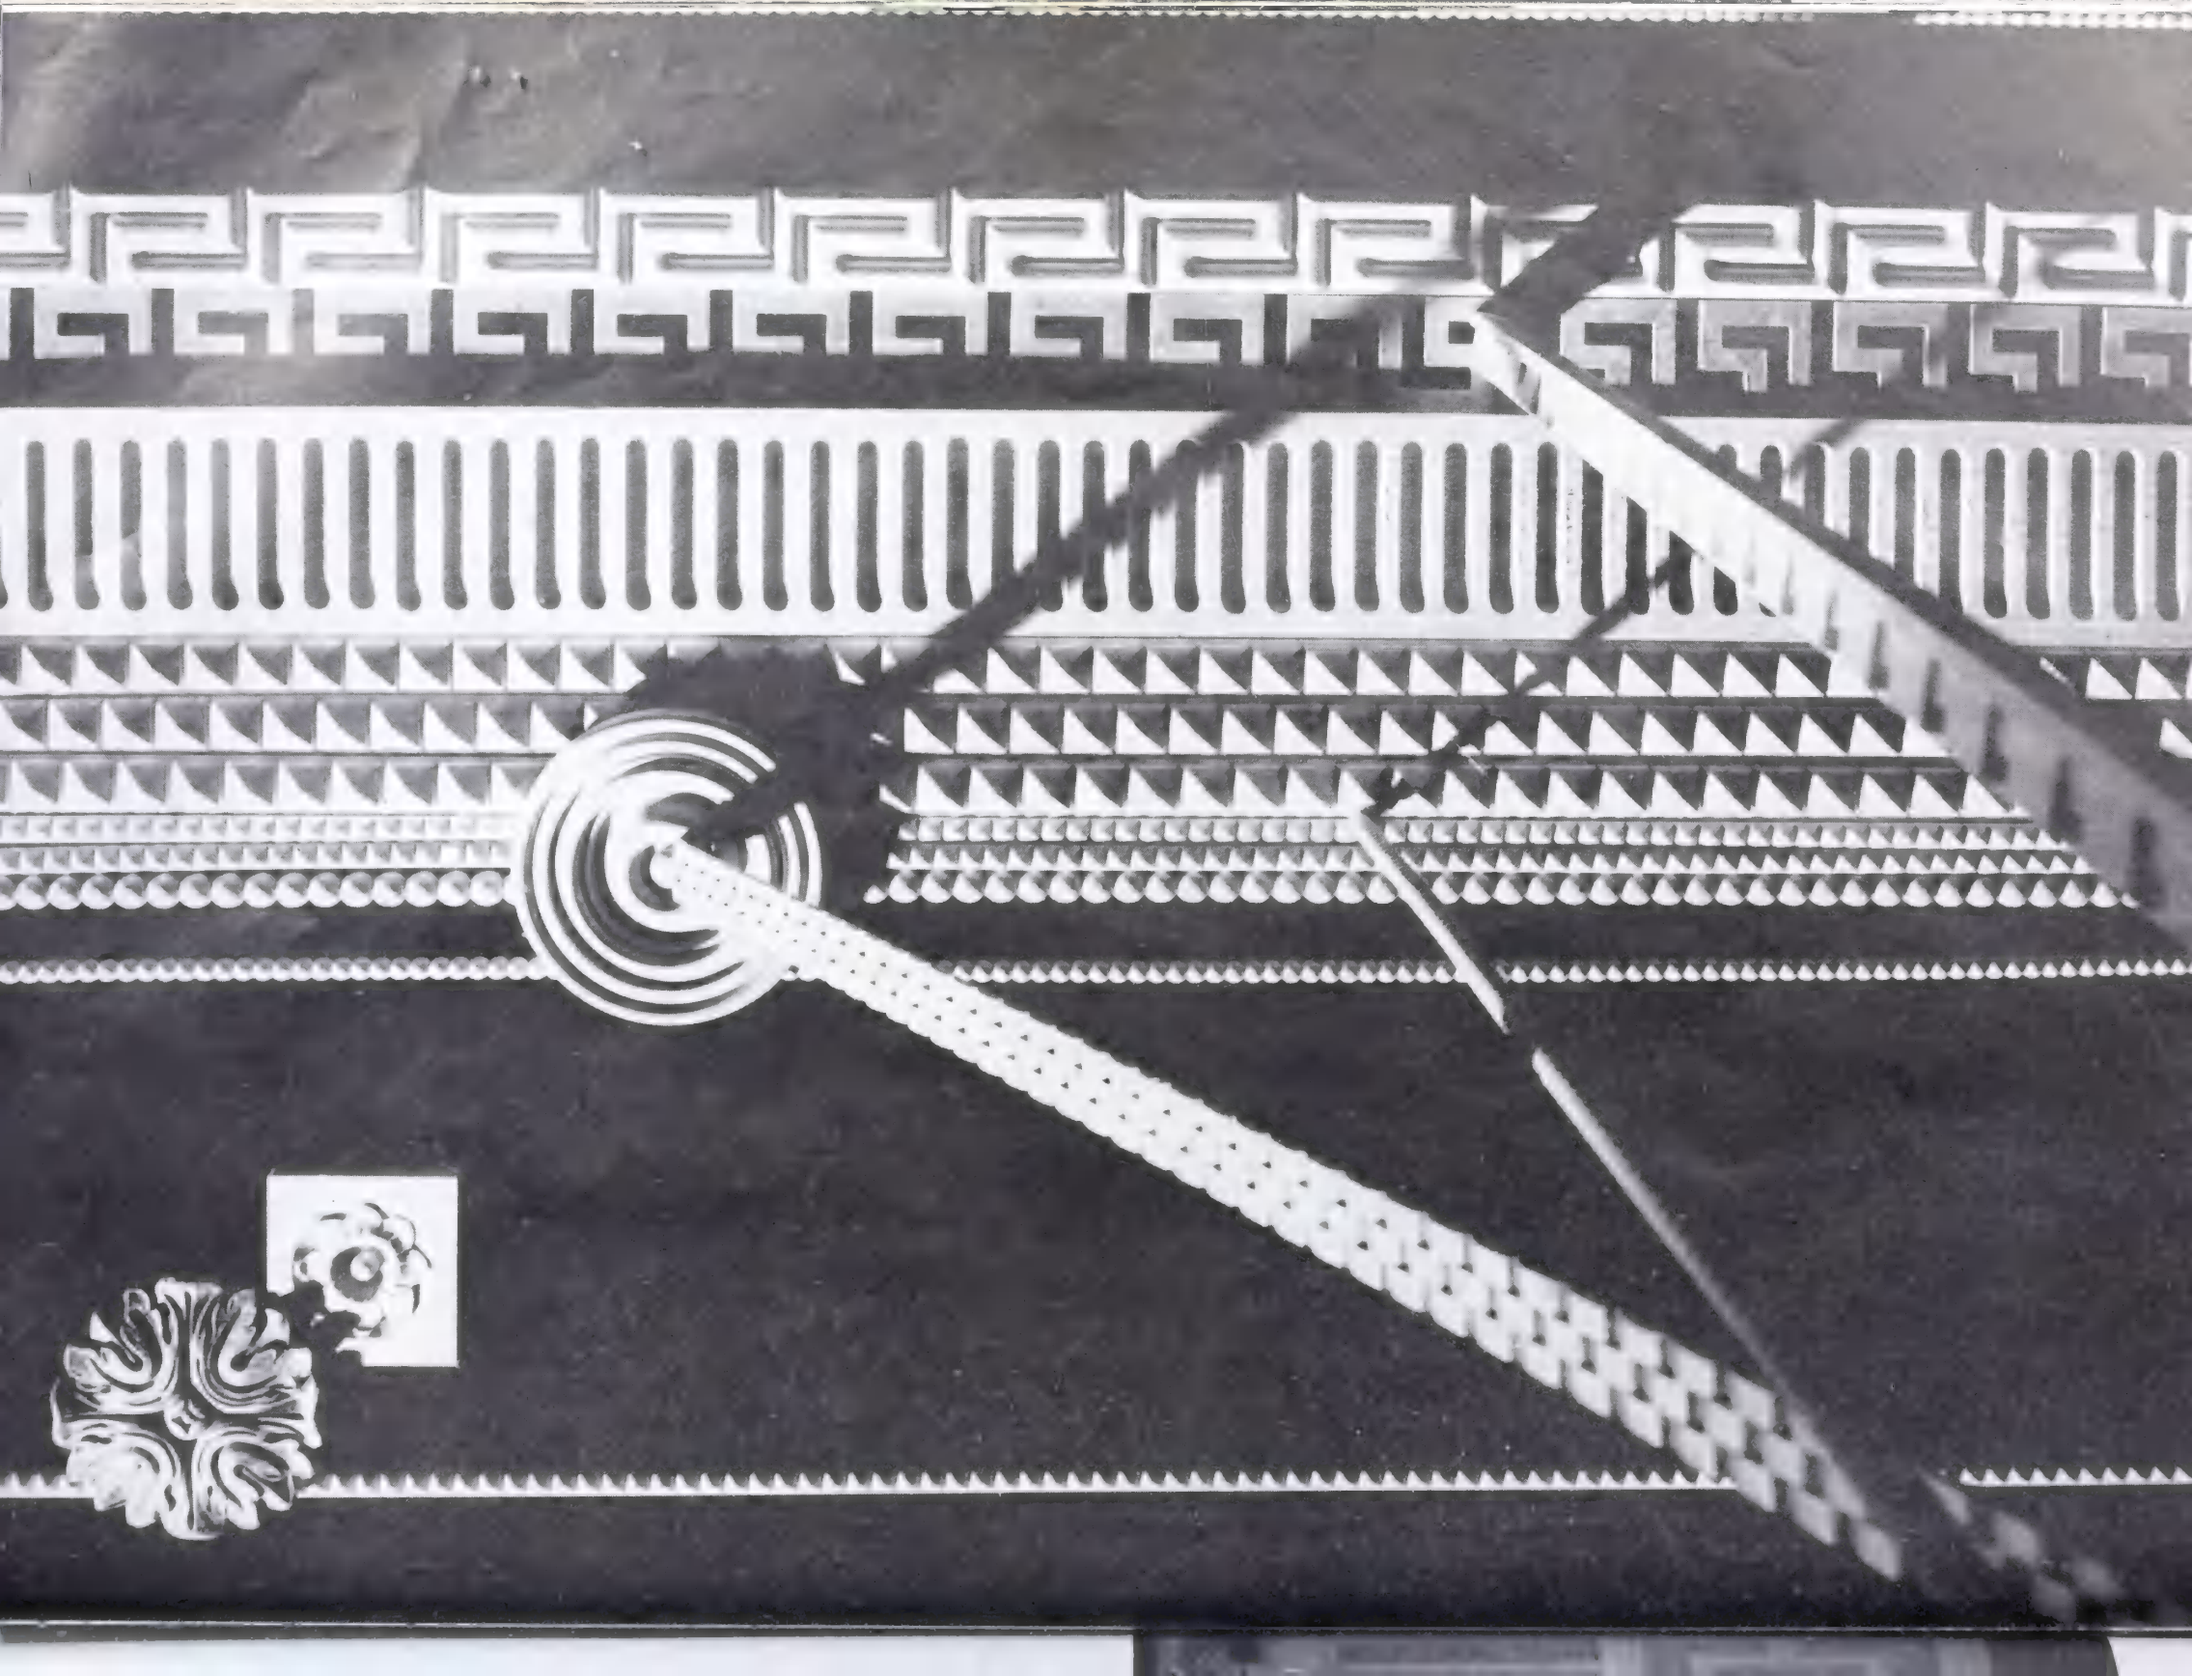
Before-and-afters of opposite ends of living room show transformation. The beams were made by nailing together three 1″ by 4″ boards, then attaching them to boards held to ceiling with butterfly bolts. Louvers hide windows, radiator, air conditioner. Spanish panels are created by overlays of 1″ by 2″ boards, with $\frac{3}{4}$″ cove molding. Panels conceal storage. Breakfront spindles are stock turnings.

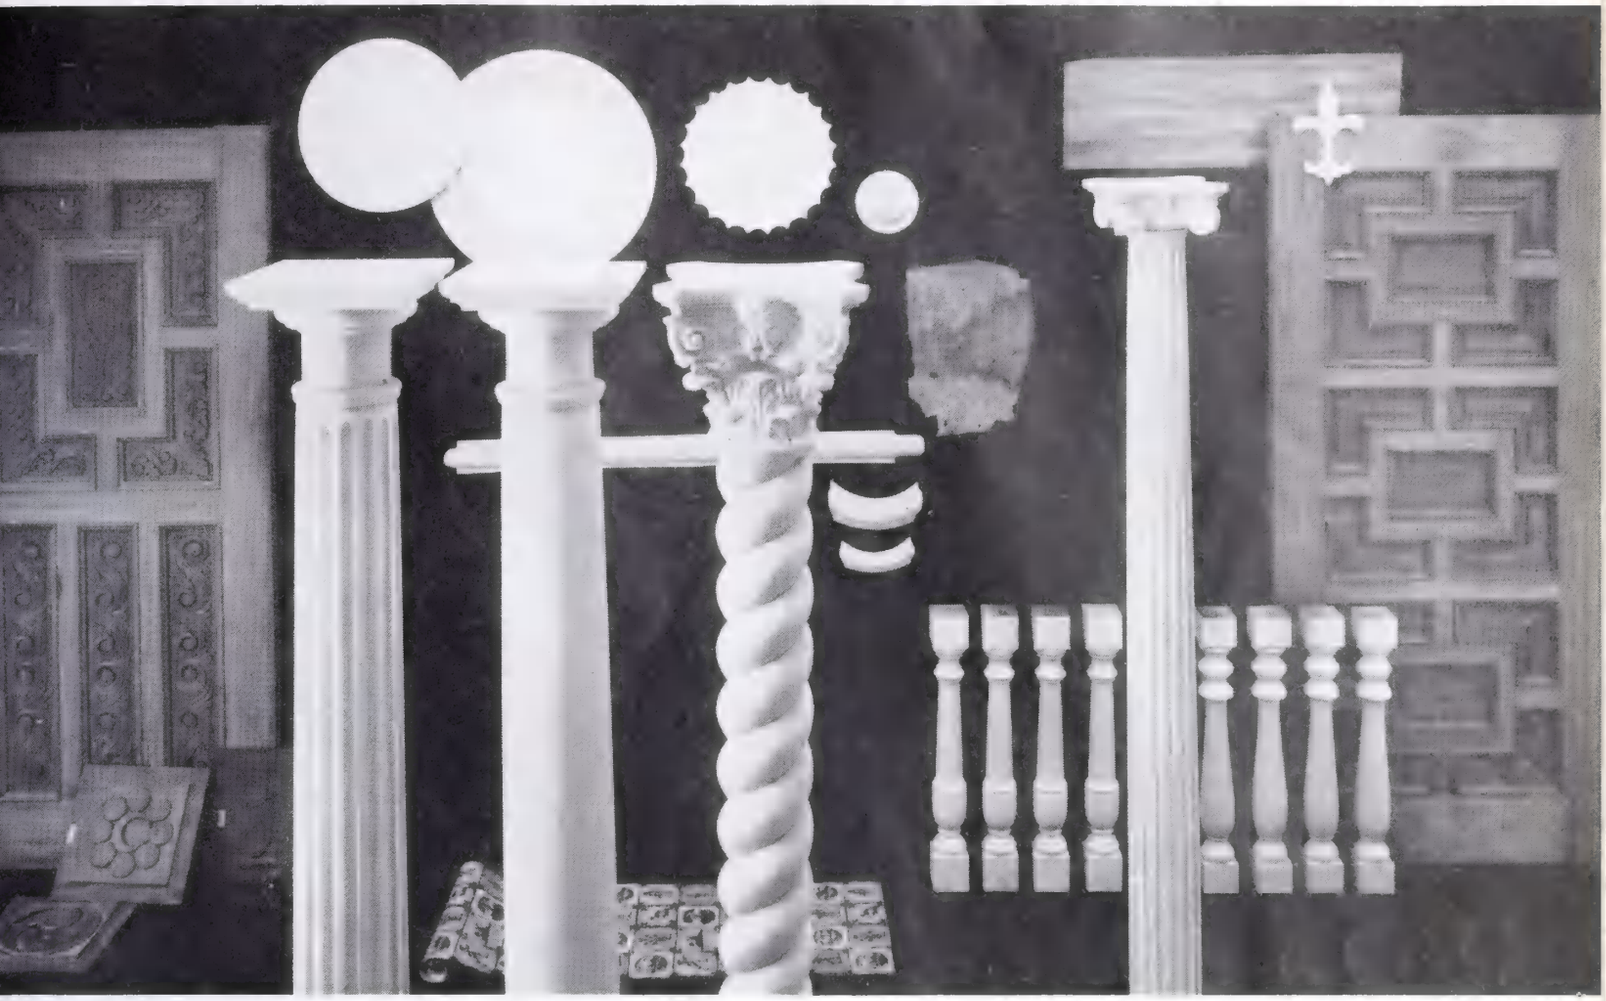
REMOVABLE REMODELING

What can renters do with bare walls and undistinguished space? Even with permission from the landlord, paying for structural changes in someone else's property is not a wise investment. One man's answer to this dilemma is: removable remodeling.

The photographs on these two pages show the striking effects achieved by adding paneling and built-ins that look permanent but aren't. Everything comes apart and can be moved—even the ceiling beams.

In this system, originated by New York designer Charles Gans for Georgia-Pacific, nailing is minimized by clever use of other kinds of fasteners. With adjustable furniture glides, tight pressure-fit is obtained between floor and ceiling. This technique fixes 2″ by 4″ supports and cabinets as firmly into place as nailing. Boards and paneling are fastened to the walls with Velcro. This nylon fastener is made up of two tapes that lock firmly when pressed together, but can be zipped apart. The dropped ceiling over the dining area and the wall-hung bookcases are largely supported by freestanding cabinet and storage units. The bookcase sections are joined to each other with Teenuts, a hardware-store item that permits fastening wood to wood with removable bolts. Total cost of materials for remodeling two rooms was $1,500.





Vertical supports are firmly fixed in place by extending adjustable glides (top photos). Heavy-duty Velcro, zipper-action nylon tape available at many department stores, is used for other fastening (lower photos). Velcro on back of vertical boards holds fast to Velcro glued to wall. Velcro on front of these boards will hold prefinished pecan paneling. Right photograph: study with remodeling completed.

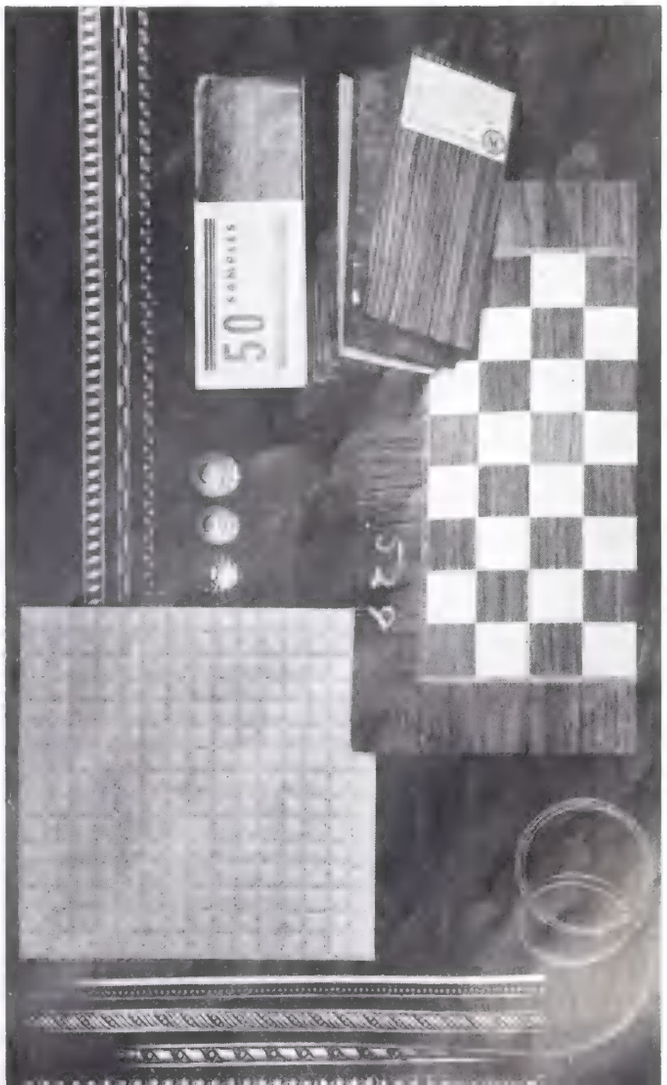
Wood columns and balusters make classic room dividers. They add Palladian grace to mirror or mural walls. Hand-carved wooden doors and door panels repay small effort with handsome rewards. Anaglypta moldings make dadoes, panels, ceiling centers to enrich rooms. Press-on vinyl that lines cabinets and walls closely resembles Delft tiles.

INSTANT DECORATING



If you can drive a tack, brush on glue, make adhesive stick, you can use these decorations to turn a starkly plain room into a beauty. Product sources, page 54

By EPSIE KINARD

Exotic wood veneers—borders, inlay, table tops—put a façade of fine cabinetry on ordinary furniture. So do elegant lead crystal cabinet knobs. Adhesive vinyl wall panels can tool a full-scale redecorating job in bathroom or kitchen. Burnished paper-backed molded vinyl that glues on gives a Cellini-like richness to furniture, mirrors, and screens.

Carved wood moldings of various designs and widths can be tapped for almost magical embellishment of doors, furniture, wall paneling, window cornices, and shelf trims.

—18 WAYS TO SERVE CHICKEN DELICIOUSLY

By HELEN McCULLY

Roast Chicken à la Française

Rub the cavity of a 5- to 5½-pound chicken with salt and pepper, tuck in a sprig or two of parsley, a bit of thyme, a bay leaf, and 2 garlic cloves with shells on or 1 small onion. Truss the bird securely to keep it shapely.

Rub the skin generously with softened butter seasoned with salt and freshly ground pepper. Place the chicken, uncovered, breast side up, in roasting pan, and roast in a preheated 450° F. oven for 25 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350° F., turn chicken on one side, baste well with pan drippings (add more butter, if necessary), and continue roasting 20 minutes, basting every 10 minutes. Turn chicken on other side and roast, still basting regularly, another 20 minutes. Now turn it on its back and roast until chicken is done, about 20 minutes. Continue basting. When properly cooked, the drumstick will feel soft when pressed (test with a thick fold of paper toweling) and can be easily moved in its socket.

To serve, remove trussing string, place chicken on a hot platter, and allow to stand 10 minutes or so before carving. Serves 6 generously.

For a capon, 6 to 7 pounds, follow the same instructions for preparation and roasting, allowing a somewhat longer time in the oven. Perhaps another 20 minutes. Test for doneness. Serves 8.

For a smaller chicken, 3 to 3½ pounds, roast at the high heat (450° F.) until chicken is cooked. Here, too, follow same instructions for preparation and roasting method, basting assiduously. Takes approximately 1 hour, but test for doneness. Serves 4.

Sauce: Discard all but 2 tablespoons of juices in roasting pan, add 1 generous teaspoon minced shallots or green onion and cook slowly for about a minute. Add 1 cup canned chicken broth and cook, over a high heat, scraping down the sides of the pan with a wooden spoon, until you have about ½ cup. Season to taste. Spoon a tablespoon or so over the cooked chicken and serve remainder in a sauceboat.

Tuck a bouquet of parsley or watercress in the chicken's tail before it goes to the table.

Cold Roast Chicken à la Caravelle

With the perfectly cooked breast of a young roasted chicken, Roger Fassaguet, the talented chef at La Caravelle Restaurant, New York, sometimes serves Mustard Mayonnaise.

To make Mustard Mayonnaise, mix 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard into ½ cup good homemade mayonnaise. The perfection of this sauce depends on the perfection of the mayonnaise.

Mint Stuffed Chicken

Rub the cavity and inside the breast of a 5- to 5½-pound chicken with salt and pepper. Stuff the breast through the opening at the neck, and the cavity, with fresh mint leaves, washed and dried, and a good lump of butter. Pack the mint in tightly. Bank on 6 to 8 cups mint leaves. Truss securely. Follow roasting instructions given in Roast Chicken à la Française.

Note: The mint stuffing is for flavor only and is not served.

Sauce Paloise

¼ cup wine vinegar
¼ cup dry white wine or dry white vermouth
1 tablespoon minced shallots or green onion bulbs
3 tablespoons minced fresh mint leaves
Dash freshly ground pepper
Pinch salt
3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons cold butter
½ cup melted butter

Combine vinegar, wine or vermouth, shallots or onion, 1 tablespoon mint leaves, pepper and salt in a small saucepan. Bring to a boil over a moderate heat and cook until liquid has reduced to 2 tablespoons. Cool. Strain into saucepan.

Beat the egg yolks until very thick and creamy. Stir into the vinegar mixture and beat thoroughly. Add half the cold butter and thicken over very low heat, whipping constantly.

Beat in remaining cold butter, then the melted butter drop by drop. When all the butter is in and the sauce has thickened to the consistency of Hollandaise, take off the heat and beat in the remaining fresh mint leaves.

Serve warm with Mint Stuffed Roast Chicken or with hot or cold roast lamb.

MASTERPIECES OF MUSICAL REMODELING

By RICHARD FREED

In the continuing process that makes music what it is, many melodies linger on—and on. Here are some notable examples of tunes that have acquired new vitality through new tonal garb

The remodeling process in music started centuries ago, when the distinctions between "serious" and "popular" music were less rigid than they are today. Roland de Lassus (also known as Orlando di Lasso, though he was Dutch), back in the 16th Century, composed "parody Masses" in which the liturgy was set to tunes taken from madrigals popular at the time. About the same time, the English composer Richard Dering wove elaborate fantasias from the street cries of London tradesmen. In much the same vein, the music of The Star-Spangled Banner was taken from the English drinking song To Anacreon in Heav'n.

More recently, this process has been reversed, with Tin Pan Alley plundering the works of Tchaikovsky for several of the pop hits of the 30's and 40's (Tonight We Love, The Isle of May, Moon Love, Our Love, Story of a Starry Night, etc.), and the music of Grieg and Borodin being adapted for the Broadway musicals Song of Norway and Kismet.

During the baroque and classical periods, it was customary for composers to borrow melodies, or even entire compositions, from each other. Thus Francesco Geminiani, a pupil of Corelli, recast a dozen of his master's violin sonatas as concerti grossi. Bach rearranged several of Vivaldi's violin concertos, some as keyboard concertos and some as works for solo organ or harpsichord, and wrote an organ chorale-prelude on Martin Luther's A Mighty Fortress.

Nor have composers been reluctant to remodel their own best material many times over. Schubert used one of his loveliest melodies as an orchestral entr'acte in his music for Rosamunde, as a movement in a string quartet, and as an impromptu for piano. The minuet in Beethoven's Septet for Winds and Strings also appears in one of his piano sonatas, and the theme of the Eroica symphony's finale makes several appearances in his other works—in the ballet The Creatures of Prometheus, as the basis of the C-major piano variations, and as an orchestral contra-danse.

Franz Liszt recast many of his piano compositions in orchestral form, including the Mephisto Waltz and six of the Hungarian Rhapsodies. One of the rhapsodies, in fact, was made to do triple-duty. No. 14 for piano became No. 1 of the orchestral series and also the Hungarian Fantasia for piano and orchestra. Ralph Vaughan Williams made no fewer than nine settings of his charming Fantasia on "Greensleeves" for various instrumental and vocal combinations. The work itself, of course, is basically a remodeling of a famous old English air to which any number of texts have been fitted.

Perhaps the greatest musical remodeler of all was Maurice Ravel, many of whose orchestral masterpieces were originally composed for the piano. In orchestrating such works as the Pavane pour une infante défunte, the Alborada del Gracioso, the exquisite Tombeau de Couperin, Ma Mère l'Oye, the Valses nobles et sentimentales, and the Menuet antique, Ravel never contented himself with mere transcription, but in each case actually composed the respective work anew (Please turn to page 187) transformation was to combine the old kitchen with a small room next to it and to eliminate the interruption of an open stairway to the second floor. This clearing-away process resulted in enough space for an ample and well-organized kitchen.

Like every other expert cook, Mrs. Radzwiller believes that proper tools and handy places for them are important to the practice of culinary arts. Among her treasures, the enviable selection of knives, above, in a nesting place all their own, a knife-safe drawer mounted under one of the kitchen cabinets.

Well-organized, like Mrs. Radzwiller's own schedule, it certainly needs to be. Cooking classes, of strictly limited size and make-up, are held during daytime hours when her children are in school. The lessons deal with the cuisines of India, China, Mexico, Lebanon, Japan, Greece, Germany—almost every foreign country with the exception of France, which she feels is being capably handled by specialists in French cuisine. All of her students are, or have ambitions to be, gourmet cooks, and they are required to shop for all native ingredients in foreign-food shops in New York. To her, cookery is both an art and a means of communication. She shares with her classes her knowledge of foreign customs and cuisines as a step toward the realization of the one-world idea.

She enjoys using the kitchen tools and utensils used in food preparation in the country of their origin, not necessarily foreign, for she enjoys, too, employing the latest and best appliances, small and large, that have been developed right here in the U.S.

Having such a broad knowledge of cookery, Mrs. Radzwiller is well equipped to project her aptitudes beyond her kitchen walls. And so she does. She is a free-lance writer who has contributed to many magazines, including Gourmet, and has collaborated, though with modest anonymity, in the writing and editing of a number of cookbooks. Although her own classes are confined to no more than seven students—preferably five—and are not advertised, her writings have extended the circle of those who can profit by her cosmopolitan recipes and techniques.

What with being a wife and mother, an accomplished cook, a frequent hostess, a teacher, writer, traveler, and clubwoman, Adrienne Radzwiller is about as busy as any woman can be. Which is why she puts such a high value on having a thoroughly efficient workroom, her kitchen, and has developed such good ways of making it attractively functional. ■

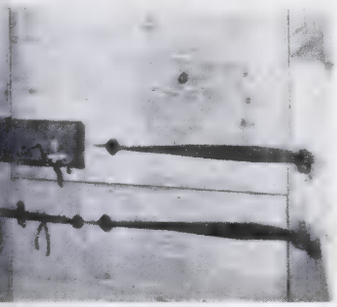
To keep the remodeled kitchen as consistently Early American as possible, the refrigerator was recessed and concealed behind old pine doors, left, with antique wrought-iron hinges to complete the authentic look. In the same recess, shelves were installed, as shown above, to provide the out-of-sight storage space that is welcomed in kitchens of any era. The old pine used for the recess doors matches the cabinets.



After having worked out a general plan with their architect, William H. Jackson, the Leedses were fortunate enough to find a builder, Carl Gunther, and John Gilley, a carpenter, who were sympathetic to the project, and who shared an appreciation of fine old wood and of handmade hardware, once a commonplace, but now a sought-for treasure.

Locating the required materials was no easy matter, and getting some of them into shape to use required a considerable amount of time and patience. The oak-plank floor, for instance, was laid with wood that had been covered with layers of paint, necessitating preliminary scraping and refinishing. Ash was used for the counters, which need only a weekly rub-up with boiled linseed oil, an important point in a kitchen used by moderns, who, whatever their devotion to a past period, do demand contemporary efficiency. Such efficiency is not, of course, merely a matter of easily cleaned work surfaces. It is achieved by having at hand a galaxy of today's kitchen helpers, well-engineered devices designed to save time and trouble.

So the very necessary anachronisms—the refrigerator, the stove, the marvelous new appliances—are here, but they do not shout their presence, being either concealed or so placed that they do not contradict the impression that this delightful room has been lifted straight from Early America into the present, bright blooming geraniums and all.

Unique hoodless exhaust system makes possible island installation of Jenn Air cooktop, with oven suspended from ceiling directly above. Surface unit cover has built-in vent that exhausts down and out of doors. When raised, cover connects to vent oven.

Built-in convenience is achieved by using this portable Dominion "Buffet Range" as a "drop-in." All that's needed is a cutout in a buffet or serving counter, an outlet to plug it in, and asbestos below for insulation.

Many extraordinary features set this 30" Frigidaire range apart. A "Tendermatic" control turns budget cuts of meat into tender, juicy roasts. Pull a lever, turn a knob, and its "Electri-clean" oven automatically cleans itself, its racks, and surface drip bowls.

This handsome 30" console gas range by Nu-Tone has its own built-in ventilating system. Controls at eye level are easy to read and out of reach of small children. Range top lifts for easy, convenient cleaning.

For bath or dressing room: a Koolbar vanity complete with lavatory bowl and refrigerator, below counter. Forty-three inches wide, 22" deep, 32" high, the tiny box has a two-cubic-foot capacity; two ice trays.

Even the smallest kitchen could accommodate this compact gas range. Made by Crown, "Princess Duette" is only 24" wide. It has four surface units, two ovens, and a slide-out broiler drawer. Accessories data for all photographs on page 56.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY WESLEY BALZ

Island unit in Blanche Thebom's kitchen, right, boasts not only a double sink for the usual purposes, but a bar sink as well. Glasses on the open shelves above the island are equally accessible for filling, for putting back in place after cleaning.

No staff was involved. So, although the room is large and has a lavish amount of counter and storage space, the cooking area itself is compact, to simplify her role when she is playing chef.

It is a role she enjoys, for she loves cooking and entertaining, especially now that she has a big apartment with a dining room and the kind of kitchen she used to dream of.

Helpful guests appreciate its excellent traffic pattern, which allows them to serve as volunteer bartenders and butlers, assisting their hostess without getting in her way or interfering with work in progress on the other side of the island unit.

To friends of long standing her good organization comes as no surprise, for they know Blanche Thebom as a person who prizes efficiency and schedules her days carefully. No waste minutes; no waste moves; no waste areas, even those that could be measured in not many inches. Her passion for utilizing everything to best advantage comes from her zest for life. Happily married to Dr. Albert D'Errico, a noted neurosurgeon of Dallas, Texas, she commutes between Dallas and New York when she isn't on tour. She operates with thoughtful inspiration, not a slide rule, and brings lusty enthusiasm to all her activities—singing career, marriage, trusteeship, radio program, the vice presidency of the group that runs the co-operative apartment house she lives in.

It was in the very building she lives in now that she stayed when she first came to Manhattan as a young girl. Then she had a small apartment with only a tiny kitchen, poorly equipped. Perhaps its inadequacies planted the seed of a culinary ambition that was later to flower into the beautiful big kitchen that she revels in now. ■ that might otherwise have remained unnoticed. Two classic examples written during the last 25 years are Benjamin Britten's Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Purcell and the late Paul Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphoses on Themes by Carl Maria von Weber.

The Britten, better known as The Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra, is based on a rondeau from Purcell's incidental music to a drama called Abdelazar, or The Moor's Revenge. The Hindemith, despite its book-length title, is a jolly piece in which the orchestra (provided it is of virtuoso caliber) has a romp with some all-but-forgotten piano music of Weber.

During the last twenty years there has been a huge revival of interest in "old music," and especially in the composers and instruments of the baroque era. A scant thirty years ago this was unfamiliar territory to most listeners, many of whom developed or maintained their acquaintance with so familiar a composer as Bach via the opulent orchestral showpieces Leopold Stokowski made of such works as the Toccata and Fugue in D minor.

Mr. Stokowski sought to emphasize the timeless quality of Bach's music by transcribing his organ works and excerpts from the cantatas and violin sonatas for modern symphony orchestra. Some purists were horrified by his daring to tamper with the work of such an immortal, but the great conductor insisted that the spirit and content of Bach's music were more important than the matter of instrumentation. In any event, his efforts were unquestionably successful.

Some of the loveliest music of any period is to be found in Ottorino Respighi's three suites of Ancient Airs and Dances for the Lute, all comprising imaginative settings of early French and Italian airs. His orchestral suite The Birds is no less appealing. It is made up of transcriptions of old French, Italian, and English harpsichord pieces, some of which have also been recorded in their original form.

Both Respighi and Benjamin Britten were attracted to the music of Rossini. Each created two orchestral works based on Rossini pieces. Britten called his two suites Soirées musicales and Matinées musicales: each is in five short sections—piquant, witty.

thoroughly uncomplicated. Respighi's creations are Rossiniana, a substantial suite based on Rossini's little-known piano music, and the magnificent ballet score La Boutique fantasque, a masterpiece of imaginative craftsmanship.

It was the legendary ballet producer Serge Diaghilev who commissioned Respighi to transform Rossini's songs and piano pieces into the glittering Boutique fantasque. The same remarkable impresario also commissioned Vincenzo Tommasini's elegant transcriptions of Domenico Scarlatti's harpsichord sonatas for the ballet The Good Humoured Ladies, and had Igor Stravinsky compose the score for Pulcinella, based on music attributed to Pergolesi.

In a somewhat later ballet era (early 30's), Manuel Rosenthal created the effervescent Gaîté Parisienne from the music of Offenbach. More recently still, Hershy Kay whipped up the frothy score of Cakewalk from the piano extravaganzas of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, and based another ballet, Stars and Stripes, on a collection of Sousa tunes.

Richard Strauss drew from the harpsichord music of François Couperin for two orchestral works, a Dance Suite and a Divertimento. Keyboard sonatas of Domenico Cimarosa provided the material for an oboe concerto prepared by Sir Arthur Benjamin which has become part of the standard repertoire. Berlioz's orchestration of Weber's Invitation to the Dance, with its famous cello solo, is, like the Moussorgsky-Ravel Pictures, far more familiar than the original piano version.

One of the most striking recent examples of this musical remodeling is the brilliant Carmina Burana by Carl Orff. This earthy, colorful "scenic cantata" is based on manuscripts of 13th-century secular songs found in an old Benedictine monastery in Bavaria.

It is hardly accidental that such gems as the New York Pro Musica's Play of Daniel found such a receptive public in the wake of Carmina Burana's initial popularity here ten or twelve years ago, and now Telefunken has released a recording of 20 songs from the "original version" of Carmina Burana, representing a reconstruction of Orff's source material as actually sung and played seven centuries ago. This is one way the music of all periods is not only kept alive, but made contemporary with our own.

The list which follows comprises recommended recordings of many of the remodeled musical treasures discussed here. In many instances, the original form of the music on which these works is based may also be found in records. Readers interested in seeking out the originals and making comparisons will find there is, in most cases, a wealth of noncontradictory delights in both forms.

is this the finish that beautifies wood so quickly...easily?

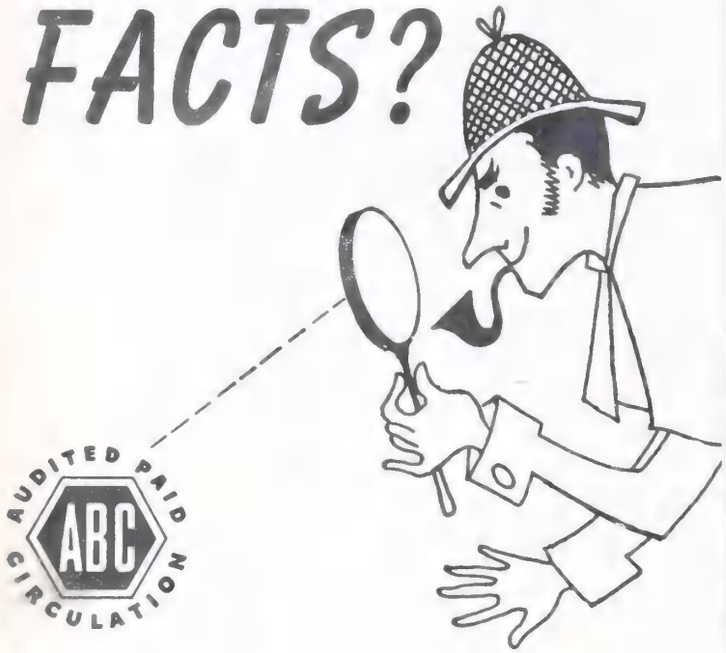
Nature takes years to give wood its handsome, richly-grained beauty. DEFT quickly gives it the finishing touch; a clear, durable, smooth coating that protects while it brings out the natural beauty of raw wood. You'll discover the DEFT difference when you apply it to furniture, paneling, cabinets and all interior woodwork. For most any wood remodeling project, DEFT quickly and easily completes the one job nature couldn't do... adding a custom hand-rubbed or semigloss bar top finish.

DEFT also seals as it finishes. It dries satin-smooth in 30 minutes. Nothing else to apply. Goes on with a brush, roller or spray. Available in regular cans; also in handy aerosol containers ideal for DEFTing shutters, picture frames and other more detailed work. Buy DEFT wherever paint products are sold.

NEW DEFT WOOD STAINS TAKE THE STRAIN OUT OF STAINING

A completely revolutionary approach to staining. New PVA formula makes it possible. Goes on quickly with brush, roller, cloth or sponge. Dries in one hour for same day finishing. Won't lift or streak under any finishing system. Do a professional job while saving time, trouble and money.



Water based • Water soluble • Water cleanup
No thinning • Non-toxic • Non-flammable

Available in the popular wood colors. For unlimited decorator and pastel tones, simply tint Neutral stain with universal or all-purpose type colorants.

TWO PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PA

Before the remodeling, right, the door to the master bedroom opened head-on from the den space. Now, above, it opens at the side, off the longer wall created when the house was extended. This allowed the bookcases to turn the corner, creating the little library seen on page 159. Brick floor and board-and-batten siding continue through the glass wall to make the interior and exterior space seem continuous.

Architect Muir dissuaded the Pollaks from adding a second floor because of code restrictions, plus foundation and utility problems. Her suggestion was to extend the rear of the house ten feet onto the brick terrace, making a new guest room and a garden room extension of the den. The old guest room would become a walk-in closet for Mr. Pollak, with floor-to-ceiling magazine storage in the hall and a built-in desk unit in the new room. This would give 130 more square feet of living space.

As long as they were pushing out walls, Edla Muir also recommended incorporating the seldom-used patio on the cool side of the house into the dining area. She designed a 6′8″ wall of used brick that would screen them from the close neighbors, and by extending it all along the side provided them with a pretty, fountain-splashing, walled garden. The magnificent trees on this side were the inspiration for the unusual window skylight. By constructing an elbow of glass, more of the large trees became visible and their branches would cast a lacy shadow pattern into the dining area in all seasons.

The spiral stairs formed the great puzzle. Although the owners were content to let them exist as a freestanding piece of sculpture, Miss Muir arrived at a solution. This was to change the entrance to the master bedroom, to extend the bookshelves around the corner and by poking a hole in the ceiling and topping it with a lighted, plastic bubble, she gave the stairs a logical place to go and provided the den with beautiful, useful library steps.

Similarly, a handsome practical element in the garden room is the French provincial cabinet behind the Marshal Petain desk. Behind the armoire doors are interior spaces for stereo components, flower arranging materials, and a typing shelf. ■

PHOTOGRAPH BY BRUCE HARLOW

The family-lounge side, above, of the interesting triple-purpose room that the Hallidays created out of an old garage. The major structural change in this area was the introduction of the extra-tall fireplace.

Although the Hallidays are collectors of pre-Columbian art, none of it is displayed in the sitting-room part of the kitchen, above, where artistic honors are divided between the panel of polished rock above the fireplace and the andirons, mammoth antique Spanish ones which were once a part of the San Simeon collection. Tall as the fireplace is, the andirons had to be cut down to fit it. This was so skillfully done that their proportions are still excellent, their effect dramatic.

Arresting, too, are the several heads mounted on the walls. Although these pieces of the animal kingdom fascinate some visitors—especially the schoolboy contingent—the Hallidays are inclined to consider them just so many white elephants. Bagged by Mr. Halliday on a long-ago hunting trip he made in Wyoming, the heads were mounted and placed on the walls of his business office in Indianapolis, and were left there when the family moved.

Some time subsequently the office was stripped, and a telephone call from the express office announced to the Hallidays "your heads are here." And "here," like it or not, they are.

In the evening, these hearty colors dim to softer tones, due to the mellowness of indirect lighting coming from the ceiling beams, this supplemented, sometimes replaced, by firelight and candlelight, and occasionally by a sort of private moonlight. To insure the room's having ample illumination by day, the Hallidays put in a sizable skylight. To their pleasure, when the moon rides in the right place in the heavens, it seems suspended immediately above the skylight, as if it had been hung there, like a big, pale, Christmas-tree ornament, for the specific purpose of lighting up the Hallidays' converted garage. ■

Facts about
and chicken cookery

In buying chickens, it is important to consider the use to which you wish to put them. According to U.S. Government standards, chickens are classified as follows: broilers or fryers, designated by the Poultry and Egg National Board as broiler-fryers. Weighing from 1½ to 4 pounds, these young all-purpose chickens can be broiled, sautéed or roasted; roasters, larger and somewhat older, ranging from 3 to 5 pounds, are best roasted, with or without stuffing, poached, or fricasseed; hens or stewing chickens (often called fowl, although technically it means any domestic or game bird) are mature birds, less tender than roasters and generally heavier. When poached properly, the preferred way to prepare them, they are the basis for many magnificent dishes calling for cooked chicken meat. On HOUSE BEAUTIFUL we recommend poaching the hens whole, rather than cut up (regardless of their ultimate use) for greater flavor, tenderness and moistness; capons, castrated cocks, weighing from 6 to 7 pounds or even more, are especially desirable for roasting when a large bird is in order; squab chickens, mere babies, weigh about 1 pound, can be roasted whole in a 450° F. oven or split and broiled. Serve one to a person.

How chickens are sold

Today chickens are fully drawn, cleaned inside and out, ready to cook. They can be bought whole, fresh or frozen, with the cleaned giblets and neck, wrapped separately, tucked into the body. Or they can be bought cut up, or you can buy separate chicken parts: breasts (one chicken breast actually means the whole breast—both sides of the backbone), drumsticks, wings, thighs, backs. When buying poultry, allow about one pound, ready to cook, per person.

How to store fresh chickens

Once the chicken has come from the market, remove the giblets (gizzard, heart, liver), and either cook at once or freeze for future use, because they deteriorate very quickly. Wrap the chicken loosely in plastic wrap or foil and place in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Fresh chicken, also perishable, should be used within 2 to 3 days of purchase.

Frozen chickens

Frozen chickens, available nationally, whole or in parts, must be stored in the freezing compartment of refrigerator. To defrost frozen chicken, it is best to thaw it in the refrigerator right in its wrapper. Allow about a good long day for a 3- to 5-pound bird. This way it loses less of its juice and flavor. The other alternative is to place the frozen bird or parts, still in their wrappers, in a pan under cold running water. Once defrosted, chicken should never be refrozen. Cook immediately after defrosting.

Cooked chicken meat can be frozen most successfully. To freeze, strip meat from bones, wrap securely, and place in freezing compartment of refrigerator.

Roasting time

We have recommended (page 177) roasting chicken in the French manner by starting it at a high temperature, 450° F., then reducing the oven heat to 350° F. By the American method the chicken is roasted at the same temperature, 350° F., all the way through. Chicken should always be brought to room temperature, otherwise the roasting time will be off. Large birds require less cooking time per pound than small ones, and all stuffed birds require more roasting time than unstuffed. A 5-pound chicken, roasted French style, takes approximately the same time as a

By either method it is wise to check doneness by one of the suggested tests. Always ask your butcher to give you the weight of the bird so you'll know what you're about.

To truss a chicken

This means, of course, tying and skewering the bird so it will be shapely when presented at the table. To truss, fold the wing-tips back under the bird. Then take a long piece of white string, tie the leg tips together tightly and make a taut loop around the tail, leaving two fairly even ends of string. Now cross the string over the back of the bird, bring it across the wings to hold firm against the body, and finally tie securely to the neck skin that remains after the neck is removed. If the chicken has been stuffed, sew up the vent or skewer it to prevent stuffing from exuding.

To test roasted chicken, take several folds of paper toweling and feel the drumstick. If soft and the bone moves easily in its socket, the chicken is perfectly cooked. Or pierce the flesh deeply with a fork—the juices should run clear yellow without any traces of pink. With poached chicken, the flesh of the drumstick will feel soft and the meat will have just begun to shrink from the tip of the drumstick.

The chicken rack

The carcass or skeleton of a roasted chicken with the bits of meat that cling to it should not be discarded, but rather used to make soup or broth. (See HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, March issue.) The soup or broth can be frozen successfully, or it can be stored in the refrigerator with a covering of chicken fat or melted shortening for a brief period.

Stuffings for Roast Chicken

Follow roasting instructions for Roast Chicken à la Française, having first stuffed the bird with one of the following recipes. Quantities are planned for 5- to 5½-pound chickens. Stuff both the cavity and the breast. The latter because it makes a more shapely bird and furthermore the stuffing can be sliced with the breast. Truss securely.

White Wine and Rice Stuffing

5 tablespoons butter
1 clove garlic, split
¾ cup dry white wine or dry vermouth
1½ cups water
1 cup long-grain rice
1 teaspoon salt
Good dash freshly ground pepper
Good dash freshly grated nutmeg
Good dash allspice
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup chopped, slivered almonds

Cover currants with water, bring to a boil, take off the heat and allow to stand for about 5 minutes. Drain; set aside.

Melt butter in a deep saucepan, add garlic slivers, and cook a minute or two. Do not brown. Discard garlic.

Add wine and water, bring to a boil, then stir in all remaining ingredients except the currants and almonds. Bring to a boil again, cover, then simmer over low heat until all liquid has been absorbed. About 20 minutes. Stir in currants and the almonds.

Almond Stuffing

1 can (4½-ounce size) slivered toasted almonds
3 eggs, separated
½ cup light cream
Freshly grated nutmeg to taste
3 cups fresh bread crumbs, crumbled fine
¼ cup butter, melted
Salt and pepper to taste

Chop almonds coarsely. Beat egg yolks with cream and nutmeg until well mixed. Add all the other ingredients except egg whites. Beat egg whites until stiff, then work into the bread mixture with your hands until thoroughly combined.

To Poach Chicken

Although any chicken may be poached ("boiled" is the old-fashioned term), it is more practical to buy a hen or a stewing chicken (the name varies according to region), for these reasons: they are heavier, so yield more meat; they cost less per pound, so are always an economical buy; and when properly poached, yield delicious, tender, moist meat that may be used in innumerable recipes.

An electronic organ for less than $500.00 can't be good.

This one isn't...

IT'S GREAT!

ELECTRO-VOICE TWO-MANUAL SPINET/CHORD ORGAN $495*

Start with the sound. Rich. Vibrant. Not a pale echo, but the full-bodied voice of the organ that lets you express every musical mood.

The Electro-Voice 6220 is a full-sized spinet in playing features as well as sound. It has two 37-note manuals plus 13-note pedal manual, and ten distinctive voices plus two vibrato tabs.

And the 6220 is also a chord organ that anyone can play! The accompaniment keyboard converts at the touch of a switch so that with one finger you "press a key—play a chord." A patented E-V exclusive!

But how good can a $500 organ really be? Good enough to earn a full one-year warranty against any defect. It's backed by 37 years of experience in electro-acoustics.

The Electro-Voice 6220 Spinet Organ is now on display at leading organ dealers. Write for free brochure and name of the E-V dealer nearest you.

*F.O.B. factory, bench additional. Other models from $319.00 to $650.00.

INTRODUCING YOU TO THE BEST IN SERVICE—THE BEST IN SAVINGS, ON 50 OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MAGAZINES!

The man from PPSB (Periodical Publishers' Service Bureau) will offer you a more colorful, more exciting, more productive life through America's leading magazines.

In addition to introducing you to better living through better reading, he will bring you big savings on 50 popular magazines, all handled conveniently on one order, on an easy "Pay-as-You-Read" plan, plus the very best in service.

Your kindness in allowing the PPSB Man from Superior Street a few moments to explain this offer will prove richly rewarding.

Ask him to show you two important credentials. The first identifies him as a representative of PPSB with its 50 years of superior magazine service; the second means that he is registered with the Central Registry of the Magazine Publishers' Association, and that your order will be backed by a $6,000 bond.

PPSB

Superior Street, Sandusky, Ohio
A subsidiary of the Hearst Corporation

5 or 6 peppercorns
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon thyme
Few sprigs parsley
1 onion, skin on, quartered, stuck with 2 cloves
1 carrot, coarsely chopped
2 stalks celery, tops on, coarsely chopped
Dry white wine (optional)

Place trussed fowl and neck (not the giblets) and all ingredients in a deep, heavy kettle. Cover with cold water or half water and wine. Bring to a boil slowly. Simmer, covered, until tender. Skim off any scum that rises to the surface. The length of time depends on the size of the fowl and its age. Figure on from 1½ to 2 hours. To test, feel the leg. It should be soft and the meat just beginning to shrink from the leg knuckle. Cool in the broth. When cold, remove chicken from broth. Strip meat from carcass. Discard skin, bone, gristle, and fat. Wrap cold chicken meat securely, and refrigerate.

Meanwhile, place kettle with broth over high heat and boil down to about half. Strain through a fine sieve, or several layers of cheesecloth wrung out in cold water, into pint jars, scalded in boiling water. Cover tightly and refrigerate. Use the broth for cooking vegetables and rice, as a base for soup, or in recipes calling for chicken broth.

Note: The gizzard is not used here because it has such a distinctive flavor it gives an off-flavor to the broth. Freeze the liver to use some other way.

Poached Chicken with Rice in Lemon Sauce

Shortly before chicken is done, cook 1 cup rice. Keep hot while you make the sauce.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in a saucepan, stir in 3 tablespoons flour until smooth. Add 1 cup strained chicken broth. Cook, whisking constantly, until sauce bubbles. Take off the heat. Beat up one egg yolk, add a little of the hot sauce, and 2 tablespoons butter. Then beat in remaining sauce. Finally, stir in ¾ cup fresh lemon juice.

To serve: Place poached chicken in center of hot serving platter, surround with hot rice, and spoon the lemon sauce over both chicken and rice. Garnish with bouquets of parsley. Serves 6.

Real Chicken Salad

Strip the meat from the cold, poached chicken in large pieces, removing all gristle, fat, skin and bones. Then cut into fairly large pieces. Sprinkle with salt and freshly ground pepper. Be generous with the pepper, for its sweet, sharp flavor is especially compatible with chicken. Mix well.

Combine heavy mayonnaise, your own or commercial—one without any sweetness whatsoever—with commercial sour cream and lemon juice to taste. Approximately 1 cup cream to 2 cups mayonnaise. Taste for seasoning.

Add just enough mayonnaise to the chicken to coat each piece of meat, and mix carefully. Pile in a large crystal bowl, surround with Bibb or leaves from the hearts of Boston lettuce. Spoon a dollop of mayonnaise on top and garnish with well-drained capers.

Note: The meat from a 5-pound chicken will serve about 6. Hot, buttered biscuits and a bottle of chilled white wine are excellent accompaniments.

Variations: Add ½ cup or so of slivered, toasted almonds or the same amount of green seedless grapes.

Mediterranean Chicken Salad

Beat 2 egg yolks until very thick, then beat in 1 cup heavy cream and ⅓ cup dry sherry. Place over a very low heat and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce has thickened slightly. Watch carefully because it goes very quickly. Season with a dash of salt. Chill. Makes about 1½ cups. When chilled, pour over cold, sliced poached chicken and sprinkle with finely chopped lemon peel.

Serve with Rice Salad: To cooked rice add enough olive oil and tarragon vinegar to just moisten it. Season with salt, freshly ground pepper, and a mere dash of freshly grated nutmeg. Mix in chopped celery, fresh basil leaves (if available), sliced black olives, sliced raw peeled tomato, and red and green peppers. Quantities depend on number to be served.

Beat egg whites, with a dash of salt, until they stand in stiff peaks when you lift up the beater. Vigorously whisk about a third of the beaten whites into the sauce. Stir in the chicken meat. Finally, carefully fold in the remaining whites. Pour into the prepared soufflé dish, sprinkle remaining cheese on top, and place in a preheated 400° F. oven. Reduce oven heat immediately to 375° F. and bake 30 minutes. If you prefer a soufflé with a soft consistency, bake a few minutes less. Serves 4.

Fried Chicken, American Style

2 2- to 2½-pound broiler fryers
1 cup cream
1½ cups water
2 teaspoons salt
½ tablespoon peppercorns (about)
1 teaspoon Tabasco
1 cup flour (about)
1 pound lard
½ cup (1 stick) butter

Have the chicken cut into frying pieces. Place in a large bowl with cream and water, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ of the peppercorns put through a mill, and the Tabasco. Cover, and refrigerate overnight.

Combine flour, remaining salt and pepper (ground) in a paper bag. Drop the chicken pieces, right from the cream mixture, a few at a time, into the flour and shake until well coated.

Meanwhile, melt lard and butter in a large skillet. When fat is hot (it should be 325° F. on thermometer), place chicken pieces, skin side down, one at a time, and fry over moderate to high heat. When golden on one side, turn. Allow a little more time for legs and thighs than for breasts. Drain on paper towels. Keep warm.

To make gravy, pour off all but about 2 tablespoons of the fat. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour and cook a few minutes. Add the cream mixture in which the chicken soaked and cook, stirring constantly, until of the right consistency. Taste for seasoning.

Broiled Chicken with Lemon and Garlic

Have the butcher spit and flatten three 2-pound broiler-fryers.

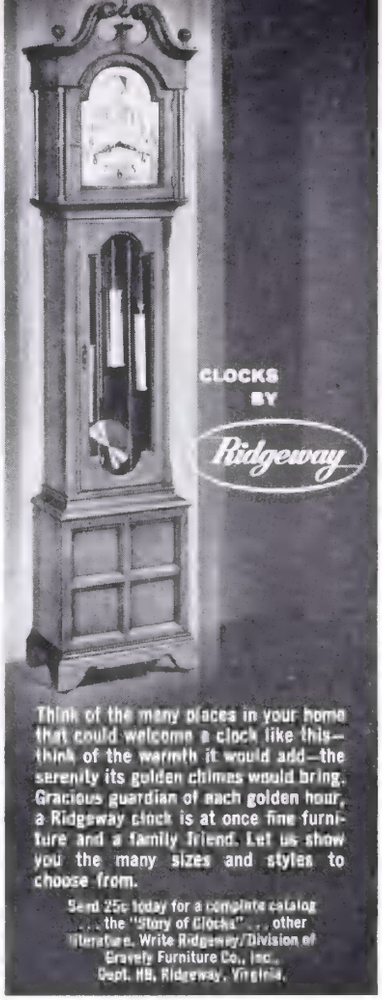
Put chickens, meat side down, in a large flat dish or deep bowl and cover with the following marinade:

¾ cup olive oil
¾ cup dry white wine or dry white vermouth
1½ lemons, thinly sliced
Juice 2½ lemons
4 cloves garlic, split
1½ tablespoons paprika
1½ teaspoons salt

Refrigerate overnight, covered. Preheat broiler to 550° F.

Place chickens, bone side up, on greased broiling pan, and broil about 3 inches from flame, for 12 minutes. Brush frequently with the marinade. Turn, skin side up, give the chickens another good dose of the marinade, and broil about 10 more minutes, brushing with marinade two or three times. Take care not to overcook. Chickens are cooked when juice runs clear when pierced with a fork. Serves 6.

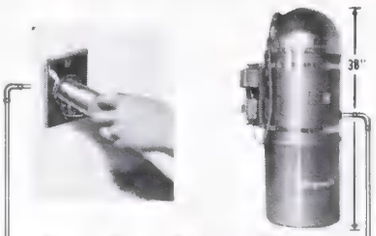
A simple meal that calls only for some good Italian bread, a fresh green salad, and a dry Italian wine, red or white.



Chicken Kiev

This rather extraordinary Russian recipe takes deft handling, but when perfectly made is superb. Have the butcher skin and bone breasts of chicken (1 breast serves 2), leaving the main wing bones attached. Place between two sheets of wax paper, and pound with a mallet or the flat side of a heavy cleaver until thin. Take care not to break the flesh.

Place cold butter (allow 2 tablespoons for each breast) in ice and water. Mold into the shape of a cone, almost as long as the longest part of the flattened breast. Drop back into the ice water until it is absolutely firm again. Sprinkle each breast with salt and pepper, place the cone of butter on top, then roll the chicken meat around butter, overlapping the meat so butter is completely encased. Allow the short wing bone to protrude.



Roll each breast in flour, then in lightly beaten eggs, next in fresh bread crumbs. Dip into the egg a second time, and again in the bread crumbs. Refrigerate for at least an hour—longer, if possible.

Fill a wide, flat pan with salad oil, deep enough to cover the mersed. Heat the oil to 360° F on thermometer. Add the breasts but do not crowd the pan. Cook until golden brown all over, 8 to 10 minutes, depending on thickness of chicken. Drain on paper toweling. Cap the wing bone with a paper frill.

Since Chicken Kiev should be served piping hot, we suggest you don't attempt to make more than 4 or 6 at a time.

Serve with fresh fruit salad dressed with a dollop of commercial sour cream.

Suprêmes de Volaille

A suprêmes is the breast of raw chicken, from one side of the bird, skinned and boned.

Lemon juice
Salt
Pinch white pepper
4 tablespoons butter

Rub the suprêmes lightly with fresh lemon juice and sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Heat the butter in a large ovenproof casserole, then turn the suprêmes in the butter. Butter one side of a sheet of wax paper, lay it on top of the breasts buttered side down. Cover casserole, and place in a preheated 400° F. oven.

Set your timer for 6 minutes, then test suprêmes with your finger. If still soft, put back in the oven for another couple of minutes. Perfectly cooked, the meat should be springy to the touch. It is essential to time the cooking exactly, otherwise you will have tough, dry meat.

Place suprêmes on a warm platter, covered so they will stay moist, and keep warm.

To make the sauce: To the casserole in which suprêmes cooked, add to the juice ¼ cup canned beef broth, and ¼ cup dry white vermouth. Cook down over a high heat until liquid is syrupy. Stir in 1 cup heavy cream and continue to boil until sauce has thickened slightly. Take off the heat, and season to taste with salt, white pepper, and lemon juice. Pour over the suprêmes, sprinkle with minced parsley, and serve immediately to 4.

Serve with buttered artichoke hearts, steamed rice, and a bottle of chilled, dry white wine.

Swedish Chicken

Season boned chicken breasts lightly with salt and freshly ground pepper. Sauté in hot fat

6 tablespoons butter to 2 tablespoons salad oil) only until they egin to take on a bit of color. Add 1 cup good apple cider (for breasts) and a handful of dry urrants. Cover and cook over ery low heat, a mere bubble, until flesh feels springy to the touch, bout 6 to 8 minutes.

Remove to warm serving platter nd keep warm.

Boil down the cider with currants to about half and pour over ne breasts to serve.

Italian Chicken with Sauce Tartare

lour lt epper egg, slightly beaten
cup fine dry bread crumbs cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese cup butter
ry white wine

Have the butcher flatten the hicken as you would for scalpine, to break joints and small ones, and remove as many of the small bones as possible. Mix enough flour, seasoned with salt and pepper, to coat the chicken well. Brush both sides with the beaten egg, then cover with the bread crumbs and cheese, mixed. Chill in the refrigerator for an hour or so.

Combine butter and oil in a pan large enough to accommodate the chicken. When fat begins to sizzle, add the chicken and brown on both sides. Add ¼ cup or so of white wine, cover, and cook over a moderate heat for about 35 minutes. Remove cover and continue cooking another 15 minutes or until chicken is tender when pierced with a fork.

Place chicken on a hot serving platter. Add a little more wine to the pan and cook for a few minutes, stirring in all the brown particles that cling to the pan. Pour over the chicken.

Serve hot with cold Sauce Tartare: Combine 1 cup good tart mayonnaise with a few sprigs parsley, 1 sliver of garlic, 6 sweet pickles, 6 pitted olives, all finely chopped. Season with dried tarragon, crumbled, and freshly ground pepper to taste. Serves 4.

And one of the most thrilling wonderments is that vigorous ltural achievement, the four-art Israel Museum—the Bezalel rt and Judaica Museum, the ronfman Biblical and Archeo-gical Museum, the Billy Rose culpture Garden, designed by ne American Isamu Noguchi for ne outdoor display of Mr. Rose's ifts of modern sculpture, and ne controversial Shrine of the ook, designed by Frederick iesler and Armand Bartos for ne storage and exhibition of the ead Sea Scrolls. (See it on age 124.) Some consider it one f the most poetic pieces of archi-ectural symbolism of this age.

Jerusalem, the sacred city of Christians, Jews, and Mohammed-ns, is sadly divided between Is-ael and its Arab neighbor, ordan. (The Mandelbaum Gate, point of cross-over from Jordan to Israel, is on everyone's sight-seeing schedule.) On the Israel side the past is omnipresent at such shrines as Mount Zion, the tomb of David, the place of the Last Supper, the Monastery of the Dormition, the Monastery of the Cross where, according to legend, the tree of the Cross grew, and at Ein Kerem, birthplace of John the Baptist. But the Old Jerusalem in Jordan, seen as you look out over it from, perhaps, your room in the King David Hotel, or from the heights of Abu Tor Lookout, seems far more aligned with the past than the new Jerusalem in Israel.

As we alighted from the BOAC VC-10 that had brought us from London to the Lod Airport (33 miles from Jerusalem and 14 miles from Tel Aviv), the reception committee seemed to be infiltrated with five-year-old Sabarim, or natives, most of them sporting miniature gun belts and cowboy hats, all with curly-cued moustachios applied with eyebrow pencil. rouged, wore the queenly robe and crown of Hadassah (Esther). It was the springtime Feast of Purim, celebrated with good natured gaiety, an exchange of gifts, marvelous traditional cakes called Haman-taschen, or Haman's pockets, and an adloyada or street parade of elaborate floats and children in fancy dress.

The most poignant, heart-clutching monument in Israel is modern, commemorating the Nazi murders of 6,000,000 Jews in World War II—the Holocaust, as the Jews now call that barbarism. The memorial is the Yad Vashem, the Mount of Remembrance, a sparse set of flat-terraced buildings, one of which is a museum of those terrible times. The memorial itself, of rough-hewn rock, is cavelike, and still, low-ceilinged, dusky, lit only by an everlasting light set in the floor, just bright enough to make legible the names inscribed—Dachau, Auschwitz, Belsen, and their terrible ilk.

Israel includes among its nearly two-and-a-half-million people about 181,000 Moslems and 55,000 Christians, many of whom are Arabs, as is the case in the town of Nazareth. If you're looking for typical Holy Land costumes such as you'd see in Bible pictures, you've got to look to the Arabs or the Bedouins of the Negev. The most picturesque Israeli are the very orthodox sect of Chassidic Jews who pride themselves on scholarship and strict adherence to every jot and tittle of the law. The market in their quarter is worth seeing, especially on Wednesday, when the shopping is done for the Sabbath. These people resent intensely being stared at or photographed.

Go to Sanhedria, where the ancient Israeli judges met, and plant a tree—one of the most welcome obeisances to give this water-hungry, soil-conscious land. It costs less than $2, and the sponsoring department, Keren Kayemeth Leisrael, will foot your cab fare.

The Israel Government Tourist Information Office in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, and Haifa can arrange for you to visit with an Israeli family in their own home (English is widely spoken), and to enjoy an Israeli Folklore Evening where university students dance and sing the old and new favorites and you can join in dancing the hora and learn the words of Shalom aleikem. Visitors' Forums are scheduled in Jerusalem and in Tel Aviv to answer questions.

In a country the size of Massachusetts and with good, if not a great many, roads, distances are not difficult to navigate. There is railroad service from Nahariya south to Beersheba in the Negev desert, and from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem; and Arkia, Israel's internal airline, flies from Tel Aviv across the Negev to Eilat, Israel's southernmost city. Most tourist travel seems to be by bus or taxi. Self-drive cars can be hired and a U.S. driver's license is acceptable. Rules of the road are stringently enforced. A growing country needs all its people alive, in good health. Most public transportation does not operate on the Sabbath—from sundown on Friday to Saturday evening.

Israel's big town is Tel Aviv, the Hill of Spring, and a complete innovation as far as her cities go, not yet sixty years old and without an ancient counterpart, although antique and Arab Jaffa adjoins it. It has become a bona fide, high-rise metropolis, the seat of the country's greatest commercial enterprises (and these cover such things as cut diamonds, textiles, plastics, and minerals from the Dead Sea and the desert), but at the same time it maintains the air of a Mediterranean seaside resort. Its two largest hotels, the Dan and the Sheraton Tel Aviv, right on the water, offer the luxuries of vacation hotels. Sidewalk cafés along Dizengoff Street add to its Continental flavor, and no one here need ever go begging for food for the soul: The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra tours the country but headquarters here; so does the Habimah National Theater; the Frederic Mann Concert Hall is here; this is home to the Helen Rubinstein Museum, Ha'aretz Museum of ancient glass, Tel Aviv Museum of Art and the Jaffa Archeological Museum.

Driving the 44 miles from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv, you can stop off to visit a kibbutz, one of the remarkable group enterprises that started the desert blossoming and put Israel on the road to agricultural success. (Today exports include citrus fruits, eggs, chocolates, and wine.) All members of a kibbutz, or cooperative settlement, share the labor and the nipment, and better education the children, for money is exnged only in dealings outside kibbutz. The idea began in 09 with a few European Zionists o came to Palestine and reimed a swampy land tract. Now re are 228 kibbutzim in Israel, l 80,000 kibbutzniks, as these rkers are affectionately called. ne operate guest houses with enities like swimming pools l tennis courts, where outlandcan get a first-hand undernding of what this cooperative ng is like. Such a kibbutz is aleh Hahamisha in the Judean ls. It's primarily a dairy farm, its paying-guest house now epts Diner's Club cards. Kibz rates in general for one per in a double room run from to $8 a day, with meals.

Haifa, a one-hour drive from Aviv, climbs the slopes of unt Carmel, gardened in olive, ress, and subtropical flowers, rlooking a splendid and busy . The slick, new, thoroughly commands it all, including the golden dome of the international Baha'i Temple and its gardens.

South of Haifa is the ancient Roman capital, Caesarea, with its great amphitheater and Crusader fortress rising out of the sea. North is Acre, with its Arab market and mosque, once a Phoenician port, later a crusader's stronghold. Go east, you are in Tiberias, 780 feet below sea level on the shores of Galilee, now a bathing resort and spa, with Capernaum and the Mount of Beatitudes close by.

In a day's excursion you can make an utterly fascinating round-trip flight from Tel Aviv to Eilat, on the northern tip of the Red Sea. This warmest, driest spot in Israel—rainfall about 1½ inches a year, was King Solomon's port to the world, landing place for the Queen of Sheba, and shipping point for his copper ore. It's a town for the young (average age 26) and tough, rapidly growing, counting on desalinization of sea and radical climate-controlling architecture to make the land livable and productive. For every baby born here a tree is planted. Already it's a port of consequence and a vacation resort.

Monetary unit is the Israel pound, worth about 33 U.S. cents.

Airlines servicing both New York and Israel: El Al Israel Airlines, Air France, Alitalia, BOAC, KLM, Sabena, SAS, Swissair and TWA. Jet time, about 10 hrs. 40 min. Round trip: $798 economy; $1285 first class.

common problem in older ses is that they have no playn or family-room facilities. If are thinking of finishing off asement to fill this need, conr whether it really has what kes. You may be able to move heating plant to one side, but about the lolly columns and steep stairs? An access to the er level from the kitchen is inably unsatisfactory. Ideally, hould be from a rear foyer or way, with a separate entrance ling directly to outdoors.

low much work does it need? er houses may have larger ns, higher ceilings, delightful ches, more closet space, and er values impossible to dupli- at today's labor costs. They also need a new roof, new mbing, a new heating system, something done about the nites.

ou don't have to be an expert make a preliminary judgment ut the condition of a house. If are really interested in a se, ask questions about everyg. Take nothing for granted. size of heating bills will you a clue as to how well the se is insulated. Running water, ticularly upstairs, will reveal er pressure and indicate sigcant facts about the plumbing. f you expect to add air condiing, are the present furnace ts and blower adequate to dle it? Do doors and windows operate well and fit properly? Does the floor bounce as you walk across it? Is there sufficient electric service to handle new appliances you may want to add? Changing from a 60-ampere service to a more adequate 100-ampere electric service will cost at least $150. Does that beautiful fireplace really work? If it smokes and has poor draft, it may be impossible to correct.

You will undoubtedly be looking for your house with the help of a real estate broker. He costs nothing to consult. His services are paid for by the seller. Since you will be relying on his advice, choose him carefully. The National Association of Real Estate Boards is a professional organization pledged to a strict code of ethics. The members, known as Realtors, are qualified to give you an impartial opinion of the merits of a house and its soundness as an investment.

If you have doubts about a house, or your own judgment of it, and want a more thoroughgoing analysis of it than a Realtor can give, enlist the services of an appraiser. Your Realtor can recommend one. An appraiser can give you a complete written report on the physical condition of a house, its value now, and its soundness as a long-term investment. You pay for his services.

Architects can advise you as to its design merit. If a house is structurally sound and has a good floor plan, a simple cosmetic treatment to update its exterior may be all that is needed. If you plan to remove partitions, add a shed dormer on the roof, or make other such major changes, get an estimate of what it will cost before you go so far as to make a down payment.

There is usually more work in designing a remodeling than an architect can reasonably charge for. But it is the kind of labor of love a young architect, eager to get started, will undertake. The old axiom says, if you can tell a house has been remodeled, it's not successful. A good architect may be able to add a contemporary addition to an older house and blend the two so there is a perfect mating. Some larger remodeling contractors have designers on their staff or employ their services. The quality of such design help varies widely, and the more guidance you can contribute the better.

Proportion your investment in remodeling to the house. To put a $10,000 kitchen in a $20,000 house is obviously out of proportion. Nor can you blithely add bedrooms without considering what they do to the scale and function of the rest of the house. The small dining and living rooms that are adequate for a two-bedroom-and-bath house will almost certainly be inadequate for the larger family that will be accommodated when another two bedrooms and bath are added.

If there is any possibility of job transfer to another city, it is important that the house you buy is one that can readily be sold. Finishing off a basement, adding a patio, or even updating the heating system may not create problems. But there can't be major overhauls. If you overdo it, you won't recover your money, and your personal benefits from the improvements will be only short term and then gone.

REMODELING can make a house better than it ever was. If you are planning to add a wing, don't reject a house because it looks high and ungainly. The new wing may give it longer, lower lines. Regrading can hide an old-fashioned high foundation and de-emphasize a boxy look. Before you reject a house because its living room or dining room seems too small, consider the possibility of opening it up to the outdoors with a sliding glass door. A feature like this can visually expand an interior and update its design at minimal cost.

Often the only way to get a choice building site is to buy property with a house already on it. Then the decision must be made: Is it better to tear it down and start from scratch, or is the house worth remodeling?

Extensive rebuilding, such as is necessary in converting an old barn into a house, usually costs more than a completely new building. The added labor is the reason. If you plan to do most or all of the work yourself, and don't figure the cost of your own labor, it can be worth while. The end result of such remodeling may be something of special character that justifies the extra effort and cost to you, but it may not be retrievable on resale.

Sometimes a house is offered at a bargain price because it presents a problem that scares customers away. Come up with an imaginative solution, and you can make a coup. For example, a white elephant no one will touch because of its size may need only to have its top story removed and its existing roof lowered into its new position. It has been done. Such houses have also been cut in half and moved apart to become two houses.

All over the country, thousands of houses in the path of new highways and redevelopment can be bought for as little as a few hundred dollars, if they are moved away. Cost of moving and a new foundation on another site are considerable, but when these and all remodeling costs are added together, the sum is sometimes still a bargain.

Can you afford it? Most people tend to go over their heads in buying a house, but after five years their income usually climbs enough to put them on safe ground again. In the meantime, they may know some uncomfortable moments. Of one thing you can be sure. It will cost more than you think. So don't plunge to the hilt. Leave more than a little for contingencies. Most banks are reluctant to let you invest in a house that costs more than two and a half times your annual income. They sometimes exclude a wife's earnings in computing your income on the grounds that a wife may not want to continue working indefinitely.

In buying an older house you will usually need more money as a down payment, as well as cash for remodeling. A bank may be expected to give 75-percent financing, or $22,500 on a $30,000 house. If you plan to spend $6,000 or $7,000 for remodeling, the thing to do is get an open-end mortgage. The bank will then base the amount of its financing on the total expenditure, but the improvements must be completed within a reasonably short period. It can't drag on and on.

YOU can get a Home Improvement Loan for remodeling, but the term is apt to be short (five years) and the interest higher. The payments can easily become burdensome. It's much easier to have the remodeling costs included in your 20-year mortgage.

Getting started. Take a look at all the market offers that approximate your requirements. It will help crystallize your wants. After a time you will find there is a thread of similarity running through all the houses you see. It's simple then to decide upon the extra features you want in a house. You can now concentrate on finding a house that either incorporates them or can readily be modified to include them. You'll be prepared to make a quick decision on any house you inspect. ■

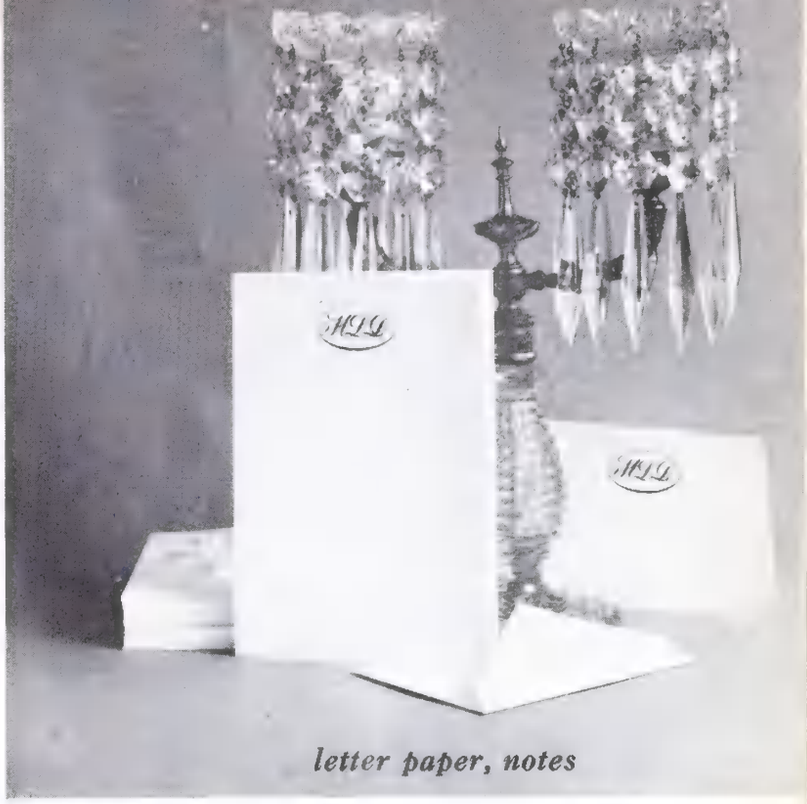
SETS & PHOTOGRAPHY · LIONEL [illegible] · JEWELRY BY SCHREINER · GOWN BY COUNTESS ALEXANDER



And the roon

Walk in shadowed sunshine: a fleeting play of rose and blue nuzzling gold. Clo your world in the rippling radiance of an ancient Kirman design born again as Karas recalls its elusive loveliness. And power looms it into an 8'8" x 12' rug in wool for $41

Why these two of all the Karastans you might have had? They just make you feel sort of elegant.

informals

calling cards

Why they all belong in your paper trousseau

Invitations, Announcements—these proclaim the momentous event to your relatives and friends. We recommend a superb quality of paper (we make none other).

In addition, Crane has created lovely stationery conveniences to help you succeed, gracefully, in your new role as the social head of the household. We've designed them in a wide variety of styles, colors, weights, weaves and finishes so that you may choose stationery that reflects your taste as it makes known your new name. All have a notable excellence, a luxurious texture achieved by using one-hundred-percent rag fibers, and each fills a special need.

Letter Paper and Notes. The need for these is immediate, for you'll want to write your "thank-yous" promptly and graciously on lovely stationery. And, of course, letters and notes with your new monogram or address are rewarding ways of keeping in touch with family and friends.

Informals. You'll soon be entertaining as husband and wife—and using handsome "informals" for the invitations. You'll use them to reply to similar invitations, too, and for many kinds of notes.

Calling Cards. You'll probably find these the most versatile of your stationery conveniences—for you'll use them in gifts of every kind, for introductions and brief messages.

Your Crane dealer is an authority on paper "etiquette" and engraving. He can be helpful in the selection of the paper and correct form for your invitations and announcements, and explain in greater detail the uses of Crane stationery conveniences. It is important to plan your paper trousseau well ahead, because of the time required for engraving and because the invitations should be sent out to arrive at least three weeks before the wedding. Why the softest Kroehler sofa can't give you a hard time

Sofa and chair comfort depends entirely upon the pitch of the seat and back and the way they form an angle of relaxed rest under your weight.

This demands "teamwork under pressure" in everything from basic frame design to cushions to springs and the way they're suspended.

Springs especially are important. They have to be soft enough to yield comfortably (but don't confuse "softness" with comfort!) yet not so soft that they let your weight unbalance the pitch. When that happens your body is forced into stresses and strains. You might not even notice them with a few quick sit-downs, but in longer sitting you squirm, fidget, and "can't seem to get comfortable." In short, your soft sofa gives you a hard time.

This can't happen with Kroehler sofas or chairs. They don't force you, they hold you—in Balanced Comfort. They keep the correct pitch correct with the best, perfectly tempered spring steel money can buy. Remember that term, Balanced Comfort. It's one of the reasons people buy more Kroehler sofas and chairs than any other brand.

*Suggested retail prices may vary slightly in different areas due to varying transportation costs and fabrics selected.

Floor Show

Now, Harvard brings bed frames out of hiding. With new Golden Gliders and Sculptured Leg Columns that carry decor all the way to the floor. Gone is the "hardware" look that interior designers tolerated but never dared show.

No frame ever made a smarter move. Or an easier one. Because Golden Gliders distribute the weight over a bearing surface 37% larger than ordinary glides. Result: beds move effortlessly. And unlike casters, Golden Gliders leave your nicest carpet, tile, linoleum and wood floors unmarked, unmarred.

Now, no other frame deserves to set foot in your bedroom. When Harvard's new Golden Gliders with Sculptured Leg Columns perform so beautifully.

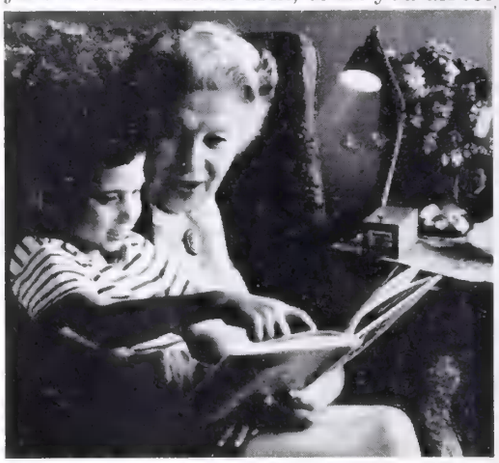
Isn't it? So there must be good reasons why Tensor is the fastest-selling lamp in America.

The best reason of all is that bright light was never this handy before . . . the equivalent of a 200-watt conventional desk lamp, right on the spot where you need it, in places where you simply couldn't conveniently get bright light before.

But the reasons start when you first see a Tensor. It has the appeal of the last puppy left in a pet shop window—you just want to take the funny little thing home and love it. Once home with you, it's uncanny how many ways the charm and convenience of the Tensor lamp start to enhance your life.

It stands cozily by your bedside to direct reading light on your book, not in your spouse's eyes. Comes in close for desk work, for sewing without squinting, for manicuring, making up, hobbying. Stands in the smallest spot, bends every which way, to be where you need it—for painting, jigsaw puzzling, tinkering, piano playing, lost button hunting.



Tensor gives the whitest, brightest light you'll find indoors—shows colors better than any fluorescent or ordinary incandescent lamp. And it's concentrated in a controlled beam for your own personal use. What a pleasure!

Take Tensor anywhere, all around the house, and all over the map (it folds to pocket-size for traveling . . . and what motel ever had a proper reading light?)

You'll find that Tensor is homely for a reason. For instance, that's a square, honest base because it houses a square, honest transformer. (It also gives the lamp a very steady stance.) The original Tensor transformer inside is a minor engineering miracle that makes Tensor 25% brighter. That awkward-looking arm articulates just like the human arm, to let you direct the light more easily. We've thrown in a swivel head, hi-lo switch, keyhole slot for wall mounting...even an extra-long cord.

Need another reason? The Tensor Lifetime Model 5975 (shown) carries a Lifetime Guarantee for repair and replacement through any of our 80 service centers throughout the country. Can there be anything more telling than that?

Take home a Tensor lamp. It has so many winsome ways you'll inevitably begin to think of having several around the house.

Only be sure you choose Tensor, the homely little lamp. It's for you.

HOME IS FOR INDIVIDUALITY

HOME IS FOR HERITAGE®

There's no place like home for self-expression. But alas those endless opportunities can be endlessly frustrating. Just where does one begin? A helpful hint: many professional decorators get their plans under way by selecting one or more "character" pieces of fine furniture. The Heritage Furniture Collections abound in very special pieces; magnificent consoles, chinas, buffets, cocktail tables, chairs and sofas. Such Heritage pieces are designed to lend authority and distinction to every room. Each possesses that subtle but recognizable something extra in styling, detail, or finish that sets apart "the best" from the merely "good". Remember, too, that the very rightness of the Heritage furniture you buy today is your assurance that it will be compatible with the decorating plans you may have many years from now.

The "Grand Tour" Collection. This exciting collection adds to the pleasures of connoisseurship the certainty of Heritage quality and value. In The "Grand Tour" Collection, great individuality is achieved by interpreting a wide range of classic continental designs in an equally wide variety of woods and finishes. For your "Grand Tour" catalogue send 50¢ to Box 12, Heritage Furniture Company, High Point, North Carolina.

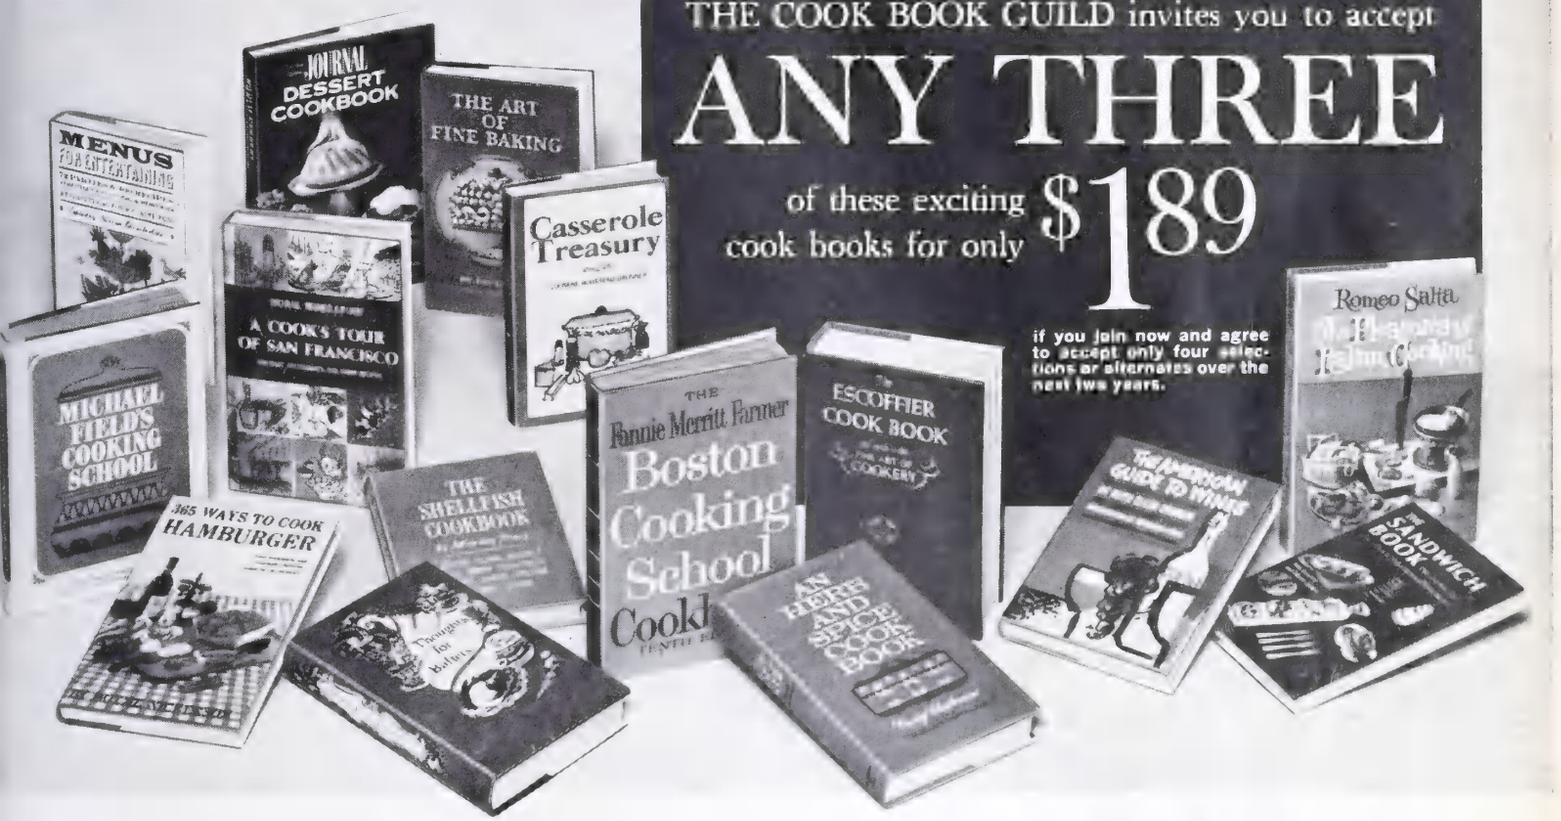
AN EXCITING OPPORTUNITY FOR EVERY WOMAN WHO LOVES TO HEAR...

"Where did you ever learn to cook like this?"



IF YOU LOVE to hear your guests rave about your blackberry cobbler or chicken scampi . . . to "visit" other parts of the world by fixing Danish lobster or beef Sukiyaki . . . to compare recipes and read about secrets of famous hostesses and chefs — then you are invited to accept this offer from The Cook Book Guild, formed to seek out the world's most exciting cook books and make them available to members at impressive savings.

If you enjoy cooking – and compliments – THE COOK BOOK GUILD invites you to accept of these exciting cook books for only $1.89

if you join now and agree to accept only four selections or alternates over the next two years.

DO YOU ENJOY thrilling your family and guests with your cooking? Have you found that one cook book has the best recipe for lamb curry while another has the best veal scaloppine? Do you like browsing through cook books to find interesting new dishes . . . new ways of serving . . . the secrets of famous chefs? If so, a wealth of delightful experiences awaits you in these marvelous books. They have been specially selected for this offer from the world's most popular, most useful cook books.

And if you really love compliments, wait until you try some of the recipes! For example: next time you serve chicken, try such exotic variations as tandoori chicken, roasted with a yogurt marinade . . . chicken Dijon prepared with a mustard and sour cream sauce (all from An Herb and Spice Cook Book). Or imagine greeting your guests with the fresh-baked aroma of orange angel cake, made with Cointreau (from Ladies' Home Journal Dessert Cookbook) . . . or surprising your family with poppy seed bars (from The Art of Fine Baking).

This is just a sample of the pleasures the Cook Book Guild offers you. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's outstanding cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients . . . how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll learn budget-stretching tips, family and regional cooking secrets. Delicious ways to diet. Ways to save time, trouble.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Book News, which also contains an "Editor's Choice" recipe. You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you accept, you may choose a FREE bonus book from a list of books on cooking, gardening, decorating, etc.

A houseful of value...all "501"

The three carpets in these rooms are of Du Pont nylon certified "501". That's where the similarity ends. One costs $7.95, another $10.95 and another $15.95 per square yard.*

Many factors determine the price of a carpet: pile content, density, fabric construction, styling, carpet manufacturing know-how of an experienced mill. Many factors also determine how much money you put into a carpet: your own color and design preferences, where the carpet will be used, and how much wear it will get over the years. Seek the advice of a reputable dealer.

No matter how much or how little you decide to invest in carpets for the various rooms in your house, any carpet of Du Pont nylon certified "501" has passed the five rigorous Du Pont tests of quality; tests for fiber content, pile weight, pilling, light-fastness and backing. Whatever the price range, the "501" Certification Mark assures you of excellent value.

This electric clock thermostat turns the heat down at night and up in the morning for comfortable temperature 24 hours a day.

Why not forget the inconvenience of turning the temperature up and down, up and down, day after day. Enjoy instead the comfort and pleasure of having a Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat on your wall.

Set this handsome beauty just once—then night after night you'll sleep cool (this is the way to sleep comfortably)—and morning after morning you'll wake-up warm (no shivering or cold floors when you get out of bed).

And, then there's economy! Your clock thermostat can pay for itself with savings in your heating bill.

Call your heating cooling dealer today, and sleep cool tonight and every night—automatically with Honeywell. Ask him about the Honeywell Electric Clock Thermostat for heating or the one designed for controlling both heating and cooling.

P.S. We've also got a model you turn down manually, that returns the temperature to its higher setting later, at a pre-selected time. Working couples will like the way it saves fuel while they're away, yet welcomes them back to a warm house. They'll like the sleep cool—wake-up warm feature, too. This model is called the Semi-Automatic Day-Nite Round Thermostat.

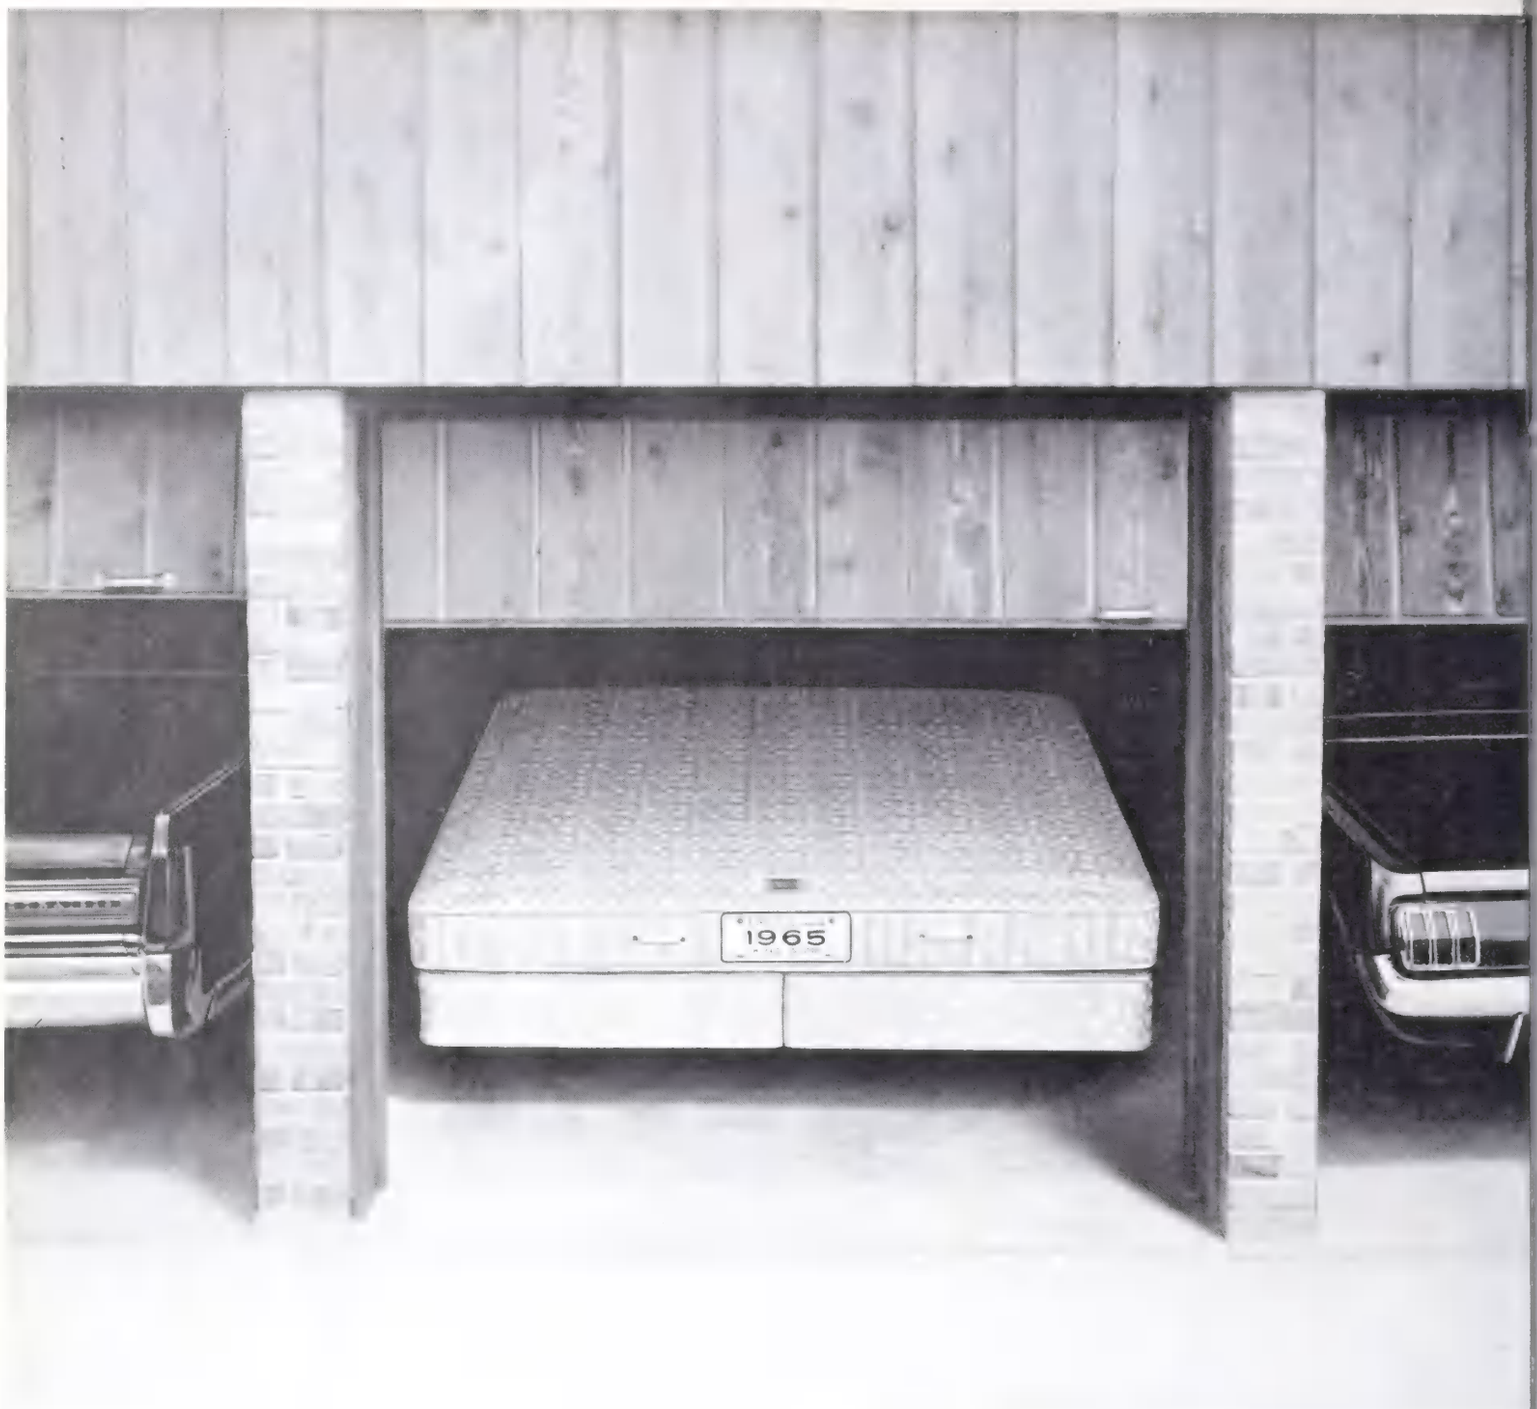
spiration: Historic Poland

Dining room floor: Montina Corlon

Delicate beauty and a classic tradition are hallmarks of Polish decorating—and of a new floor from Armstrong: Montina Vinyl Corlon.

Montina is made of stone-like chips of vinyl veined with color. They are set in deep, translucent vinyl to create intriguing, pebbly texture. This textured surface has a practical advantage, too. It helps hide scuffs and heel marks.



Montina comes in wide rolls and creates a floor with scarcely a seam from wall to wall. And you can put contrasting colors in custom designs.

Montina Corlon can be used anywhere in the home—even in most downstairs playrooms, directly over the concrete.

Decorator's Diary

Across the desk, three pairs of almost identical gentian-blue eyes stared at me with such trustfulness that I suddenly wondered what I had let myself in for. The eyes belonged to my old friend Lynn Baxter, and her twin, just-married daughters, and they were there because I had promised to give them, in effect, a short comprehensive course in wallpaper and how to put it to work.

It all came about because Amy Baxter Brown and Alice Baxter Brady, who still shop together even if they've long since stopped dressing alike, made the simultaneous discovery that wallpaper is a mighty fascinating material to solve decorating problems with. They passed this news on to their mother, who for some unknown reason had never before investigated the subject. Now having once savored the pure joy of leafing through sample books, all three are so thoroughly intoxicated on wallpaper that I have to keep reminding them that an unpatterned surface isn't such a bad thing to have every once in a while.

"It takes a bit of know-how," I remember saying, "and a certain restraint to use wallpaper to its best advantage."

To which Lynn replied, "Well, you're the doctor. Why don't you give us a briefing session some Saturday morning?"

So, surrounded by rolls of sample lengths and particularly by some selections of stock patterns I had picked up at the Wallpaper Council, I launched into my wallpaper seminar for young and not-so-young ladies.

"Historically, wallpaper started life in the English-speaking world in the early 16th Century as a novel substitute for fabric wall hangings. It was called 'paperhanging' or 'paper tapistry,' and the people who made it were called 'paperhanging makers.' The earliest known wallpaper in England was uncovered in Christ's College of Cambridge University. Its date is rather certain because it was backed by printed matter known to have been published in 1509. The pattern was the stylized pomegranate that certainly had its origin in the East, and was very big in Renaissance fabric patterns, and still is a tried and true damask pattern in cloth or paper.

"Wallpaper as a material was a smashing success from the start. Our old friend Samuel Pepys in the 17th Century refers to wallpaper as 'counterfeit damask,' describing the new-fangled wall hanging in his wife's closet or boudoir. The chambers of the great were lined with the most elegant Chinoiserie, patterned with the birds, flowers, and often people of the Orient, painted by hand in China (where paper was invented, by the way) and imported at considerable expense by people who felt they deserved the finest.

"It has come down through the years with many changes. By the late 19th Century the English had done some very odd things with it, printing up batches of it to commemorate the Queen's Jubilee, the Prince of Wales's visit to India, or the 1862 Kensington Exposition. The pre-Raphaelites and William Morris thought to save it from such depths of bad taste with patterns of their own. Meantime, design has run the gamut from what was called 'speckled porridge' oatmeal patterns to the supposedly noncommittal patterns that suddenly assumed grotesque facial expressions when they got on the wall. The English, of course, have no corner on that kind of eye trickery which poorly designed wallpaper can produce, but Reginald Gardiner, one of their brightest comedians, attained fame and glory imitating it.

"French wallpapers from the start had a delicacy and elegance in keeping with the French tradition in furniture and textiles, and some of their hand-printed papers are considered works of art.

"Anyone bitten by the wallpaper bug should make a point of seeing the collections in certain museums of the world—surely, the Victoria and Albert in London, the Deutsches-Tapeten Museum in Kassel, Germany, the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam, Holland, and Cooper Union Museum in New York.

"American wallpaper started out following in the footsteps of the elegant early English and French taste, and the grand homes of the prosperous New England sea captains and Southern planters have left many evidences of this. Many of these documents have been reproduced. But as with most everything else where design is concerned, Americans are the fortunate inheritors of many different genres of wallpaper design, but we have always given them a certain native twist of our own.

"The technological changes in wallpapers have been great. Now you can get it prepasted, pretrimmed and even peelable, meaning that you—or your friendly paperhanger—can put it on the wall, enjoy it as long as you've a mind to, then rip it off as neatly as you'd skin a banana. There is hardly a commercial wallpaper today that doesn't have a special finish to help it thwart stains or hard knocks. It is usually a plastic composition, or a bona-fide top skin of plastic, and there are vinyl printing inks that lock in the colors, keep them from fading. And, astonishingly enough, it seems that the more wondrous the improvements on these plasticized papers, the more reasonable all this extra service becomes.

"You, Alice, could hardly do better than to study the Wall-O-Vin sample book when you decide the colors you want in your bathroom—it's a new vinyl, by Columbus Coated Fabrics, backed with paper, easy to install and just as proof against steam and spray as any bathroom wallcovering needs be—and you get 36 feet of it, 27 inches wide, already trimmed, for a good deal less than $3. I shouldn't like to influence you too much, but if I were doing it, I'd choose the black-and-white 'Hamilton' stripe for the ceiling and the charcoal-on-white blossoms of 'Springtime' for the walls.

"For some reason lost in the mists of time, wallpaper is priced by the single roll, although you can rarely buy a single roll because the paper is usually packed in double rolls. Generally, wallpapers come 20½ inches wide untrimmed and 18 inches wide trimmed, with 16 yards to the double roll. Using every inch of this, you could cover 72 square feet of wall surface, but realistically, what with having to match patterns and being sure that the pattern repeats in the proper places, the surface covered by a double roll will be closer to 60 square feet. Large-scale repeats naturally take more paper than small, nondirectional, all-over patterns, which need no maneuvering.

"Springtime" and "Hamilton Stripe," Wall-O-Vin

"Wallpaper isn't always patterned, of course—there are wonderful solid colors and metallic tea papers and subtly mottled prints and grass cloth. Those which are either textured or look textured are out-and-out lifesavers when you're dealing with old walls, because they cover up cracks or bumps in the plaster or obvious seams in the wallboard. But most of the time a paper is chosen because of its pattern. Then, to make the most of it, you need contrasting relief in another surface somewhere in line with the eye. For instance, a bedroom done in a flowery pattern paper will look prettier as you look in at it from the hall if the hallway itself is either a solid color or a bold stripe related to the bedroom in color. A flowery hallway would kill the effect.

"You must think about scale, too. In general, a bold, large pattern calls for a large, boldly scaled, high-ceilinged room. Small rooms are best done in small patterns. And one of the most effective ways to cope with any room which is broken up by too many jogs, mismatched woodwork, and many openings in the doors and win-

Owens-Corning Fiberglas makes the Beta yarn, not the fabrics or the bedspreads

A Fiberglas* Beta* bedspread is so beautiful you'd never let anything happen to it.

But it's nice to know you can.

Accidents will happen, but a damp cloth will wipe it clean—if it's a Fiberglas Beta bedspread. Spill, spot, drip, drop—and relax. Fiberglas Beta bedspreads machine wash, never need ironing, won't wrinkle, stretch or shrink out of fit. Firesafe too. That's how Fiberglas Beta bedspreads stay as beautiful as they start—new and fresh-looking year after year after year. See them in leading department stores in your city.

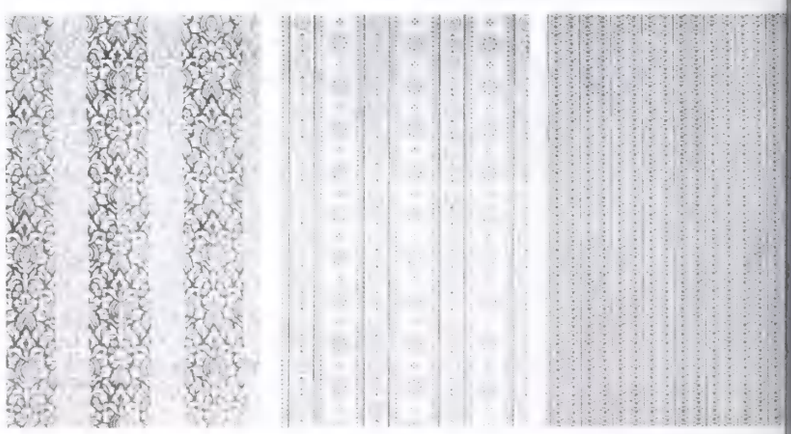
dows is to wallpaper the whole thing completely in one pattern, covering ceiling, door frames, and window frames as well as walls. For this you need a nondirectional pattern—one that has no apparent right side up—so that you won't have bouquets lying on their sides or standing on their heads.

"Naturally, most people choose wallpaper to paper all four walls of a room. But there are times when you can get great effect by doing only one wall in pattern—creating a special background for, say, a bed or a buffet or a sofa, letting the wallpaper act like a hanging, as it did in the old days. Even lining the inside of a corner cabinet or an open hutch with wallpaper can make an effective splash of pattern and color in an otherwise unpatterned room. Or you may, in a dark little dormer room, keep all walls white and paper just the sides of the dormer area with pattern—like a make-believe drapery that saves space and doesn't cut out light.

"Another trick with a dormer room, especially if it has a floor-to-ceiling slanted wall, is to paper the walls in stripes. This is based on the old truth that stripes applied vertically will increase a room's apparent height.



"On the other hand, stripes used horizontally tend to lower the look of a room, and in a vast barn of a room, tend to pull the walls in visually, and make the room seem cozier.

"Just as an aside, you've never seen a more exciting collection of stripes in all sorts and sizes than are now on the market. Birge, for instance, has a classic two-inch-wide white stripe, in an incredible range of color choice, which is the kind of smartness you could once get only in very high-style, expensive wallpaper lines.

"There are some marvelous striped wallpapers in which the stripes themselves are patterned, and so placed that anyone with a good sharp scissors could clip out strips of stripes and apply them in a hundred different ways as ornamental devices—to frame a mirror, to pick out the panels in a door as if the paper were molding, to apply to a window cornice to make a decorative valance, to use as edging for the panels of a standing screen—even just as ornament for a trinket box or a waste basket or a Kleenex holder. Three patterns like this come to mind—all from Birge, a company that seems specially stripe happy: 'Sturbridge Stripe'—trim and innocent, with that curious old-fashionedness that looks crisply up-to-date today; 'Umbra,' which is striped in three tones of one color and surprinted in gold in a kind of plushy Victorian way; and 'Madras,' a triple lacy stripe of unlikely colors such as lavender, turquoise, and jade green on a black ground, one that might be as modern as Oriental.

"A bold and luscious striping of outsize fruits—raspberries, gooseberries, plums, grapes, and cherries mingling with vine leaves, tulips, and other flora of the artist's imagination—is what Van Luit calls 'Kensington Stripe,' and is clearly what your grandmother would call a dining-room paper. But it's begging to be used by someone who appreciates over-scaled subtlety and wants an unusual kitchen-cum-sitting room. Colors are remarkable—pomegranate red, with rusty green leaves and mango-gold flowers, all on a white, slightly textured ground—a paper-backed vinyl that makes you marvel at the magnificent turn practicality can take these days. If it were mine, I'd be inclined to clip out some of the stripes and appliqué them to the drawer fronts of a white painted sideboard, and certainly, if I had one, I'd paint an old spindle-back rocker white, paste this kind of fruit on its headrest, and give it a mango-colored seat pad.

"Wallpaper borders these days can be absolutely delicious, in any kind of subject matter from nursery nonsense to the most la-de-da formality, from fake fringed awning scallops to Louis XVI rosebud festoons and Regency swags, from a couple of inches in depth to 18 or 20 inches. Some come prepasted.

"Since wallpaper borders started life as finishing trims to plain or less floridly patterned walls, we tend to visualize them banding the ceiling line. But actually they can be applied in many other ways. Now there are many which might be vertical panels in themselves, either to create pretty stripes of ornament or to simulate moldings. Lennon's 'Daisyland Border' is one of these—a pattern of sunny, summery yellows and greens which may run vertically or horizontally, as an overall wall covering in a broad floral stripe, or clipped apart, with each section applied as a narrower border. United's 8-inch prepasted 'Laurel Border' is another, especially stylish in a Regency way, and very expensive-looking in green or charcoal-on-white. It is designed with its own border top and bottom—a $1\frac{3}{4}$-inch strip of stylized leaf pattern, which can be clipped off and used as a border by itself. And one of the most beguiling of the floral borders, so flowery you can almost smell the make-believe garden it comes from, is Imperial's 'Pavilion'. It's prepasted, and designed to be used in conjunction with Imperial's pretty pink-and-white stripe sidewall paper, although it would be a smasher bordering and striping walls of leaf green, white, tomato red, or delphinium blue—these being colors prominent in its lush pattern.

"Most people don't pay half enough mind to the idea of wallpaper as a furniture slipcover—not for upholstered furniture, of course, but for case pieces—bureaus, tables, desks. A chest of drawers that has seen better days—like the funny ones Grandma Baxter used to have in the bedrooms in the country—can be made unbelievably stylish if you paper it with, say, a metallic paper and give it Oriental hardware. If you wanted to be more outrageous still, you could use a peelable paper, like Sunworthy's vinyl 'Marble,' which of course was originally destined for bath, kitchen, or hall. Suppose you wanted a cool, green marble look for a summer-time room and a finish that wouldn't show ring marks from summer's cold drinks, you'd just give a chest or a coffee table its marble slipcover and when the leaves fall, peel it off, give it a new wallpaper overcoat, or administer a lick of paint.

"This trick of furniture refinishing with wallpaper opens up all sorts of possibilities, especially if you investigate the many wallpapers that have matching or pattern-correlated fabrics. It's amusing, especially in a guest room or a dining room or a room that is not usually occupied for long at a time, to match walls, furniture, draperies, and upholstery. The French, incidentally, do this often and with great flair. One must remember that a little of this kind of fantasy goes a long way—one room to a house, say. But the formula is worth consideration any time you look around and feel that your home-furnishing life needs a pick-me-up.

"Marble," Sunworthy

"Covering standing screens has long been one of wallpaper's fortes. Matched panels of scenic paper are naturals for this, although they tend to be expensive. Even so, considering how little is needed to get a sensational effect, you might consider it a bargain, depending, of course, on your budgetary point of view. With the recurrence as a decorative status symbol of fine Japanese metallic screens—usually antique and getting scarcer all the time—it would not be the dullest thing you ever did to invest in a very fine metallic wallpaper and cover a screen with it, thereby creating a potential antique for the pleasure of future generations as well as a spot of bright elegance in a dining room, for instance. Here the screen might soft-pedal the presence of the kitchen door. Or in a foyerless apartment, a screen might create privacy by shielding the living room from the front door.

view of some of the master's familiar poster art and his famous aficionados of the Can Can. It's plastic treated and made to order for a small area, like a bar or a powder room, but its scale suggests it as a good screen cover.

"While the grand manner, large-scale wallpaper patterns are most likely to catch your eye, let me commend to you the allover, sweet little orderly patterns like Strahan's 'Jacintha' and 'French Knot.' Similarly, on the quaint and calico-flowered side are Birge's scattering of tiny blossoms called 'Melanie,' and the country-kitchen, evenly spaced flowerets on 'Très Jolie,' by Trimz, another plasticized and prepasted paper. These suggest one of the prettiest amenities of all—the lining of bureau drawers or cabinet innards so that you're in for a pleasant visual surprise each time you open a drawer or door. And, in this day of op art, may I suggest to you, Amy, that you get some fun out of that staid old French Provincial armoire of yours by lining it with Stockwell's 'Cinema,' which couldn't be put in a less likely but still more appropriate place."—M. PLAYER-PIANO FUN—FINE PIANO PLEASURE

PHOTOGRAPH COPYRIGHT 1965 BY ARLINE STRONG

By KATHRYN AINSWORTH GROVER

In trying to decide whether or not to allow the children to have one more pet, you always make three mistakes. The first, of course, is the obvious one: you look at the creature. Now perhaps this isn't true of all mothers, but with me it's the worst step of all. Be it hamster or kitten, bird, or horned toad, dog—or even a little jumping grasshopper named Twisty (don't laugh; it can happen), one look and I'm in trouble already. One look and I fall helplessly in love.

I must admit this isn't always as true in the case of worms, and the aforementioned grasshopper, beetles, moths, and all those little winged and crawling beings as it is with furry or feathered things. I have learned this: When a child comes in with his hands clasped carefully together and calls excitedly, "Oh, look, Mother! I want to show you something," I do have the presence of mind to say, "Point it the other way; then I'll look at it." Anyone who has ever had a startled flying Twisty hit him in the face can see the wisdom of this maneuver.

When the child enters the picture, mistake number two follows mistake number one as easily as any fresh-baked cookies disappear from the cookie jar. You look at the child looking at the creature, whatever it may be. What mother in the world can resist her youngster's wonderment and enrapture over some special treasure of his own?

"Isn't it cute, Mother?" (I've had to learn, and believe me it's taken broad understanding on my part, that everything is "cute.")

"Look at those tiny legs." (Or wings. Or tail. Or whatever might fit the case.) "Look, Mother, he likes me! See, he likes me! Oh, please let me keep him. I'll take care of him all by myself." He will, too, for the whole first week that we have him. After that it's my turn. "He won't be any trouble at all, Mother. He can sleep on the back porch." (Translated, that means on my bed chewing my new shoes.)

"All he needs is a carrot or some lettuce." (Translated, that means and a salt lick, rabbit pellets, fresh water each day, and a cage to keep the dog away.)

"I'll keep him right in this box." (Translated, that means I have to look out for the little fellow to make sure that he isn't mistreated, suffocated, or baked alive. And the day he's lost in the house, run the vacuum carefully and watch where I step.)

"All they do is swim around and eat a little fish food each day." (Translated, that means all I do is scrub the tank, rescue the fish from the drain, and advertise to the neighbor children that they may have free guppies just for the asking.)

After you've looked at the creature, and looked at your offspring looking lovingly at his prize, the third step is as inevitable as the fact that a new puppy will make puddles on the floor. You say those fatal words, "Well, we'll try it for a week and see." And you're caught in a trap of your own making.

After one night, he has been named, given a bed, fed, and exhibited to the whole neighborhood. Each child rushes home to his own mother and says, "Why can't I have a (insert appropriate word: dog, snake, turtle, chameleon, parakeet, monkey, etc.)? Kenny's mother let him have one."

And then the little beastie, whatever he may be, is as firmly ensconced as a member of the household as is any one of the family. To part with him now would be unthinkable. To sell him would be insensible. To give him away would be impossible. (Try any other mother on the block if you don't think so.) Congratulations. You just reached the third level with flying colors. You are a perfectly normal mother.

The reasons for keeping or getting a new pet are varied and remarkable. I once heard a little boy who lived next door to us plead with his mother to let him have one of the neighbors' new kittens for his very own.

"It will keep me company, and then I won't be so lonely. I have no one to play with." He had four brothers and one sister. Of course, I thought it was quite a good argument, but then I was the neighbor with the new kittens.

Even grown-ups join the group. I once heard a man who wanted his boy to have a dog say to his wife who wanted their boy to have a cat, "Who ever heard of the old saying 'a boy and his cat?'" Which I also thought was a pretty good argument. Now they have a cat and a dog, but the boy wants a parakeet.

I have been told worms would be good watchdogs and lizards would help control the flies, but I realize you need to be halfway acquiescent even to get into such an argument in the first place.

There is one pet that I will praise as the prize of all pets. I would advise any mother who is being harassed by her offspring to buy him a pet of his very own that this is the best solution available. A tortoise. It can be kept in a fence-enclosed yard. It will feed itself happily on the garden greenery. It drinks water only occasionally. (This is terribly convenient, as that is exactly how often a child remembers to water his pet if not constantly reminded by his mother.) It is neither messy nor smelly, unlike a wide range of animal and insect life that we have thus far encountered. And—blessing of blessings—it makes no noise. It doesn't crow, bark, howl, quack, or neigh. You can leave it alone for days at a time, and it is perfectly self-sufficient. It will not bite, scratch, or lick you. It won't jump up and tear your nylons. It won't claw your furniture. It even hibernates during the winter. What more could a mother ask?

A tortoise is a jewel in a hard-shell case. Even in 1789 this was recognized. Gilbert White said in the Natural History and Antiquities of Selborne, "The tortoise, like other reptiles, has an arbitrary stomach as well as lungs, and can refrain from eating as well as breathing for a great part of the year."

If you must get a pet for your pet, get a tortoise. We have one. Of course, we also have a dog, a rabbit, two birds, a horned toad, and a big, white, noisy duck. He used to be a cute, little, yellow ball of down that only uttered an occasional plaintive "cheep, cheep." We have a continual seasonal supply of caterpillars, spiders, June bugs, night crawlers—and we also have, obviously, me. A mother who can't say no. Some day they will have gone too far even for me, however. Then I shall say, as Shakespeare said in The Winter's Tale, "I am gone forever." (Exit, pursued by a bear.) ■

By ELSIE LOUISE SCULTHORP
Landscape Architect

The cool, fresh look of the windflower, or Japanese anemone, is a welcome boon to any garden from September until heavy frost. It's a perennial, grows from 2 to 4 feet tall; comes in white, and shades of pink to rose. Showy stamens are bright yellow.

We have become accustomed to rather forlorn-looking flower gardens late in the season. This is not as it should be, and it may come as a surprise to many gardeners, particularly those who are beginners, to find that we can have a wonderful display of flowers until early in November and, with luck, a little longer than that.

Usually the flowers still blooming this late in the season are chrysanthemums and some straggling Michaelmas daisies, but the end-of-season floral display need not be so limited. The bloom-time of your garden can be prolonged, and you can have plenty of color there until late in the fall. Of course, this doesn't just happen. It takes careful planning and some searching through nurseries and catalogs for late-blooming plants. But I think you'll find the results worth the trouble.

Even when the weather begins to grow chilly and there's the promise of frost in the air, the garden can still be colorful in seeming defiance of the coming winter. Some of our loveliest days are in October, and the garden can be as bright as the weather. How pleasant it is in the autumn to cut an armful of colorful, fragrant flowers for the house. This is the generous reward for your careful planning and work earlier in the year.

Compact, low-growing chrysanthemums such as this one (variety Star Bright) are much more rewarding for most gardeners than the tall exhibition types that have to be staked, disbudded, and carefully tended to bring into bloom. The bush type flowers abundantly with little care.

Cutting your own flowers so late in the season seems to prolong the feeling and pleasure of summer. And, in a way, it shortens the effect of the long winter months. It seems to me that every day we can capture from that cold and dreary season is worth the effort.

Eupatorium, mistflower, hardy ageratum.

Here's a robust hardy perennial, with creeping roots. It's a delight to see it grow, but keep it in bounds or it may take possession of your garden. The flowers are a lovely soft blue that is perfect in the late fall with yellow flowers. It will grow practically anywhere, in half shade or in full sun. It blooms from August until frost and is fine for cutting.

Michaelmas Daisy, hardy aster.

These provide a splash of lovely color in the late-summer and fall garden that cannot be surpassed. They flower profusely in a great range of colors including white, peach, pink, deep pink, lightest pale blue, powder blue, blue-violet, wistaria-blue, bright red, rich dark claret red—every color except yellow. Therefore, they are a fine foil for chrysanthemums and all yellow autumn flowers.

A planting of related colors, rather than contrasting, is magnificent in the autumn garden. The new varieties are not leggy, but of medium height. There are also some very appealing dwarf kinds.

These plants like to spread in every direction and need to be watched. They thrive anywhere and will endure any rough treatment. They can be grown with other perennials in the mixed border or planted with just lilies or tritomas.

Solidago, goldenrod.

The old familiar country goldenrod has been greatly improved. There are now many fine kinds available. One of the best has stems about 20 inches high, topped with many gently cascading yellow plumelike flower sprays. The flowers last a long time. If you live on the beach where the seaside goldenrod (S. sempervirens) flourishes, you can transplant clumps, and they will make themselves perfectly at home in your garden. They provide a showy display of deep yellow flowers through September and later.

Kniphofia, tritoma, torch lily, red-hot-poker, flame flower.

An outstanding plant, with orange, yellow, red, or white flower heads of impressive beauty. A well-tended plant grows to about 3 feet tall and sends up ten or more flower spikes at one time. They bloom from July until stopped by frost. This is one of the most showy of border perennials. The flower spikes are wonderful for cutting. In open, sunny places the brilliant flowers make a magnificent display, and are sure to be a highlight of your garden.

The most colorful, dependable flowers for summer and fall are combined here at the edge of a terrace. With plenty of sun and water, petunias and geraniums will give you all the color you could ask for until frost.

Chrysanthemum

This is the classic fall flower for garden display and use in the house. There are many forms and every color but blue. The sharp, bitter-sweet smell of the chrysanthemum is the very essence of autumn. No garden should be without a few of them.

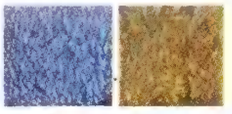
Dahlia

A very popular fall flower which grows in many forms. Some of the large-flowered type, as well as the pompon and dwarf single kinds, bloom in a continuous profusion of gay colors until frost.

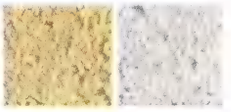
Lilies

Some of the new hybrid lilies will give you bloom until late October. They have the same stately charm as the earlier kinds, in the same general range of colors.

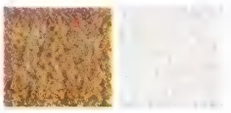
Gentians



Many of the gentians are admirably suited for the border: they need rich moist soil, with lots of peat moss. The native Gentian (G. andrewsi) produces deep blue, closed flower tubes from late August into October.



Fall-blooming Iris



Time was when iris bloomed only in the spring. But now we have many fall-blooming types to choose from. They are still in the experimental stage, and the reblooming periods vary greatly, depending on location, soil, and the care they are given, but they are worth trying, and all the flowers you get are so much "velvet."

In one catalog (Rainbow Hybridizing Gardens, Placerville, Colorado), their autumn-blooming varieties have such beguiling names as Autumn Afternoon, October Shadows, Autumn Snowdrift, Hallowe'en Night, Thanksgiving Firelight, and October Blaze. The requirements for growing fall-blooming iris are the same as for other bearded iris.

Salvia

There is much pleasure and color to be had from some of the late-blooming salvias. These are valuable hardy perennials, with tall-stemmed flower spikes, easily grown, and will tolerate some light shade.

Salvia produces great quantities of flowers in clear blues and deep pure blues, and it makes a fine background in the late border. It is completely hardy, and its only fault is that the stems are fragile and need staking for the best effect. Salvia grows from three to four feet tall.

Fall Blooming Bulbs

These, too, are well worth planting. One of the best is the fall daffodil (Sternbergia lutea). It has crocuslike flowers of a rich golden yellow in October. It is easy to grow if you give it a warm, well-drained location. The flowers make a charming house decoration. Plant the bulbs in bowls, where they will begin to flower in a few weeks.

The autumn crocus (Colchicum autumnale) is an excellent, well-known plant. It bears large crocuslike flowers which appear in September and in October without any foliage. The leaves appear in the spring. They come in lovely colors, including white, violet, rose, purple, and pure lilac. Each bulb produces many flowers.

There are several kinds of crocus that will bloom from September through November. They are long-lived perennials that grow freely in sun or light shade and multiply rapidly. The colors are rich violet, bright blue, white, pale blue, pale mauve, and purple. These are just the same as the spring crocus in leaf and flower. They couldn't be easier to handle. Just plant them, and they will shift for themselves.

Annuals

Don't overlook the annuals as a useful source of late bloom. Such plants as sweet alyssum, nicotiana, marigolds, zinnias, balsam, cosmos, galliardia, and petunias are perfect to fill in at the end of the season.

Vines

The autumn clematis (C. paniculata) is a most appropriate plant for end-of-season show. It is a vigorous fast-growing vine that literally covers itself with fragrant, white, starlike flowers in September and October. These are followed by interesting, twisted, feathery seed pods.

Lengthening the season with flowers such as these has always been a satisfaction to this impatient gardener. I hope it will become the same for you. ■

THREE PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROCHE

Variety is one of the outstanding attributes of chrysanthemums. They come in a host of sizes, shapes, and forms and a marvelous range of colors, from pure white through all the warm tones. They are the essence of fall, easy to grow, and wonderful in the garden or in the house as cut flowers.

Shown here: The Beaufort, against a background of the drawing room in the Philadelphia town house of Pearl S. Buck, Nobel Prize-winning author.

FOOD:

Nobody ever tells you these things

From the kitchen of our food editor come helpful answers to some of the common but often puzzling questions in cookery

By HELEN McCULLY

What is phylo? A fabulous Greek pastry, pronounced fee-low, sometimes spelled fillo, as thin as tissue paper, and the basis for the famous honey dessert called baklava. It is also used to make sumptuous savories such as spanakopeta (spinach squares) and tiropetes (cheese triangles). For cooks who would like to try their hands with phylo, or other Greek dishes, we highly recommend The Art of Greek Cookery, a definitive book on Greek cuisine compiled by the women of St. Paul's Greek Orthodox Church, published by Doubleday. Phylo can be purchased fresh or frozen in stores specializing in Greek foods, as well as in some specialty food shops.

What does "choice" stamped on a piece of meat mean? It indicates the quality of the meat and tells you it has been graded by the United States Department of Agriculture. The standards set up by the U.S.D.A. for beef, veal, and lamb (pork is federally inspected but not graded) are as follows: Prime—the finest quality and most expensive. Prime beef, usually available only in markets specializing in quality beef, constitutes a very small percentage of all marketed beef. Choice—generally available in most retail markets, is considered the best buy on the basis of palatability and cost. Good—less desirable meat, is also considerably less expensive. Standard, Commercial and Utility are rarely, if ever, found in the market place because they are not of a quality for home consumption.

Are Cognac and brandy the same thing? Cognac is brandy, but not all brandy is Cognac. Only brandy made in the Cognac region of France can legally be called Cognac. All brandy is made from wine and all wine-producing countries make brandy. The juices of the grape ferment into wine, which is then distilled. The result, initially, is a tough, fiery, colorless liquid which is aged in old casks (preferably oak) until the master taster determines by his nose, not by taste, when it is ready for bottling. American brandy is made in California by the same time-honored method. Once brandy is bottled, no matter where it's made, it will not age further. Cognac labeled Fine Champagne, which confuses many people, indicates blends from two Cognac districts: Champagne and Petite Champagne. Connoisseurs consider it the finest of all Cognacs.

What is espresso coffee? Technically, it's strong, black coffee brewed in an espresso machine under steam pressure. You are undoubtedly familiar with the espresso shops in this country and in Italy. To make a comparable coffee at home, you must use either a French or an Italian dark roast coffee, very, very finely ground, brewing it in an Italian drip coffee pot called a macchinetta (these are widely available in shops specializing in cooking equipment). If espresso is served with a twist of lemon in a demitasse or in a tall wine glass, warmed, it is known as Roman espresso. American coffee roasters pack espresso coffee in half-pound vacuum tins.

Can you explain why egg whites sometimes refuse to beat up properly? Egg whites will not beat up stiffly if there is even a particle of egg yolk in the whites; if the beater is not absolutely clean and dry; or if there is any moisture or grease in the bowl.

What is the difference between an antipasto and an hors d'oeuvre? Essentially, they are the same thing—an appetizer, or first course. The Italian antipasto means literally "before the pasta," and the French hors d'oeuvre, "outside the work." The Scandinavian smörgasbord, meaning "bread and butter table," is also classed as an appetizer although it is usually more formidable in scope than an antipasto or hors d'oeuvre.

Can food be left in the can once it has been opened? Yes. But it must be securely covered and refrigerated. As the National Canners Association points out, "Modern cans are lined with a thin layer of pure tin that can in no way affect the food."

Can cooked rice be frozen? It certainly can, and most successfully. Place cold, cooked rice in proper containers in the freezer. To serve, thaw; cover with boiling water until hot through—a matter of minutes. Drain thoroughly. Do not cook further.

Are potatoes fattening? Anything is fattening if you eat too much of it. The white potato, one of our best vegetables, which goes with almost anything, has been maligned for years. Actually one medium boiled potato has the same number of calories, 76, as one medium-size apple. Have you ever heard anyone say an apple is fattening?

Will you please explain the difference between endive, escarole, and chicory? French or Belgian endive (known in England as chicory) has a pleasant little "bite" and looks like large attenuated buds, in compact heads, shading from white to creamy yellow; escarole, sometimes confused with chicory, or the curly endive, has long, slender leaves curly at the edges, and a slightly bitter taste; chicory, sometimes called curly endive, a feathery green that grows flat, also has a tang. Imported French or Belgian endive is most frequently served as a salad, which is sad, because it is so delicious cooked. Both escarole and chicory are true salad greens, especially good when combined with less authoritative ones, such as Boston lettuce. All are in season now.

Can recipes be doubled? Certain recipes can be doubled or even tripled successfully but, in general, we would not recommend it unless you are an extremely experienced cook and thoroughly familiar with the recipes you are working with. Recipes calling for precise measurements—cakes come quickly to mind—can rarely be doubled. On the other hand, casseroles usually can if your baking dish will accommodate all the ingredients. It seems to us safer to make a recipe up twice rather than take a chance. However, if you try doubling, remember flavorings and seasonings should be added by taste—not in the quantities called for in the original recipes.

Should beer be served with a "head" on it? It's up to you. If you like a fine, creamy head, tilt the glass and begin pouring the beer down the side, then straighten the glass and pour into the center. Otherwise, pour it straight into the glass.

What exactly is simmer? A spread of 185° to 210° (on the thermometer) is considered simmering temperature. Actually, this is the stage when bubbles form slowly and collapse below the surface. When they reach the surface of the liquid and break, that is boiling temperature. ■

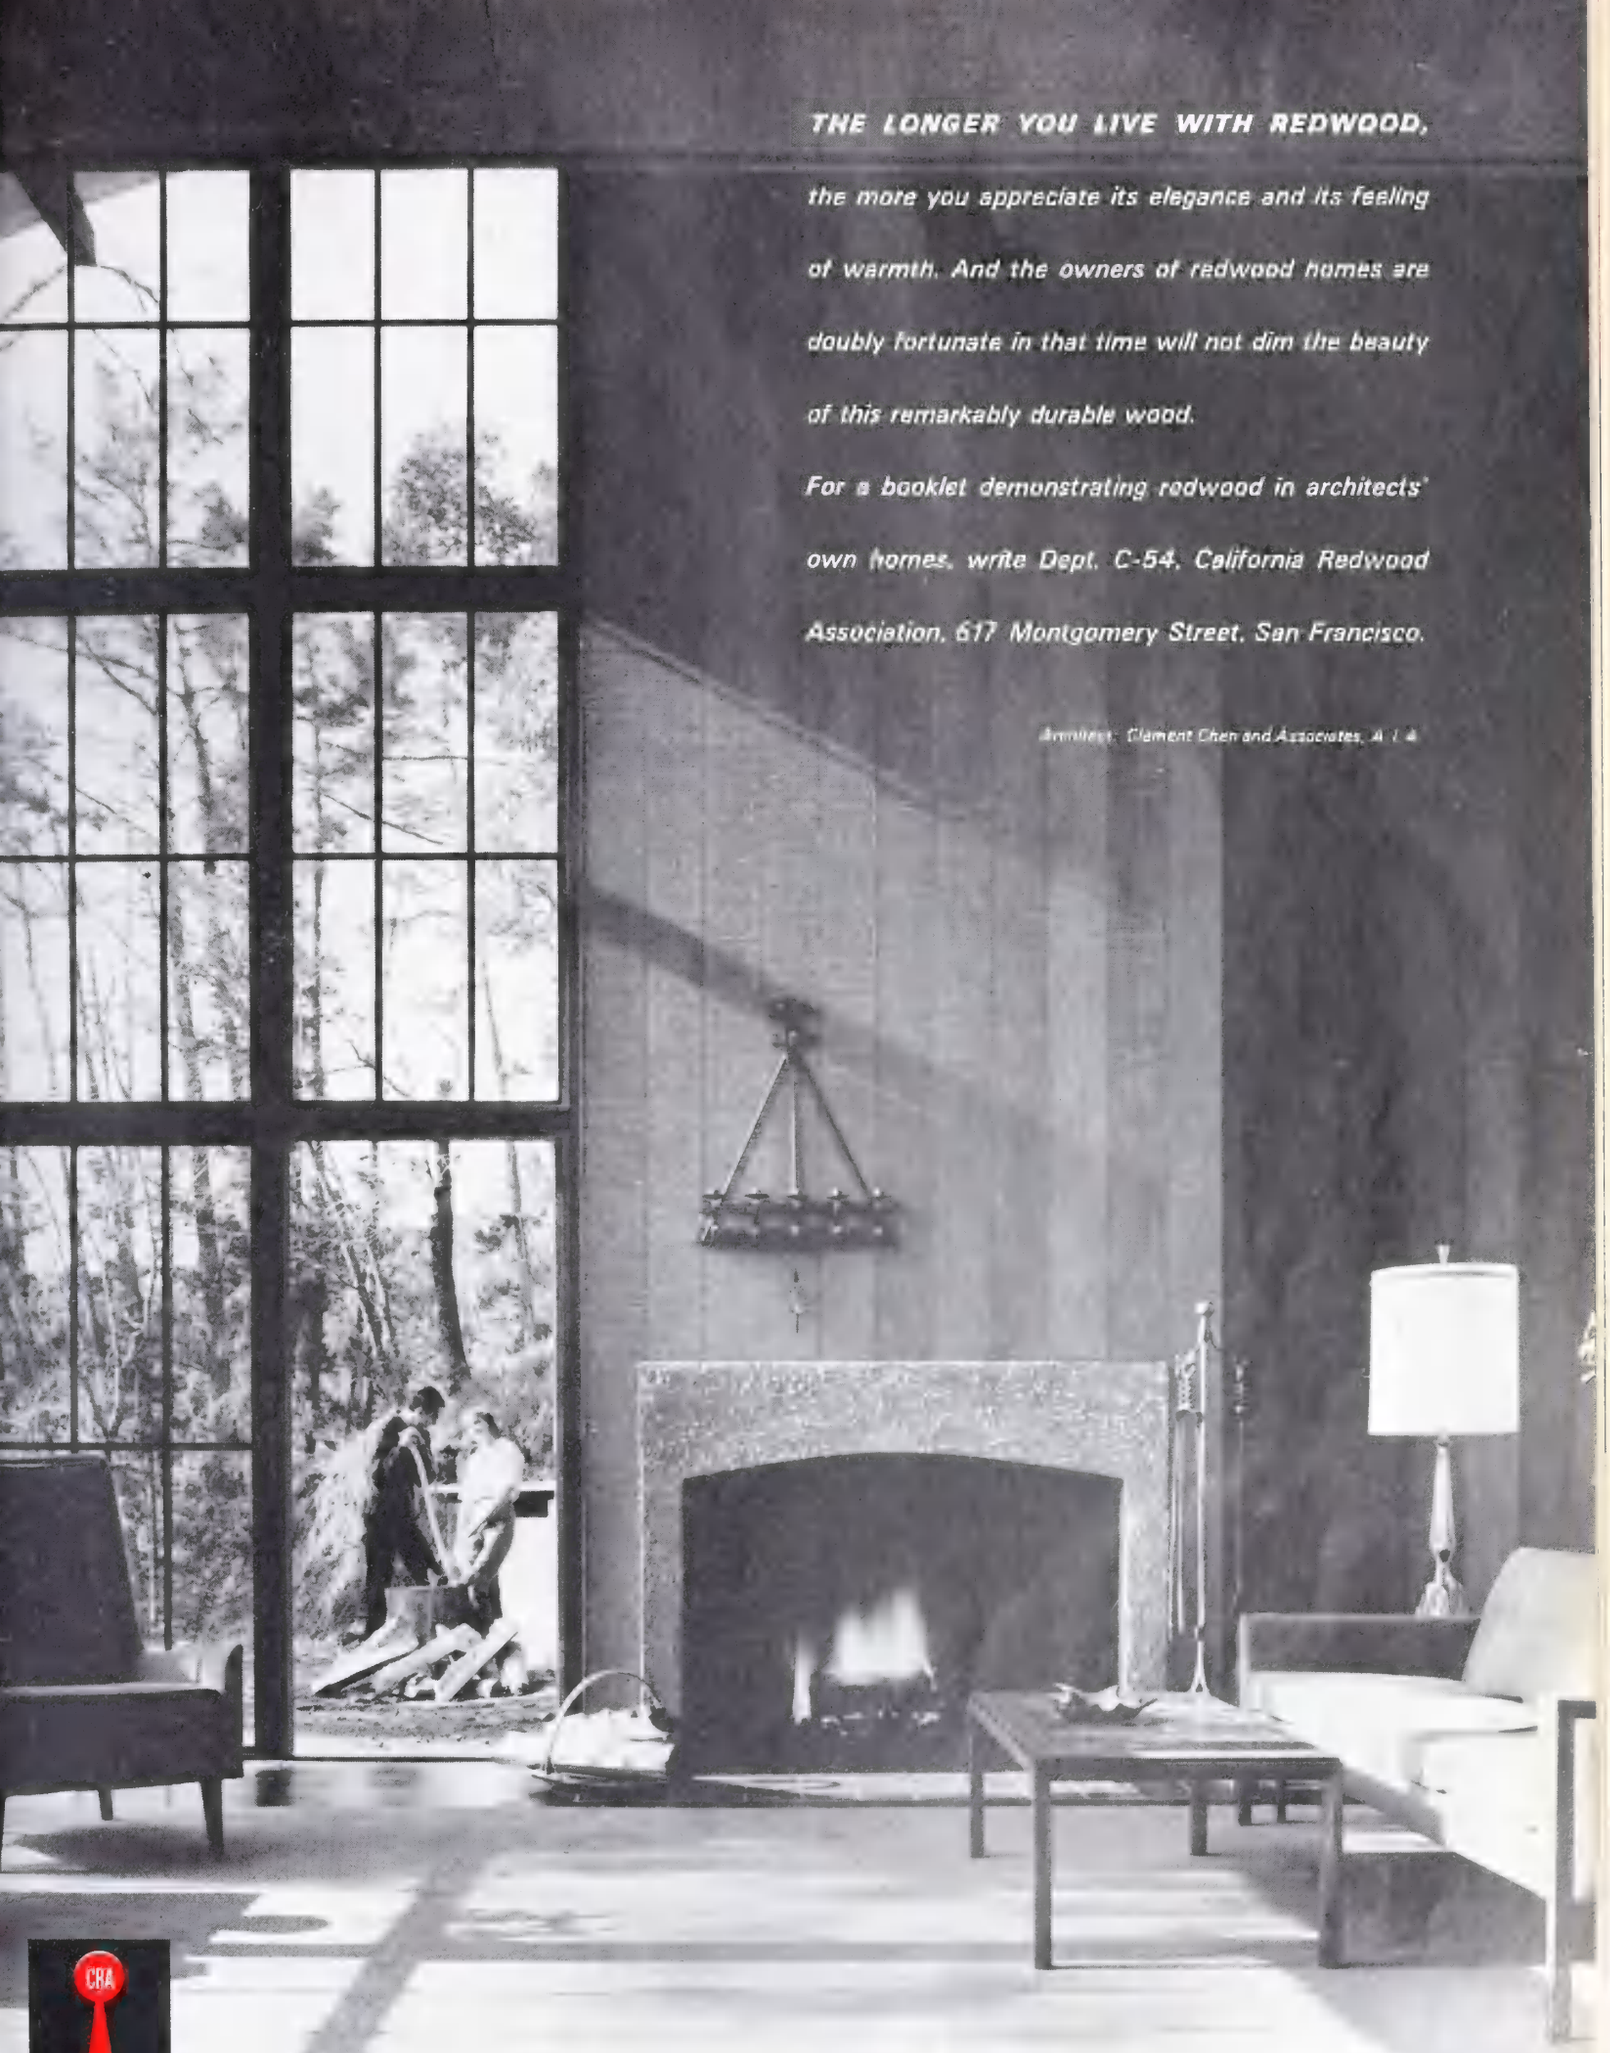
On decorating rooms



In this issue we open the doors to elegant rooms created by outstanding American decorators. To combine the study of room settings with specific decorating advice, we suggest the following books on decorating and design, many just being published

The opulent work done by great talents in the decorating field is the subject of The Finest Rooms (Viking, $18.50), edited by Katharine Tweed with an introduction by Russell Lynes (see page 208). This photographic collection of sumptuous rooms has been vitalized by comments from the decorators about the rooms and their work. Besides the work of William Baldwin and Mrs. Henry Parish II, whom we have included in our "American Decorators: Part I," rooms by Michael Taylor, George Stacey, Marian Hall, and others are featured. Eclectic in style, all the rooms express a delight in elegance, and an interest in quality objects of the past.

Wider in subject matter is Designing and Decorating Interiors by David Van Dommelen, assistant professor of home art at Pennsylvania State University (John Wiley, $9.95), due in mid-October. Only one of the four divisions of this book is devoted to planning and furnishing interiors. Most interesting is the chapter "Creative Interiors" offering suggestions on the personal touch in decorating. Other chapters trace the heritage of modern design from the art nouveau movement through the 1960's, with a close look at such contemporary designers of furniture and fabrics as Florence Knoll and Jack Lenor Larsen.

Two source books on interior design and decorating are scheduled for publication in mid-October. George O'Brien, a former home-news editor of The New York Times, has edited The New York Times Book of Interior Design and Decoration (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $15). He has compiled a handsome portfolio of imaginative rooms by outstanding American designers and decorators (Ward Bennett and Paul Lester Wiener among them).

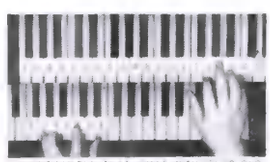
Divided into sections on The Apartment, The House, and The Vacation House (with a glossary following), this book offers practical solutions to a multiple of home-decoration problems, primarily through Mr. O'Brien's excellent choice of photographs and his accompanying text based on the principles of good interior design.

An equally ambitious undertaking is The Doubleday Book of Interior Decorating and Encyclopedia of Styles by Albert Kornfeld (Doubleday, $14.95). While the photographs are often less inspiring than in the preceding book, the Doubleday book offers a wealth of encyclopedic-type information: 100 pages of furniture styles, a 44-page do-it-yourself guide, and coverage of design details such as hardware, mirrors, flooring, slipcovers, etc. This is a valuable book for your reference shelf.

A late October release geared primarily for neophytes renting their first apartment or buying their first home is Elegant Decorating on a Limited Budget by Janet Aston Reist (Macmillan, $3.95). The author's advice is elementary but worth following, having been gained by personal experience during her early days of decorating and housekeeping. Her basic philosophy: "Collect gradually things that will be a permanent part of your home while acknowledging the fact that your tastes will change." The wonders of color and the knowledge of period styles—two subjects imperative for an understanding of good decorating—are each discussed in separate chapters. A chapter on buying antiques at country auctions and in shops, followed by one on refinishing furniture and another on buying new furniture, adds a bonus to the book.

Aimed at the antique-lover who wants to introduce antiques or bygones into a traditional or modern setting is a book originally published in England and due in this country in October. Home Furnishings with Antiques by Frederic Gordon Roe, F.S.A. (Hastings House, $6.95) is conversational in tone and filled with the author's reminiscences of his career as a collector. Not a book for the expert, we suggest it for the homemaker who feels the lure of an antique shop, an old barn, or an unexplored attic in the hopes of finding treasures to incorporate into her home.

For those well along the antiquing trail, a detailed handbook, The Care of Antiques by John Fitzmaurice Mills (Hastings House, $5.95), could prove to be a worth-while investment. The author is careful to distinguish between work that can be done by the amateur and that which should be done by the expert. He does suggest precautionary measures that can be taken to prolong the lives of all antiques against the adverse environmental conditions of salt air, sulphurous atmosphere, and humid climates.



Late fall will herald the arrival of Barbara Plumb and Elizabeth Sverbeyeff's book, The New York Times Guide to Home Furnishings (Atheneum, paperback, $1.95). This comprehensive report acquaints the shopper with the best of the New York City shops, showrooms, and ateliers devoted to home fashions. The wide price range of items, the inclusion of sources for various mediums of art-for-the-home (prints, drawings, primitive art, and folk art), and the listing of many valuable services give this guide a depth reflecting the authors' expert knowledge of the home-furnishings field.——K.F.

Even though your dishwasher washes your dishes hygienically clean, your glasses and silverware can still come out with unsightly spots. This happens because minerals in the clean water itself cause these spots. Every drop of water left to dry on glasses and dishes after they are washed causes a spot. The water evaporates, but the minerals remain and form a spot. Detergents are helpless to prevent such spots, simply because they cannot wipe rinse water off dishes. But JET-DRY does. JET-DRY in the rinse water causes glasses, silverware and dinnerware to shed every drop of water right after they are rinsed. In a split second they are as bone-dry, spot-free and sparkling as if you wiped and polished every piece with a clean, dry towel.

If your dishwasher is equipped to dispense JET-DRY, don't let the reservoir run dry. One washing without JET-DRY can cause spots.

Leading dishwasher manufacturers recognize and recommend JET-DRY as the answer to spotting problems. They actually equip many models to automatically dispense JET-DRY, and place sample bottles of JET-DRY in these dishwashers at the factory.

Until recently you could enjoy spot-free automatic drying only if your dishwasher was equipped to dispense LIQUID JET-DRY. Now any dishwasher can dry dishes spot-free with new SOLID JET-DRY — a handy bar neatly encased in a mesh bag. Clip it to any corner of the upper rack, and watch your spotting problems disappear.

If your dishwasher is not equipped with a LIQUID JET-DRY dispenser use SOLID JET-DRY. Clip on any corner of upper rack.

Recipes can add zest and surprises to your cooking

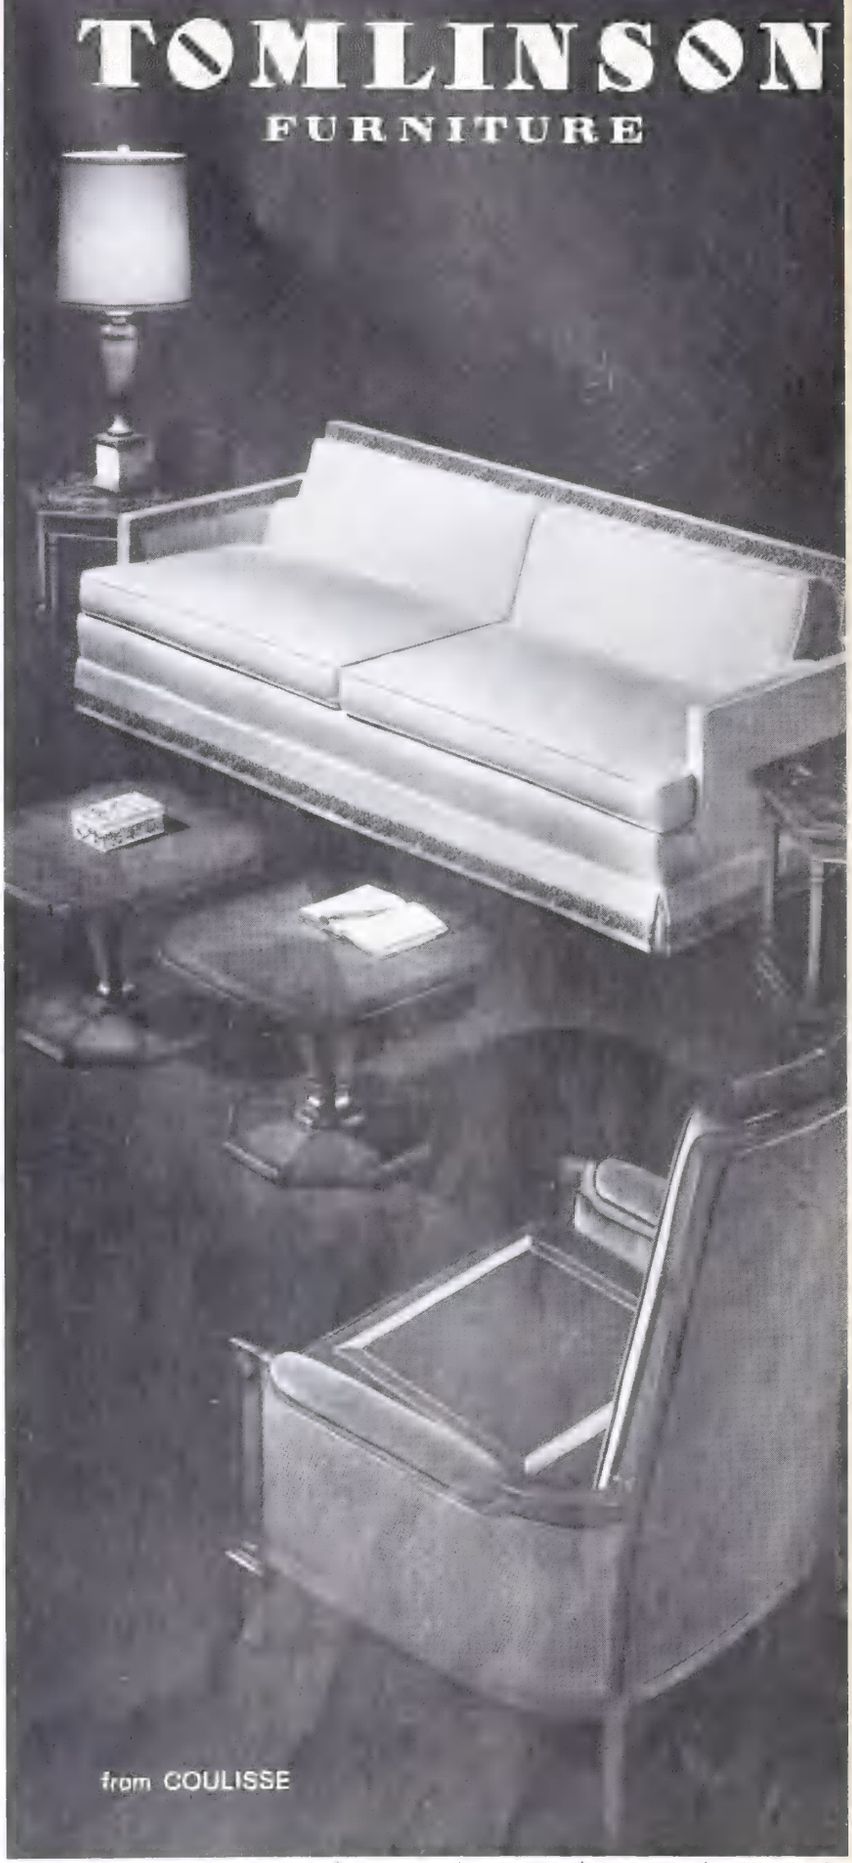
By EPSIE KINARD

The just-published Wonderful, Wonderful Danish Cooking by Ingeborg Dahl Jensen,* a January 1966 choice of the Cook Book Guild, grew out of a wave of enthusiasm for Danish food I had, fanned to a flame by a gourmet tour of Denmark. With the Danes' hospitable Velbekomme ("May this meal become you well") still ringing in my ears, I came back to work, with more than usual interest, on a mountainous mass of Danish recipes. Submitted by Ingeborg Dahl Jensen, a Clinton, Iowa housewife, they were a collection of recipes, handed down by generations of Danish cooks in her family. Reading them, I could almost see her typing away in her warm, folksy kitchen between bastings of an Iowa-bred goose, stuffed Danish-style with California prunes and turning golden-brown in a heat-controlled American oven.

From recipes of food that seemed to come alive—turn crusty brown, sugary crisp, spicily fragrant—in my hands, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL published two articles: "A Dozen Hospitality Breads" (November 1960) and "How to Convert Vegetable Haters" (March 1961). Although they hardly made a dent in Mrs. Jensen's giant recipe-pile, they were the net that caught a publisher for her book (Simon & Schuster).

The cookbook of this Midwestern housewife, born in Kolding, Denmark, is the first to combine traditional Danish dishes with American know-how. As such, it is a valuable addition to the American repertoire of cooking. It will also suggest ways to make richer use of our national resources: of wedding meat and fowl to fruit; of borrowing ideas from the Danish smorrebrod to make more exciting sandwiches; of cooking pastries as tender-flaked and spicy as those the Danes make, especially using, more than we are accustomed to, the luxurious flavor and silken texture of almonds.

Whether chopped, shredded, or ground in a blender, sifted through a fine sieve, wetted down with orange-flower water or Kirsch, sugared for celebrating a birth or a marriage, or hidden in a rice pudding for finder's fun at Christmas, the Danes work a special magic with almonds, and you'll find some of their secrets in these following recipes adapted from Mrs. Jensen's book.



Mandelmakroner
(Almond Macaroons)

2⅔ cups blanched almonds
4 egg whites
Dash salt
2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
2 teaspoons almond extract

Pound the almonds to a paste, or better, grind them, a cup at a time, in an electric blender, at high speed, until very fine. Beat the egg whites with a dash of salt until stiff enough to stand in peaks when you hold up the beater. Gradually beat in the sugar. Mix in the ground almonds and almond extract thoroughly with a spatula. Roll the dough into small balls, about the size of a nickel, and place on a cookie sheet covered with waxed paper about 1½ inches apart to allow for spreading. Or drop by half teaspoons onto the waxed paper. Place in a preheated 325° F. oven and bake until edges are slightly golden—about 20 minutes. Allow to cool briefly, then pull off the waxed paper and cool completely on cake racks. Makes about 4 dozen that will keep well stored in an airtight container.

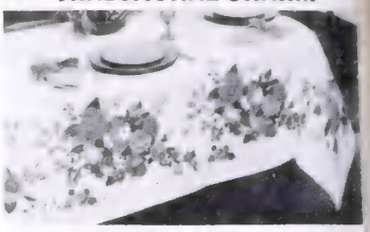
Mandelkage Med Sherry
(Almond Wine Cookies)

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
4 egg yolks, beaten
1 cup (2 sticks) softened butter
¼ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup sugar
½ teaspoon anise extract
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1⅔ cups blanched almonds, ground
½ cup sherry

Combine all ingredients in the order given, working the mixture together very thoroughly with your hands. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased, lightly floured cookie sheets, an inch or so apart to leave space for spreading. Bake in a preheated 400° F. oven for 15 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets immediately and cool on cake racks. Makes about 3 dozen.



Kanelstjerner
(Cinnamon Stars)

2⅔ cups shelled unblanched almonds, finely ground
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon cinnamon
2 cups sugar
6 egg whites
Grated rind 1 lemon

Grind shelled, unblanched almonds very fine through a food grinder or blend in an electric blender.

Mix flour, cinnamon, and sugar together; beat egg whites until stiff enough to stand in peaks when you hold up the beater. Sprinkle the sugar mixture over the beaten whites, a few tablespoons at a time, and beat in very thoroughly. Stir in the lemon rind. Set aside about 1 cup of this batter in a sauce dish. Add almonds to remainder of batter, mixing them in well. Drop on greased cookie sheets by teaspoonfuls, leaving space for spreading, in tiny mounds and dot each mound with a pinch of the batter from the sauce dish. Bake in a preheated 300° F. oven until light brown. When baked, lift off the cookie sheets onto racks to cool. Store in tightly covered containers. Makes 7½ dozen. ■

—see how phonics can help him

Now your child can learn to read better in just a few weeks—with records that teach him by the phonics method at home. For complete information about The Sound Way to Easy Reading—and our money back guarantee—mail coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. H. M. Kilpatrick of Reno, Nevada writes: "After six weeks of work with The Sound Way to Easy Reading, my son improved not only in reading and spelling but in all of his lessons because he could read with understanding. He is in fourth grade but could only read at the second grade level. In just six weeks he advanced the two years."

Mrs. Kilpatrick is only one of over 50,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way to Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And over 3,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

Don't wait for your poor reader to reach high school before coming to his aid. By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of success. Send for full information. No salesman will call. Mail this coupon now!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARENTS DELIGHTED

Better marks—"Bobby has used the records for only three weeks, yet his reading and spelling grades have gone from Ds to C-plus and B. Now his teacher has borrowed the course to help other children." Mrs. W. H. Gregory, Calif.

Advanced two grades—"In ten weeks my son advanced from Second Grade level in reading to the Fourth Grade level. His spelling improved to the high Fourth Grade level. We feel fortunate in learning of The Sound Way To Easy Reading." Mrs. B. J. Smith, Concord, Calif.

Four sons—"In twelve weeks, two of our boys brought up their reading grades from D to B. And our other two came up from D to C. I'll never get more for my money than I already have with your course." Mr. John Gehde, Jr., Wisconsin

TEACHERS ENTHUSIASTIC

Recommends to parents—"Your course has been excellent in standardizing the teaching of phonics in our entire school system. I recommend it to parents as a home tutoring course for poor readers." R. B. Miller, Supervisor, Monterey, Va.

A pleasure to hear my class read—"I am just delighted. In the last twelve weeks 22 of my 29 fourth grade pupils brought up their scores in silent reading. Their oral reading is so improved it's a pleasure to hear them now." Mary L. Henderson, Crowley, La.

NOW YOU CAN HANDCRAFT YOUR OWN COLORFUL LAMPS AND LANTERNS WITH STAINED CASTOGLAS

Cast Unusual Ornaments and Mobiles, Make Beautiful Wall Hangings, Roundels, Figurines and Scores of Other Distinctive Gift Items and Home Accessories and Handsomely Decorate Any Glassware With Castolite Jewels and Faceted Cathedral Glass.

For just a few cents and hours of creative fun you can transform inexpensive jars or bottles into objects of fine art. A plain glass cylinder or brandy snifter becomes a colorful lantern or glowing candlelight—one of a kind. You can apply Stained Castoglas Polymer with a brush or spatula to any glass, ceramic, metal or wood surface. Or you can sculpture it or cast brilliantly colorful ornaments in special molds. There's no end to the possibilities and the many ways this fascinating medium can be used to make decorative accessories for your own home, for gifts, for raising funds, for earning extra money . . . and have a lot of fun doing it.

Fifty New Arts and Crafts Kits are now ready for you. They include all supplies and complete illustrated directions for making any of the items shown on this page and in our catalogs and project manuals. You can also make your own designs, mix colors to match your decor and produce handcrafted accessories that are distinctly your own—not obtainable anywhere at any price. The whole family can participate in these casting, laminating and molding activities, making jewelry and jewelry boxes, unusual key tags, purse pulls and paperweights, wall plaques, mobiles, ornaments and many other lovely articles. Cast beautiful tiles with embedments of real flowers, grasses, butterflies or form abstract flowers with crystal clear or colored Castolite that rival the beauty of Venetian glass.

If you can paint with oil colors you can paint and sculpture with brilliantly translucent, textured Castolite Polymer on indirectly-lighted glass like the mural of a city shown in the picture. Pour a finish like solid plate glass over a child's original drawing or a wood-mounted lithograph of Durer's Praying Hands to embellish them and to protect and preserve them forever. All this you can do in your own kitchen or home workshop. Neither heat nor equipment is required and simple household utensils are all the tools you need.

How much does all this cost? For a material cost of 45c you can decorate a plain glass jar with Stained Castoglas Polymer and faceted Cathedral glass and produce a lovely candle holder that sells for $3.95 in a gift shop. The colorful lanterns with chunks of brilliant Castoglas and Castolite jewels are $27.50 to $50.00—the complete do-it-yourself kits cost only $9.95. The handsome chess or checkerboard made of Pearl and Ebony Castolite retails at $35.00 . . . but the kit costs only $7.50 and includes everything needed to produce an exact duplicate. And please note this: when Castolite products are bought in bulk quantity, the cost is substantially reduced—a very important factor if you are a commercial fabricator or involved in fund-raising activities.

Where do you begin? With a set of Castolite Project Manuals which explain the simple process in easy to follow step-by-step directions. More than 200 photographs, many of them in full color and supplemented with dozens of how-to-do-it sketches, will help you achieve professional results even if you have never worked with Castolite before. Please do this — while it is fresh in your mind — mail bin of California, Room H10, 1016 N.

Hywood Way Burbank, California

Little Kim was abandoned by her mother in an alley of Seoul, Korea. She was found curled up behind a box, shivering, hungry and frightened.

Her G.I. father probably doesn't even know she exists. And since Kim is a mixed-blood child, no relative will ever claim her.

Only your love can help give little Kim, and children just as needy, the privileges you would wish for your own child.

Through Christian Children's Fund you can sponsor one of these youngsters. We use the word sponsor to symbolize the bond of love that exists between you and the child.

The cost? Only $10 a month. Your love is demonstrated in a practical way because your money helps with nourishing meals . . . medical care . . . warm clothing . . . education . . . understanding housemothers . . .

And in return you will receive your child's personal history, photograph, plus a description of the orphanage where your child lives. You can write and send packages. Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(If you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear—you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.

Will you help? Requests come from orphanages every day. And they are urgent. Children wrapping rags on their feet, school books years out of date, milk supplies exhausted, babies abandoned by unwed mothers.

Since 1938 thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

Called "the finest photographs ever taken of John F. Kennedy."

They are the work of the distinguished American photographer Leigh Wiener* The place: Mr. Kennedy's private plane. The time: a period of crisis in the President's life. The hour was late. Everyone was asleep, except two men, Mr. Kennedy and the photographer. Hundreds have requested these pictures. Now, for the first time, a limited number of these memorable portraits are being made available. They are custom-printed from the original negatives on the finest double weight photographic paper. Each print, measuring 11x14", is hand-mounted, suitable for home or office. Price: $8.50 per print (indicate A or B), or $15.00 for the pair. Profits go to the John F. Kennedy Library. Send check or money order to: WESTMOUNT, 7422 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles 46, California.

If you think a bricklayer built it, we're flattered. Actually, it's Luran Vinyl Antique Brick. All the warmth and charm of weathered brick sealed deep under solid vinyl—a wear surface so tough, this floor is guaranteed for life!* And thanks to Ruberoid's unique Vinylweld, Luran's 6 foot widths can be welded wall-to-wall with no open seams to trap dirt and water. A final touch: scientific dimensional embossing masks most accidental indentations. Put Antique Brick in any room in your home, including the basement. Also Antique White and Antique Beige. Other Authentic Reproductions in Luran: Unglazed Morocco Tile, English Oak Plank, Vermont Flagstone.

STOP FLOOR-WAXING DRUDGERY WITH NEW MIRACLE LAST-N-LAST

Floors Gleam with New Beauty—Wipe Sparkling Clean with A Damp Cloth—Perfect for All Wood-Panelling, Doors, Lawn Furniture

Sounds unbelievable — but we guarantee this: Apply Last-N-Last to any floor in your home. It will keep them shiny bright for 3 to 5 years—or more. Or we will refund every penny you spent for it.

This new wonder-product (a polyurethane coating) is easier to apply than wax. Spreads on with brush, spray, roller or lamb's wool —resists marring, scratches, stains, etc. After one application a warehouse floor had its original gloss with no wear, scuff marks or stains after a full year of constant busy traffic under the steel wheels of fork-lift trucks!

Apply it once—and forget floor treatment for years. What's more, it improves floor appearance, brings out the full beauty of wood and makes it tougher. Also treats and improves furniture. Perfect for boats, ideal coating to keep concrete floors smooth and dust-free.

Can not mar, stain, chip, crack or peel. Truly a miracle coating that protects and brings out beauty in floors, furniture, etc.

$12.95 per gallon (1 gallon should be enough for all the floors in an average home).

WESTWARD HO! (MR)

As young as the bold frontier, as exciting as the western sunset, as comfortable as the warm fire on a cool desert night . . . . . that's WESTWARD HO! by Maxwell Royal. This latest grouping was selected from Maxwell Royal's Young America collection and accessorized by famed interior designer Reginald Styers, A. I. D. with a careful blend of rustic tradition and contemporary sophistication . . . . . another example of Maxwell Royal's color-coordinated approach to total decor for your home.

You don't have to be young in years to appreciate the youthful spirit expressed in this collection. But once you've lived with WESTWARD HO! you'll know what it means to own furniture that is styled to stay forever young!

Send 25¢ for a complete set of Maxwell Royal Total Decor folders. In full color, they depict designer inspired rooms from other times, other places adapted for today's living by Maxwell Royal craftsmen.

Imagine, all the furniture in this Young America setting, tables included, for under $1450.00 and it's available in numerous other designer coordinated colors. At any authorized Maxwell Royal Dealer. Write Department HB105 for his name.
